Farm and Household.

Winter Feeding for Cows.—The yield of milk and butter in the summer depends greatly upon the winter feeding. All the feed given to cows is not consumed without return. The manure gives a good dividend upon the outlay, and the animals are storing up strength and energy to be made available afterward. The winter is the season for liberal and judicious feeding, and not for "short comings," which is but another term for half starvation.

To Make Excellent Bacon.—Pigs must not be extra fat to make the best of bacon, and the spare-rib lean must be left on the ribs, the bone must be cut out, and the sides cut square and smooth; the trimmings can be made into sausage or go with the fat into lard. The first six months is the most growing age for a pig, and at this age they are suitable for the purpose. After that they begin to get too thick and fat. Bacon may be cured the same as hams and shoulders, only it does not require so long salting. Usually the salt is rubbed on the pieces, and they are piled up for a few days to let it strike through. Three rubbings are enough. It should never be allowed to freeze during the curing, and if frozen it must be thawed out by soaking in water. Bacon will take in salt enough, unless the sides are very thick, in three weeks, when it is ready to be smoked. After smoking it may be hung in a dry, cool place or packed in dry salt or in tight boxes. It is always ready for use, and a rasher of good bacon is a treat for breakfast or any meal. As a side dish it has no superior. It may be broiled in dainty bits or fried in more generous slices. It is excellent to flavor chickens or stews, and for a staple meat is far preferable to pork.

To Exterminate Snails.—Sprinkle salt where they are in the habit of coming.

Crullers.—Two coffee cups of sugar, one coffee cup of milk, four eggs, six tablespoonfuls of lard, two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, one teaspoonful of soda, flour to make stiff to roll; fry in boiling lard; spice to suit the taste.

Baked Lemon Pudding.—Mix the following ingredients together in the order in which they are placed: Moist sugar, one-quarter pound; bread crumbs, six ounces; eggs, well beaten, three; lemon peel grated and juice, two; bake one and a half hours in a moderate oven.

Coffee cake.—One cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one cup of molasses, one cup of cold coffee, four or five cups of flour, one pound of raisins (only one and a half cups are necessary. Spice to taste.

A Fine Bread Pudding.—Take 3 pints of milk, boil and sweeten it with half a pound of sugar; add a small nutmeg, grated, and half a pound of butter while it is warm.—Pour it boiling hot over twelve ounces of grated bread crumbs, and cover it up for a time. Beat up ten eggs and mix all together, and then bake in a dish or pie plates lined with pastry.

Irish Potato Pudding.—Take half a pound of potatoes after they are boiled and mashed very fine, half a pound of butter, half a pound of sugar and six eggs. Cream the butter mix it well with the other things, and beat until the batter is very light. Flavor with a wine glassful of wine and a little grated nutmeg, or, if you prefer, use lemon or orange peel. Bake in pie plates previously lined with puff paste.

Never-Failing Sponge Cake.—One pound of sugar, twelve eggs, nine ounces of flour, the rind and juice of one lemon. Beat the yelks and sugar together, after first beating the yelks light. The lemon juice may be added to make them easier to beat. Have the whites beaten till they stand alone, then add them to the yelks and sugar, and lastly cream in the flour. At the same time be sure to cease beating, for to continue after the flour is put in is a certain way to spoil the cake.—Sponge-cake bakes more quickly than any other variety.

To Cook Woodcock.—Pluck, draw and wipe the birds clean, but do not wash them. Skin the heads and necks; press the legs close to the body, then twist the head of the bird around, using the long bill as a skewer to pin the body, Tie a thin piece of bacon around each bird, and roast for fifteen or twenty minutes before a hot fire; baste frequently with melted butter; season to taste and serve on buttered toast. They may be baked in the oven, but the flavor will not be so good, and particular care must be taken not to let them dry or get overdone. Place the toast beneath the birds in the pan for five minutes before serving; in roasting, lay it in the pan which catches the drippings.

Lemon Cream.—Five ounces of loaf sugar, two pints of boiling water, the rind of one lemon and the juice of three and the yelks of eight eggs. Make a quart of lemonade in the following manner: Dissolve the sugar in the boiling water, having previously, with part of the sugar, rubbed off the lemon rind, and add the strained juice. Strain the lemonade into a saucepan and add the yelks of the eggs, which should be well beaten. Stir this one way over the fire until the mixture thickens, but do not allow it to boil; serve in custard glasses or on a glass dish. After the boiling water is poured on the sugar and lemon it should stand covered for about half an hour before the eggs are added to it, that the flavor of the rind may be extracted.

In making vinegar from cider, if the cider is weak strengthen with molasses; if too strong, reduce with rain-water; then set the barrels in a warm place, leave the bungs out, and cover the hole with gauze to keep out flies, und let it alone. To hasten the change, a mother of vin[illegible]r from some old vinegar may be [illegible] barrel, or even a few [illegible]gar in addition [illegible]erably. When the vine[illegible]de, it should be carefully draw[illegible] off from the dregs, in order to have it clear and fit for use.

OUTWARD BOUND.

My trusty, well-beloved friend,
Late parted, not to meet again;
Our cheery, farewell words were said,
While tears stood eloquent, unshed,
Within our meeting eyes;
I kept my secret to the end,
Nor breathed a whisper of the pain
I bear with me to other skies.

It is not meet that I should stay
To trouble thine assured content
With anxious thoughts of how I fare,
Since softer footsteps every where
Move close beside thine own;
Nor vex thee with mine altered way,
Since sweeter, fonder love hath lent
Thy life's glad song a deeper tone.

Nay, if I kept mine olden place,
And lived mine olden life with thee,
This faithful heart, that many years
Hath shared alike thy smiles and tears,
Might learn a fiercer beat,
Since thou hast won the peerless face
Whose beauty was denied to me,
Yet hath my love, long given, complete.

I loved her, friend, as few men love!
Lo! I will speak the truth to-night,
Thou art not here to feel my pain,
Thou canst not see the blinding rain
Of my unwonted tears:
Those silent witnesses that prove
How love doth master manhood quite,
In youth-time, and in sober years.

I loved her from the very first,
On that fresh English April day,
When all the hedgerows were ablow,
The copses white with wind-flowers' snow,
The gay lambs on the lea,
The May-thorn buds about to burst,
And she came down the grassy way:
That vision changed the world for me.

As then I saw, I see her now,
Youth's light upon her perfect face,
I see her smile, untouched by care,
The sunbeams shining on her hair,
The sweetness of her eye,
The pureness of her thoughtful brow;
The picture is so full of grace,
I shall not lose it till I die.

It will not wrong thee, oh, my friend,
If by the vessel's side at night
That dim, soft vision doth arise
Of smiling lips and tender eyes
That never could be mine;
I kept my secret to the end,
I hid my sorrow out of sight,
And now my one beloved is thine.

Thine is she, beautiful and true,
As any creature God hath made,
The deep red rose of her pure heart
She freely gave thee for thy part,
I had her friendship sweet;
Take thou the rose, it is thy due,
Take thou the sunshine, I the shade,
Fate giveth us what things are meet.

I shall not see the April bloom
In bonny English lanes again;
I shall not see my native land,
Nor clasp again thy faithful hand,
My friend of long ago!
Yet shall I live in thy sweet home,
While hearts that know not my heart's pain;
Love me in time of sun and snow.

And in the quiet tender talks
That pass between thy wife and thee,
In sacred, sweet, domestic hours,
Among the singing-birds and flowers,
And all love's homely store,
Dear lips will speak of one who walks
The borders of a farther sea,
And is alone for evermore.

I am content—content, my friend,
To lose the sunshine from my way,
So that its brightness glad thy lot,
And hers—God knows I murmur not:
I take mine altered life,
Which stretches onward to the end,
In solemn shade of twilight gray,
Till Death cries peace to silent strife!

Really Useful Poetry at Last.

The following is the first verse of a sonnet recently composed by a highly respectable but intensely practical young man on the Board of Trade who is engaged to marry one of the most fascinating twenty-year-old butterflies. The h. r. but i. p. young man does not propose to load himself up for life with a mere fashion-plate, however, and at the suggestion of his mother resolved to discover whether or not his girl would be of any account in case he suddenly found himself several thousand bushels short on a kiting market. So he indited this:

Can my darling wash the dishes?
Can she scrub the kitchen floor?
Will she keep on mending stockings
When she hears the baby roar?
Does her nose detect bad butter,
With which grocery stores abound?
Tell me, darling, do your shoe-strings
Make a half-hitch or go round?

If the answer is satisfactory society-circles will soon be electrified by the announcement of the approaching nuptials.—Chicago Tribune.

An Astonished Parson.

Before accepting an invitation, it is as well to be sure it is given in good faith. After an afternoon service held many years ago in a certain village in Scotland, the preacher, a stranger, who had officiated, accompanied one of the elders of the congregation home, and was introduced to his wife. The good man having asked the clergyman to stay to dinner, the latter, after a little pressing, consented. The good lady hurried off to prepare for the unexpected guest, and seeing, as she thought, her husband washing, as was the custom, in those days, at the kitchen sink, she seized the family Bible, and approaching stealthily from behind, brought down the ponderous tome upon his bald pate, exclaiming: "Tak' ye that for bringing hungry preachers here to denner every time they come to the parish!" As soon as the assaulted one could get the suds out of his eyes, he looked about him, and after thinking the matter out, concluded that the old lady had made a slight mistake. She, too, came to the same conclusion when, upon returning to the parlor, she beheld her husband patiently waiting for his reverend friend!

☞ "My dear," said an affectionate wife, "what shall we have for dinner, to-day?"

"One of your smiles," replied the husband; "I can dine on that every day."

"But I can't," replied the wife.

"Then take this," and he gave her a kiss, and went to his business.

He returned to his dinner.

"This is an excellent steak," said he; "what did you pay for it?"

"Why, what you gave me this morning, to be sure," replied his wife.

"The deuce you did!" exclaimed he; "then you shall have money the next time you go to market."

2 ☞ A gentleman traveling through Volusia county, Florida, recently, saw the following on a sign-board on the outside of a store:

"To trust is to bust,
To bust is hell;
No trust, no bust,
No bust, no hell."

AN article is going the rounds treating on the best method of putting away potatoes. A family of about eight, including three boys and three girls, can put away potatoes about as successfully as is necessary.

☞ There is something passing strange about human nature. If a man had to support his family by playing billiards at $2 a day, he'd complain he had to work awful hard for a living.

The Sun for 1880.

THE SUN will deal with the events of the year 1880 in its own fashion, now pretty well understood by everybody. From January 1 until December 31 it will be conducted as a newspaper written in the English language and printed for the whole people.

As a newspaper, The Sun believes in getting all the news of the world promptly, and presenting it in the most intelligible shape—the shape that will enable its readers to keep well abreast with the age with the least unproductive expenditure of time. The greatest interest to the greatest number—that is the law controlling its daily make-up. It now has a circulation very much larger than that of any other American newspaper, and enjoys an income which it is at all times prepared to spend liberally for the benefit of its readers. People of all conditions of life and all ways of thinking buy and read The Sun; and they all derive satisfaction of some sort from its columns, for they keep on buying and reading it.

In its comments on men and affairs, The Sun believes that the only guide of policy should be common sense, inspired by genuine American principles and backed by honesty of purpose. For this reason it is, and will continue to be, absolutely independent of party, class, clique, organization, or interest. It is for all, but of none. It will continue to praise what is good and reprobate what is evil, taking care that its language is to the point and plain, beyond the possibility of being misunderstood. It is uninfluenced by motives that do not appear on the surface; it has no opinions to sell, save those which may be had by any purchaser with two cents. It hates injustice and rascality even more than it hates unnecessary words. It abhors frauds, pities fools, and deplores nincompoops of every species. It will continue throughout the year 1880 to chastise the first class, instruct the second, and discountenance the third. All honest men, with honest convictions, whether sound or mistaken, are its friends. And the Sun makes no bones of telling the truth to its friends and about its friends whenever occasion arises for plain speaking.

These are the principles upon which The Sun will be conducted during the year to come.

The year 1880 will be one in which no patriotic American can afford to close his eyes to public affairs. It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of the political events which it has in store, or the necessity of resolute vigilance on the part of every citizen who desires to preserve the Government that the founders gave us. The debates and acts of Congress, the utterances of the press, the exciting contests of the Republican and Democratic parties, now nearly equal in strength throughout the country, the varying drift of public sentiment, will all bear directly and effectively upon the twenty-fourth Presidential election, to be held in November. Four years ago next November, the will of the nation, as expressed at the polls, was thwarted by an abominable conspiracy, the promoters and beneficiaries of which still hold the offices they stole. Will the crime of 1876 be repeated in 1880? The past decade of years opened with a corrupt, extravagant, and insolent Administration intrenched at Washington. The Sun will do something toward dislodging the gang and breaking its power. The same men are now intriguing to restore their leader and themselves to places from which they were driven by the indignation of the people. Will they succeed? The coming year will bring the answer to these momentous questions. The Sun will be on hand to chronicle the facts as they are developed, and to exhibit them clearly and fearlessly in their relations to expediency and right.

Thus, with a habit of philosophical good humor in looking at the minor affairs of life, and in great things a steadfast purpose to maintain the rights of the people and the principles of the Constitution against all aggressors, The Sun is prepared to write a truthful, instructive, and entertaining history of 1880.

Our rates of subscription remain unchanged. For the Daily Sun, a four-page sheet of twenty-eight columns, the price by mail, post paid, is 55 cents a month, or $6.50 a year; or, including the Sunday paper, an eight-page sheet of fifty-six columns, the price is 65 cents a month, or $7.70 a year, postage paid.

A Talk With Fruit Growers.

I HAVE now growing, on my farm, a fine seedling Peach Nursery, (from the seed o the Smock,) of over 200,000 trees.

Being from Smock seed, and growing on land that never grew trees before, they must prove especially hardy and prolific.

I shall bud 50,000 (commencing June 15th) for this Fall's planting; such trees will run from 2 to 4 feet in height.

I shall bud the balance in August, for planting the following fall. As must all planters have preference for special varieties, I propose to take orders, before the budding is done, customers furnishing their own buds if they prefer; so that all may be accommodated. Do not fail to give this matter proper consideration, and send in your orders early. By so doing you can secure just the varieties you want; but i delayed till you are ready to plant, nurserymen may not have the kinds you prefer. I will give instructions how to forward buds, upon inquiry.

I HAVE A GENERAL ASSORTMENT OF ALL KINDS OF NURSERY STOCK.

Twenty years' experience as an extensive Fruit Grower and Nurseryman, certainly entitles me to a reasonable share of patronage on this peninsula.

THE NEW VICTOR.

SIMPLICITY SIMPLIFIED!

Improvements September, 1878.

Notwithstanding the VICTOR has long been the peer of any Sewing Machine in the market—a fact supported by a host of volunteer witnesses—we now confidently claim for it greater simplicity, a wonderful reduction of friction and a rare combination of desirable qualities. Has lattle is a beautiful specimen of mechanism, and takes rank with the highest achievements of inventive genius. Note.—We do not lease or consign Machines, therefore have no old ones to patch up and re-varnish for our customers.

We Sell New Machines Every Time.

Send for Illustrated Circular and prices. Liberal terms to the trade. [illegible] any [illegible] you [illegible] the [illegible]
