UNDER THE STARS AND STRIPES

Mr. Albert Wheat arrived home on Saturday, having been honorably discharged from the army.

Capt. W. Earle Withgott is now in Dublin. He is evidently about to be sent home.

James Arthur Clough, of Church Hill, has returned from France. He was the first volunteer from Queen Annes county, it is said.

Mr. Henry Lambert, of the United States Navy, visited his parents for the week-end. We understand he will stay in the navy until his four years are up.

Mr. Charles Hodgkin, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hodgkin, of this town, arrived home last week, after having been honorably discharged from the army. He did good work in France.

Sergt. Irving Sparks has arrived in this country from France and is expected home most any day.

William S. Lawson was a "hero" of the war and admitted it. He told everybody he always carried a revolver, having gotten the habit in France. He was arrested while wearing three wound stripes, a Croix de Guerre and numerous other decorations, which he said he got for bravery in action. It developed he was wanted for desertion from Camp Colt at Gettysburg, he never having been overseas.—Ex.

Parker Maize, the big colored carter, and a number of other colored men from this section, arrived home this week, after doing good work for Uncle Sam in Europe.

Mr. Charles Beck, of Chestertown, has been honorably discharged from service and is home for the time. He was overseas about a year.

Sergeant Ernest Strong has been honorably discharged after doing good work in France and elsewhere.

Privates Hubert Townsend and Marion D. Smith have arrived in this country from overseas.

Isadore Sachs, of the U. S. battleship Texas, was home for the week end.

Vacation Time In Kent County

This is the vacation season and many city people are now in Kent Co. taking a well-earned vacation. Kent offers every inducement to dwellers in cities to spend their vacation here. The woods are beautiful, the bathing is good, the eating is first-class, while the lovers of fishing can also be entertained. Read what Walt Mason, the famous writer of prose-poetry, says of this season:

"And now the city dweller dreams of forests, moors and lonely fens, of speckled trout in mountain streams and rufous deer that roam the glens. When summer comes with brassy skies, who does not long for things like these, for outings where the mountains rise, or in the shade of lordly trees? And surely men who toil and spin for weary months, and give their best, when rattled by the city's din, should have one month of helpful rest. One month of loafing in the dells, where nature does her smoothest work, and man would come back wearing bells, to do his stunt as shipping clerk. One month of camping in the wind, the office chairs all left behind, and man would then be reconciled to his demnition, beastly grind. One month of trapping grizzling bears, of catching codfish in the sea, of chasing bobcats to their lairs, and man would do the work of three. Though earnestly we workers try to plan out fine vacation schemes, the cost of living is so high we have to take it out in dreams. The grocer and the butcher still insist on having all we earn, so we pass up the wind-swept hill, the woodland and the brac and burn. The iceman and the plumber come to tell how much they think we owe; in vain the scented breezes hum, we can't enjoy them as they blow.

DISCOVERY OF POTATO WART

Dangerous Disease Found In The United States

One of the most dangerous diseases of Irish potatoes has been discovered in this country. It has caused serious losses in England, Irland, and occurs in other European countries but it was not known in the United States until found in Pennsylvania in the fall of 1918. Whether it is present in other States besides Pennsylvania is not yet known. Undoubtedly the disease was brought to the United States by the importation of infected potatoes. Such importation is restricted now and an effort is being made to locate and check the wart trouble before it can cause serious damage. In Pennsylvania a strict quarantine is imposed on the territory in which the disease occurs and any person who sells suspected potatoes is liable to fine as high as $300.

Affected potatoes have rough, irregular, spongy outgrowths which usually begins at the eyes, but may eventually cover the whole tuber. These warts are light brown at first, but later become black and finally decay with age. The disease does not attack the vines, so it is difficult to detect before harvest time. The saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," is applicable in the campaign against the potato wart. It is easier to prevent than to control and it is therefor important to discover all localities where it occurs and check its spread.

There are several agencies by which the disease is carried, First, diseased seed potatoes; second infected soil carried on feet or on farm machinery; third, manure from infected fields. If the disease is found it is urged that the warted potatoes be carefully disposed of in order to prevent further spread and that the infected field should not be planted to potates for several years.

Watch for warty potatoes at digging time and report to State Pathologist, Maryland State College, College Pork, Md. The plant Disease Survey, a branch of the Bureau of Plant Industry, is conducting a campaign of investigation and publicity in regard to the potato wart trouble. The object is to determine the prevalence of the disease and call the attention of growers to its serious character.

Fishermen Don't Have to Pay Tax.—Fishermen of Kent have been in quandary over a recent decision from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue with reference to many residents of the river towns and villages. The supposition was that all users of boats had to pay the $10 license. Commissioner Roper says, however: "Any boat which is primarily used in connection with any serious activity which constitutes the business, occupation, profession or means or livelihood of the owner, is not subject to tax. Where a tax has been collected covering boats of the class herein mentioned the taxpayer has the privilege of filing a claim for refund."

—Mr. Albert Baxter will go to the farm in Rich Neck, Queen Anne's Co., which is now occupied by Mr. B. F. Potts.
