POULTRY

NOTES CONCERNING POULTRYMEN AND THE REARING OF POULTRY THAT MAY INTEREST OUR READERS

The successful rearing of chicks is without doubt the greatest problem that confronts the average Kent county poultryman at this time, with the exception of those who hatched extremely early and were satisfied to rest with that attempt. But so few of us are satisfied to raise an ordinary number that we will invariably overdo the matter if we don't watch out. It is a simple problem of human nature asserting itself in the form of energy and aggressiveness. We put out several broods of chicks; they do well; we figure we can raise them under almost any conditions and any numbers. Then we lose out. We have come to this conclusion about the raising chicks: A person must be prepared to raise them to do it successfully on a large scale. There are, of course numerous exceptions to this rule, where, under the most difficult conditions, fine lots of chicks have been reared to maturity, but they are exceptions rather than the rule. The handicap of inferior equipment and inferior feed have caused more failures in the chicken business than neglect on the part of the poultryman. There are very few poultrymen who wilfully neglect their flocks The great majority give them every attention, but the conditions over which they have no control render their efforts useless and cause dismal failure. In a great majority of cases, we believe the feed to be at fault. The chicks go along for two weeks or so with the loss of only a minimum number. Then, under the very conditions under which they have been reared from one day to 14 days, they go to pieces. It is universally claimed that the first few days of the chicks life is the most important. If it is, and if it passes that period, then why should it not continue to thrive? Consequently, we figure that when a flock of chicks starts on the down grade the feed does not agree with them. Consequently, we change the feed to some other of the well-known brands. We usually have good results with this method.

Messrs. Hugh Hartman and Townsend Anthony have two nice flocks of chicks. Their losses have both been very small and their chicks are growing nicely. Mr. Hartman has recently erected a nice house, 40x20, for his chicks.

Mr. Charles Nicholson, of near town, has gone in for Anconas and has several fine flocks that are doing good. He likes this new breed of chicks. Mr. Nicholson had a small flock last year and had considerable success with them. The Ancona is one of the new breeds and lays a white egg.

Without doubt, milk is one of the most valuable feeds for young chicks, but we cannot recommend the prepared milk foods, from our experience. People who have a supply of milk at hand would do well to let the chicks have it constantly before them from the first. It has been known for many years that young animals and growing fowls grew rapidly when fed milk, and slowly when milk was lacking; but it was not until two years ago that Dr. McCullom, then chemist at the University of Wisconsin, in the course of his investigations made the discovery that in the butter fat of milk there is found certain principles which in the feed stimulates or promotes growth, and without which growth ceases. Fortunately for us these principles, called vitamines, are also present in quantities in the yolk fat of the egg and in the leaves of certain grasses and growing plants and most abundant in the plants of the clover family, but are not found to any appreciable extent in the grains or vegetables. This fact should be kept in mind in the rearing of young chicks.

The Queen Anne Poultry Farm is in the midst of the most active season in their history. They are shipping many thousands of chicks to northern markets every day.

TWICE PROVEN

If you suffer backache, sleepless nights, tired, dull days and distressing urinary disorders, don't experiment. Read this twice-told testimony. It's Chestertown evidence—doubly proven.

Mrs. Jas. P. Parrott, 200 S. Front St., gave the following statement Aug. 17, 1916: "I had been troubled off and on with kidney disorder and backache. My kidneys were irregular in action and caused annoyance. I had spells of dizziness and saw black spots and fiery flashes before my eyes I was tired and miserable most of the time. I began to use Doan's Kidney Pills and they gave me relief. I generally keep Doan's on hand and can recommend them highly."

On Jan. 26, 1921, Mrs. Parrott said: "Doan's Kidney Pills have practically cured me of kidney complaint. It is seldom I have the least trouble now, as I resort to Doan's at the first sign of my kidneys being out of order and they give me prompt relief."

Indigestion

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. The effects of a disordered stomach on the system are dangerous, and prompt treatment of indigestion is important. "The only medicine I have needed has been something to aid digestion and clean the liver," writes Mr. Fred Ashby, a McKinney, Texas, farmer. "My medicine is for indigestion and stomach trouble of any kind. I have never found anything that touches the spot, like Black-Draught. I take it in broken doses after meals. For a long time I tried pills, which griped and didn't give the good results. Black-Draught liver medicine is easy to take, easy to keep, inexpensive."
