L. A. PENNINGTON,
Officer of Registration.

ACCORDING to Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, the difference between whisky and beer is this: When a man goes home full of whisky he beats his wife; but when he gets full of beer, he goes home stupid and his wife beats him. That makes all the difference in the world to both of them.

A sentimental fellow at Wrightstown, Minn., wrote to a girl that he would hang himself if she did not marry him. As he was a stranger, she took his queer missive as an insulting joke, and replied angrily that he would please her by choosing the tree which grew near the window of her room. When she looked out next morning there hung his lifeless body.

WHETHER Buffalo Bill ever had any perilous adventures on the plains or not, he certainly has been endangered of late as a mock hero of the theaters. Soon after being murderously assailed with a tomahawk in Chicago by one of the Indians who figure in his play, he was fired upon three times on Council Bluffs by a lunatic.

THE help already given to the Michigan sufferers, together with the promise of more, has saved many a farm to its owner. Immediately after the fire, speculators hurried into the burned-over district with cash, expecting to be able to buy the land at trifling prices; but the farmers, encouraged by the prompt assistance, have declined to sell.

[St. Louis Republican.]

It is very rare that the Republican consents to editorially forward the interests of advertisers of what are known as patented medicines, as it does not frequently fall out that we can have positive knowledge of their merits. However, we take pleasure in saying of St. Jacobs Oil from individual experiment, that it is a most excellent remedial agent, and as such we can heartily recommend it.

BUILDING AND BEING

AN EXTRACT FROM GERALDINE.

The king would build, so a legend says
The finest of all fine palaces.

He sent for St. Thomas, a builder rare,
And bade him to rear them a wonder fair.

The king's great treasure was placed at hand
And with it the sovereign's one command:

"Build well, O builder, so good and great!
And add to the glory of my estate.

"Build well, nor spare of my wealth to show
A prouder palace than mortals know."

The king took leave of his kingdom then,
And wandered far from the haunts of men.

St. Thomas the king's great treasure spent
In worthier way than his master meant.

He clad the naked, the hungry fed,
The oil of gladness around him shed.

He blessed them all with the ample store,
As never a king's wealth blessed before.

The king came back from his journey long,
But found no grace in the happy throng

That greeted him now on his slow return,
To teach him the lesson he ought to learn.

The king came back to his well-spent gold;
But no new palace could he behold.

In terrible anger he swore, and said
That the builder's folly should cost his head.

St. Thomas in dungeon dark was cast,
Till the time for his punishment dire were passed.

Then it chanced, or the good God willed it so,
That the king's own brother in death lay low.

When four days dead, as the legend reads,
He rose to humanity's life and needs.

From sleep of the dust he strangely woke,
And thus to his brother, the king, he spoke:

"I have been to Paradise, O my king!
And have heard the heavenly angels sing.

"And there I saw, by the gates of gold,
A palace finer than tongue has told;

"Its walls and towers were lifted high
In beautiful grace to the bending sky;

"Its glories, there, in that radiant place,
Shone forth like a smile from the dear Lord's face.

"An angel said it was builded there
By the good St. Thomas with love and care,

"For our fellow-men, and that it should be Thy palace of peace through eternity."

The king this vision pondered well,
Till he took St. Thomas from dungeon cell,

And said, "O builder! he most is wise
Who buildeth ever for Paradise!"

GENERAL G. W. GORDON, the ex-Confederate, recently made an address in memory of Garfield before the Circuit Court at Memphis, in which he said: "I had rather possess the emotion, the culture, the oratory and the genius of Garfield than all the blood-stained laurels that ever Cesar tore from the livid brows of fallen kings, or all the jewels that ever Hannibal stripped from the frozen fingers of his slaughtered knights. The wisdom, moderation and reform foreshadowed in his brief administration were daily widening his influence and popularity, especially with the people of the South, and we hoped that he was hastening the day when we could all feel and say we have but one sky, one flag, one Union, one country, and one President."

AN exhibition is in progress in London showing the career of a straw hat, from the field to the fashionable store. The workers are all from Luton Beds, a town of 25,000 people, of whom it is computed that 24,000 are in some way or other connected with the straw trade. The business at Luton dates from 1665, when a colony of straw plaiters, who had emigrated from Lorraine to Scotland, settled at Luton in view of the superior straw raised in the district. A particular sort of knife used in splitting straw was invented by one of the French prisoners detained in England early in the century.

PROF. DAWSON, of the Dominion geological survey, reports that the forests of Columbia are of vast importance. Many first-class mills have been established, and the total annual product is about 200,000,000. Dawson estimates that that timber covers 110,000,000 acres, or two-thirds of the whole province. The Douglas fir or Oregon pine is the most valuable commercial tree. It frequently exceeds eight feet in diameter, and rises to a height of from 200 to 300 feet, forming great and dark forests.

AMONG the marvels of London stupidity is the numbering of the streets, and of all the streets Oxford has been the most eccentric in this line. A stranger in search of a particular house would be bewildered by the frequency with which the same number presented itself. For instance, 271 turned up as unexpectedly as the demon of the pantomime, half a dozen times in a quarter of a mile. The Board of works are at last renumbering the whole street, but the tradespeople grumble and say it will cost them $50,000 in alterations of store fronts.

Dr. Glenn, the California wheat grower, is unfortunate this year, his crop amounting to only 100,000 sacks. This would satisfy most farmers, either in that or other States; but when the further facts are mentioned that he will have to keep 35,000 sacks merely for seed for next year, and that his last crop before this was 400,000 sacks, it is evident that the year is likley to prove a losing one to the Doctor. It costs a large amount of money to run his 50,000 acre farm and the hundreds of men and horses employed on it.

A YOUNG LADY who has a slight defect in the off eye, entered a drug store the other afternoon and called for a glass of soda water. The clerk mistook the movement of the optic for the usual hint, and ten minutes after the woman left the store she felt an irresistible desire to sing "We—hic—won't go home—hic—till mornin'," and her necktie persisted in crawling around under her left ear. Drug clerks ought to exercise a little more caution.

'Who is the pretty girl with blonde hair and deep blue eyes, there in the jaunty hat?' asked Alfred, at the lawn party.—'Who,' replied Annie; 'that taffy haired girl with the tallow eyes and that night-mare of blue rags on her head? I never saw her before; nobody we want to know.' That, brethren, is the way different people look at a pretty girl, in a pretty hat.

"WHY, MA," exclaimed Miss Susie Annie of Boston, reading the bill of fare at the Ocean House, Newport, "there ain't no baked beans down at all!"

"No beans," said ma in a startled tone, "why my goodness me, Susie, what sort of a hotel must this be, any way?"

"WILL you please insert this obituary notice?" asked an old gentleman of a Binghamton editor. "I make bold to ask it because the deceased had a great many friends about here who'd be glad to hear of his death."—Elmira Telegram.

A BOY of 12 years, dining at his uncle's, made such a good dinner, that his aunt observed: 'Johnny you appear to eat well.' 'Yes,' replied the urchin, 'I've been practicing eating all my life.'

'Well, Mary, how do you like your new home in Vermont? 'Well, mum, we all like it but father, and the air is too embracing for him, but under the canister of heaven I think there isn't a more beautifuller place.'

Some $1,000,000 have been added to the wealth of the nation by the mines of North Carolina within the past five years.
