The Traveled Lady.

A jaunt over a railway is often as good as a trip to the minstrels. Last week we took a spin over the Michigan Central, and during our waking moments were highly edified, amused and instructed by the tone and conversation of two ladies in the seat fornist our own, across the aisle and abaft the binnacle. The variety of their intelligence and a vast fund of general information attracted our attention, and we just sat there and drank it all in like cold truth from a living spring.

'Do you suppose they have air brakes on this train?' inquired the one next the window with a bronze green plume on her hat.

'Oh, yes, they run 'em now on all trains.'

'What are they for?'

'Oh, they are to ventilate the car and give 'em more fresh air. I heard they intended to put 'em on cattle cars so the poor animals could get plenty of oxygen.'

'Indeed! This is a wonderful age. Did you ever ride in a chair car?'

'Oh, yes, they are just the nicest kind of cars. Some of 'em are real easy, too; have rockers on 'em. But I like a sleeper the best.'

'Yes, they are more homelike and comfortable. If any accident happens they unhook the sleeper and leave it at the last station.'

'Why, my! How nice!'

'Yes, and the sleeper is much more comfortable to ride in because it don't go as fast as the rest of the train.'

'It don't?'

'O, no. Charles says the Pullman Company won't allow the railroads to haul the sleepers near so fast as the balance of the cars.'

'Why, how strange!'

'Yes, very.'

'What do you suppose makes the cars sway so, back and forth?'

'O, I heard the company had been experimenting lately with rockers on the cars. Its something to go with concussion and retraction of the expansive compression, or something of that kind.'

'What a wonderful age!'

'It is, really. And these accident insurance companies are a great improvement over the old style of traveling. Charles says all first-class roads carry them nowadays, and it makes one so much more secure to know that they are on the same train with one of them. They are worked by electricity, and must cost awful high, don't you think so?'

'Yes, they must that.'

Obliging a Preacher.

From the Detroit Free Press.

Just back of Missionary Ridge, Chattanooga, while following the high way to reach Tunnell Hill, I came across a little church half hidden in the woods. The building was primitive, and the old darkey who sat on a log by the door was more so. After I had made inquiries about the route, and was ready to go on, he said:

'Better come down, boss, and come in to meetin'.'

'Do you hold service this afternoon, my friend?'

'Yes, sah. We am gwine to open in about five minutes, an' I 'spects de sermon will be a powerful one.'

It didn't seem right to be riding around the country on Sunday, so I got down and took a seat beside the old man. After a few minutes in general talk, he said it was time to go in. I followed after him, and found myself the sole audience. I next found that he was the preacher who was to deliver the powerful sermon. He opened services in regular form and with all due solemnity, and then announced his text and commenced to preach.

I stood it for fifty-five minutes, and then, as he had only reached "second G," I waited until he had closed his eyes, and then made a dive for the door. It was no go. I hadn't gone six feet before he stopped his sermon and asked:

'Stranger, must you be gwine?'

'Yes, I feel that I must.'

'An' you can't stop an' heah de rest ob de discord?'

'No.'

'Den I'll chop off right whar I is.'

'Oh, don't do that. You can go on with your sermon just the same.'

'But you see dar mus' be a colleckshun took en up after de sermon,' he said in anxious tones. 'If you'll oblige me by takn' a seat I'll sing a hymn an' pass de hat.'

I sat down, and when he had read and sung a hymn he passed the hat, transferred the quarter to his vest pocket, and said:

'I didn't get down to de most powerful part of de sermon; but if you happen 'long dis way nex' Sunday I'll gin' you de odder half. Dat quarter comes jist in time to encourage me to keep de good work bilin'.'

A Tale for the Toddlers.

From the Chicago Tribune.

One day Lucy and her brother were going to the place where the ice cream was kept. Lucy was trotting along, holding Charles's hand. She heard a strange noise in the street near them. Looking, she saw two boys with a little ecru dog. One boy had tied a string to the poor little dog's tail, and on the other end of the string was a deserted oyster can.

'Oh, brother,' said Lucy, 'see what the wicked boys are doing.'

And the the tears filled her eyes, because she felt sorry for the dog.

Then Charles asked the boys to let the dog go. They would not do this, but said they would sell him the dog for twenty-five cents.

'If we buy the dog, Lucy, you can have no ice cream, for I have only twenty-five cents in my pocket,' said Charles.

Then Lucy was very sad, for she loved ice cream dearly, but still she knew it was her duty to prevent the dog from suffering.

So for a moment she was silent, and then looking up to her brother she said in her pretty way:

'You kick in the ribs of the boys, dear brother, and I will hustle the pup up the alley.'

And so Lucy had her ice cream after all.

'Looking for the comet, were you?' scornfully exclaimed Mrs. Marrowfat.

Julia heard her mother's footsteps, but not in time to withdraw her cheek unobserved from young Mr. Mortimer Percie's vest.

'Yes,' responded Julia, not knowing exactly what she said.

'And did you think you would find it in Mr. Percie's waistcoat pocket?'

Julia was silent. At her time of life she could not be expected to answer such a question. It is often a great disadvantage to be young.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A missionary who once labored in Pike county, Pennsylvania, relates that during his first visit to that benighted region he commenced a sermon by saying:

'I don't remember enny sich man I s'pose it's 'cause Pike county folks never sees no society.'—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE COW BOY DUEL.

KID FRANK'S ACCOUNT OF ONE OF THE MOST REMARKABLE FIGHTS ON RECORD.

From the Denver Republican.

John Kelley, one of the participants in the famous 'cow boy duel,' arrived here yesterday. He is a remarkable man. Born in Buffalo about thirty years ago, he came West at an early age, and became pretty well known as 'Kid Frank.' After leaving an adventurous life he married a well-to-do Mexican woman, and by her secured a fine ranch forty miles square in old Mexico, on the San Pedros River, close to the line. He became known far and wide by his skill in shooting, and was generally avoided by men desirous of killing. His stock increased rapidly until about four months ago, when he found his brand on 3,000 head of cattle, worth $100,000. He determined to sell 2,500 head, and gathering up 1,500 head more, he started to drive to Denver, a distance of nearly 1,500 miles. His outfit consisted of thirty-two cow-boys, and Frank took command of the expedition. The trip was a very long and severe one, but by using great care the losses were small. The party started May 23, and made a slow march across the burning plains and trackless wastes of Arizona and New Mexico, until Sept., 8 found them fifty miles north of Trinidad and an equal distance east of Cucharas. The Kelley outfit went into camp for a day near the camp of George Howard, a large cattle grower. The latter had a herd of 3,000 cattle, and commanded twenty-eight cow boys. The two herds became mixed up while traveling close together, and Howard made a claim for cattle which Kelley considered unjust, and refused it. This angered Howard, and words followed. Kelley claimed Howard had some of his cattle, and offered to exchange; but the latter refused, and the quarrel became very dangerous. The cow boys on each side gathered around and began to handle their weapons in a manner which indicated that they meant business.

Kelley saw the danger. He knew if a fight should occur between such deadly marksmen there would hardly be a man left to tell the tale, and in addition to the loss of human life the huge herds of cattle would be scattered and all hands ruined. Just as the cloud of war was about to burst he conceived a plan to avoid bloodshed, and broached it to Howard, who agreed to it. The plan was as follows: Each was to select six cow boys, the best shots in their outfits, and, placing them in line fifty yards distant on horse-back, to give the word "Fire!" and let them settle the dispute. This novel method of settling a difference was hailed with delight by the men on each side, and volunteers were numerous. Kelley selected six men who had been with him a long time, and been tried and proved in many a desperate situation. Howard selected six of his best men. There was no time lost in preparing for the duel, which was to be the greatest affair of the kind ever known. The men of the opposing sides retired to their camp and coolly made preparations for the feast of death. They groomed their horses, oiled and cleaned their revolvers, and putting their saddles on with care, rode out to the fight. "Kid Frank's" men were armed with Winchester revolvers, 38 and 44 calibre, long barreled, and Howard's six carried Colt's improved. Each man knew his weapon and his horse, and all were fully aware of the fact that the men standing so grimly in front of them were equally well equiped.

The opposing duellists were drawn up in line facing each other at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The sight was one which few men have looked upon. Fifty yards apart stood like statues two lines of men, horse and rider almost one, every duellist grasping a huge, glittering revolver in each hand, with the reins in his teeth or hanging loosely, for these dare-devil riders of the South guide their horses with their knees, as the scarcely more, savage Indian does. Around about, carelessly in the range of stray bullets, were the friends of both parties, mounted on their horses, watching the fight and to see that no advantage should be taken. At either side was the chief, who had sent these men out to die. Over all brooded a death-like silence, while on all the swelling, rolling, silent plain shone the gold of the bright September sun. The man who was detailed to give the word which was destined to create a whirlwind of death started forward. At the first move there was a shiver of life along both lines, but it was not a shiver of fear. Each man straightened himself, grasped his pistols the firmer, and singled out his opponent. The umpire lifted his hand, and suddenly on the still air came the cry of doom. "Fire!" At the word twelve horses bounded forward, twelve pistol shots and rang out. Three of Howard's men threw up their hands and fell from their horses, while only one of Kelley's men fell. Kelleys men, not heeding their comrade's death, sped straight toward the three men in front of them. The latter dropped their pistols in their bridle hands and pulled their horses up, while their five enemies came riding swiftly on, pouring a hail of bullets in from a pistol in every hand. The Howard men saw the odds. They were two great, and turning swiftly, they ran, turning in their saddles as they flew, and bravely returning the fire. In three brief minutes the duel was fought and won and four dead men lay upon the ground. Frank rode up to Howard and said, "Now you and I will settle with each other."

"No," replied Howard, as he looked sadly at the dead men: "I am satisfied."

"Very strangely, no news of the fight was received until yesterday; but this, perhaps, was due to the fact that no towns were passed by the Kelly outfit. Only he himself has arrived, his herd not being due for two weeks yet. Kelly himself is a sun-burned, manly looking young fellow, and told the story in a matter-of-fact way which would hardly attract attention.

A Horse in Spectacles.

In a paper on nearsightedness lately read before the New York County Medical society, Dr. W. F. Mittendorf told of a fine horse in Berlin that became intractable, and on examination proved to be suffering from myopia. The owner had a pair of glasses made for it, and it became as tractable as ever. American students, Dr. Mittendorf said, are not so subject to nearsightedness as German students. Sedentary occupations and want of exercise develop myopia, and women, therefore, are likelier than men to contract it. It generally sets in in childhood; rarely appears after 21 years of age. Blindness often follows neglect of it. Glasses should be worn early in life to prevent its progress. They should be rather weak than strong, and a slight blue tint is desirable.

A "JOLLY" GIRL.—I shudder when I hear a girl described as "jolly." When a maiden gets to be impatient of restraint, and anxious, first and chief of all, to have a "jolly time," she is in a position of at least possible peril. From jolly girls in certain ranks in society the Jennie Cramers are recruited—girls who mean no harm, but who are so careless of conventionalities that they are in danger before they are aware. Our social customs allow a freedom between the sexes which is wise and healthy, but contains perilous possibilities. There is room at least for the inquiry whether what may be called the calisthenic craze, the cultivation of "mannish" sports, games and forms of physical exercise among girls, may not have been the occasion in part for the diminished gentleness and womanliness observable in the jolly girls of the period.

HE that waits for an opportunity to do much at once may breathe out his life in idle wishes, and regret at the last hour, his useless intentions and barren zeal.

KIND looks, kind words, kind acts and warm handshakes—these are secondary means of grace when men are in trouble and are fighting their unseen battles.

How? By getting one bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS and taking it regularly according to directions.

Mansfield, Ohio, Nov. 26, 1881.

Gentlemen:—I have suffered with pain in my side and back, and great depression on my breast, with shooting pains all through my body, attended with great weakness, depression of spirits, and loss of appetite. I tried seven several different medicines, and was treated by prominent physicians for my liver, kidneys, and spleen, but I got no relief. I thought I would try Brown's Iron Bitters. I have now taken one bottle and a half and am about well—pain in side and back all gone—soreness all out of my breast, and I have a good appetite, and am gaining in strength and flesh. It can justly be called the king of medicines.

THE "SUCCESS"

Force and Suction Pump.

Of which we have the exclusive control, is now being extensively used in this county. We have one at our store in Chestertown, where it can be seen at work. These pumps are made of the best material, the cylinders and valves are of brass, the pipe is wrought iron galvanized. No. 1 Pump will throw 40 gallons per minute; No. 2 pumps, 14 gallons per minute. We warrant each and every pump to work satisfactorily for one year in any depth of well, and to force water 100 yards with a rise of 150 feet.

Call and examine this pump and you will buy no other.

THE Plain English Pill IS HERE EXPRESSED! OUR FREE CIRCULAR TELLS THE REST

Kansas, June 26th, 1882.

HARRIS REMEDY CO.—Gents—I used the Pastilles as directed and they completely cured me. In about one week from the time I commenced using them I began to sleep well and I continued to use all the box with constant improvement and since that time (Oct. 1881) I have felt like a new man. I truly hope that many of the sufferers will find out that you have a specific for nervous weakness and be cured by the same.

Respectfully Yours, ——

P. S.—You will not publish my name but persons whom I may be referred to me and I will answer them.

To every young, middle age or old man troubled with nervous or physical debility or impotence sealed circular is sent free. Send full address on postal card to HARRIS REMEDY CO. St. Louis, Mo. We want your address. You need our remedy. Send and be convinced of this.

PHOSPHATES!

The season for ordering Fertilizers for Wheat is now at hand, and it is with increased pleasure that we again present to the farmers our brand so well known as

IMPERIAL,

Which was in competition the past season with almost every brand of phosphates known to this market, and by

ACTUAL MEASUREMENT TEST,

has yet to find its superior.

We are also preparing a brand of Acid Phosphate, which being slightly ammoniated, is somewhat different from most in use, and which has given first rate results. We have given it the name of and are prepared to highly recommend it.

Dr. HARTER'S IRON TONIC.

A combination of Protoxide of Iron with Pure Vegetable Tonics, in a palatable form. This preparation is recommended by the Faculty as the best and most available tonic, to the thousands of invalids who are suffering from the effects of impure blood, or an impoverished condition of the blood, this position remedy has in many hands proved a most powerful curative. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians have yielded to this great and invaluable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any iron preparation known. H. A. CLARK, M.D. ST. LOUIS, MO., NOV. 8th, 1881. 2836 Wash Av.

It gives color to the blood, natural healthful tone to the digestive organs and nervous system, making it applicable to General Debility, Loss of Appetite, Prostration of Vital Powers and Impotence.
