MIRRORS FROM PLATE GLASS

Process Is a Somewhat Complicated One and Calls for a High Degree of Skill.

Mirrors are made from plate glass. The proper ingredients are mixed together and melted in large pots. The molten mass is then poured out on great iron tables and a heavy roller flattens out the glass to the desired thickness. The sheets are then annealed, which consists of heating them slowly in various chambers kept at different temperatures. This is for the purpose of relieving unnatural strain in the formed glass, which makes it extremely brittle, so that a mere touch is sometimes sufficient to cause the plate to break. After the glass has been cut to the proper size the sheets are polished by rubbing over the surface pads or small disks until the finished product is about half the thickness of the original. The glass is then ready to be used for show windows, or can be made into mirrors.

The back of the sheet of plate glass is "silvered." In the early processes this did not mean what the word indicates, for no silver was used, but a mixture of tin and mercury. The high cost of mercury and the danger of mercurial poisoning brought about its replacement by silver, which is used in the form of lunar caustic. While silver is an expensive metal, the amount required to coat even a large mirror is so small that the cost is of no moment.

UNIVERSAL FOOD IN TROPICS

Many Varieties of the Bread Fruit Tree Are Scattered Throughout Southern Lands.

It is of interest to note the flour and biscuit of the tropics. There are a dozen different bread fruit trees scattered throughout tropical regions. One of the flours, made from the bread fruit tree of tropical America known as the yuka, is a regular article of commerce in the New York market. It is only sold in cartons at elite groceries, is quite a pure article, of a dingy, grayish-white color, and a slightly alkaline and hardly agreeable taste. In cooking that alkalinity and acridity are mostly driven out. In its fresh form it is in shape elongated like a giant plantain, and for drying and conversion into flour is cut down before ripening so that it has, like a green banana, not a semblance of sweetness. But the same fruit, allowed to ripen fully, then sun dried, becomes almost as sweet as a Smyrna fig. This tree-grown cake bread is eaten dried thus, and along with the tree-growing flour forms the chief food for millions in the tropics.—New York Herald.

Educated.

"Your friend seems rather uncouth. I don't like to leave him alone in the parlor."

"Why not?"

"He may spit on the axminster rug."

"No danger. He never spits on the floor unless there's sawdust."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

GOUCHER WOMEN WANT NON-SECTARIAN RULE

Maryland Girls From Outside of Baltimore Represent Fifteen Different Denominations.

TRYING TO GET NEW CHARTER

Baltimore.—Efforts by the graduates and officials of Goucher College to secure a new charter from the Maryland legislature, which will make elections to the board of trustees independent of church control, were given new impetus by the analysis, just completed, of the religious affiliations of the seventy-eight Goucher students now attending the college from fifty-three Maryland towns and cities outside of Baltimore. The analysis shows that the girls are members of fifteen different churches or denominations, and that only twenty-two are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, certain members of which are fighting the new charter in an attempt to gain control of the college.

From Nineteen Counties

Goucher draws students from nineteen Maryland counties: Alleghany, Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Caroline, Carroll, Dorchester, Frederick, Garrett, Harford, Howard, Kent, Montgomery, Prince Georges, Queen Annes, Somerset, Talbot, Washington, Wicomico and Worcester. The undenominational character of the undergraduates is shown by the fact that the girls who attend the college from these counties represent the following churches: Protestant Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian, Jewish, Lutheran, Methodist Protestant, Friends, Roman Catholic, Baptist, Christian Science, United Brethren, Church of Jesus Christ, Disciples of Christ, Congregationalist and Reformed.

Rights of Graduates

"Sectarian control has its place," said Mrs. William V. Hayes, president of the Goucher Alumnae Council, in commenting on the survey, "particularly when the students of a college are all of the same faith. But when fifteen different faiths are represented, as is the case at Goucher, then the students and alumnae have a right to independent control, without regard to creed or denomination."

Goucher College, founded in 1885, is one of the six colleges for women placed in Class I by the United States Bureau of Education. Of the five others, Bryn Mawr, Mount Holyoke, Smith, Wellesley and Vassar, the records show that not one is, or ever has been, under sectarian or denominational control. Such control, in the judgment of the secretary of Princeton University, as expressed in a recent statement, tends "to throttle administrative independence."

Statements indorsing Goucher's effort to retain its non-sectarian character, said President William W. Guth, himself a Methodist minister, have been received from dozens of college presidents and educators of national repute.

New York Leads Opposition

Objection to Goucher's position in the controversy was inspired not by the Maryland Conference of the Methodist Church, but by the Board of Education, in New York, according to Judge Morris A. Soper, one of the trustees. The stand taken by this Board of Education, after many long years of indifference toward the college, is proving very embarrassing, said Mr. Soper, in view of the fact that many thousands of dollars have been given the college on the ground that it is independent of any church control.

Though Goucher was incorporated strictly as a non-sectarian institution, the amended charter in 1914 gave certain conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church the right to nominate trustees, in exchange for certain pledges of financial support.

Old Arrangement Failed

That this arrangement failed in both respects, say the college officials, is shown by the fact that the conferences have neither exercised their rights of nomination nor fulfilled their pledges of support. The Baltimore Conference paid 60 per cent of its pledge, one of the Pennsylvania Conferences 40 per cent, two conferences paid about 12 per cent, and one conference nothing at all. None of the conferences nominated trustees between 1914 and 1921, until the New York body made its effort to put the college under church discipline It is this narrowing outside control, says Judge Soper, that the trustees wish to deny, aiming to preserve, as in the past, the most cordial relations with the proper church authorities in Maryland.

Tomb of Sir Walter Scott.

A visitor to the tomb of Sir Walter Scott thus describes the resting place of the famous author:

He was laid to rest in Dryburgh abbey. Dryburgh, eight or nine miles from Abbotsford, has all the beauty of surroundings which Melrose lacks. The latter is a more magnificent ruin, but the charm of Dryburgh, beautiful though it is in itself, lies in its setting, in the open sweeps of perfect turf, in the great beeches, the cedars of Lebanon, and immemorial yews (some of which were reported to be 600 years old in Scott's day), and in the Tweed—his beloved river—which flows here close by below steep sandstone banks. It is a lovely spot, in which he has lain now for almost a century beside his wife.

JUST GOT OVER A COLD

Look out for kidney troubles and backache. Colds overtax the kidneys and often leave them weak. For weak kidneys—well, read what a Chestertown woman says:

Mrs. S. Pfeffer, 102 Cannon St., says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone in need of a kidney remedy. I have used them at different times when my kidneys were troubling me and they have never failed to give relief. The least cold I took settled on my kidneys and my back became weak and painful. Mornings I felt dull and sluggish and the action of my kidneys was irregular. Doan's Kidney Pills, used as directed, were the right remedy for me and soon put a stop to the backaches and other signs of kidney trouble."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Pfeffer had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.
