Mrs. Cleveland and Her Defiance of Aristocratic Nonsense.

From the Indianapolis Sentinel.

Brave and beautiful Mrs. Cleveland is a level-headed little woman, with ideas of her own and the courage to carry them out, regardless of the frowns or sneers of what is called "society" at Washington. She is democratic in her ways, doesn't believe in any aristocracy save that of merit, and has a profound contempt for distinctions which have any other basis.

Mrs. Cleveland has entertained a good many of her old schoolmates at the White House since she became its mistress. Among them was a young lady of engaging manners and fine accomplishments, who made a marked impression upon Washington society. A gifted musician, she sang and played divinely, and was quite the rage for a time. It soon turned out, however, that she was dependent upon her own exertions for a livelihood, and that she actually supported herself by teaching music. "Society" stood aghast at this revelation, and was almost beside itself when the young lady actually accepted an engagement as musical instructor in one of the seminaries at Washington, under its very nose. "Society" proceeded to snub the young lady, and tried to make Mrs. Cleveland understand that it was not good form to "receive" music teachers on an equal footing.

But Mrs. Cleveland somehow couldn't be made to understand it. If the expression may be pardoned, "she isn't built that way." She went right along inviting this horrid music teacher to the White House teas and entertainments, took her driving and to the theatre, and showed her as much consideration as if she had been a duchess or a Vanderbilt. Of course Mrs. Cleveland didn't "patronize" her or make an ostentatious display of her form. She simply treated her as she did all her friends, emphasizing her attentions only enough to make the rebuke to the codfish aristocracy, which has been trying to establish a European social code at Washington, pointed and direct enough to be understood.

"Society" at Washington is an olla podrida, composed to a very large extent of male and female adventurers, people who have acquired wealth suddenly and are fond of display and ostentation, contractors, jobbers, lobbyists and such like. At last accounts this precious crowd of snobs and parvenus was trying to devise some means of punishing Mrs. Cleveland for introducing "common people" into its charmed circle. It will be interesting to observe what sort of revenge it takes on "the first lady of the land" for her presumption. Mrs. Cleveland will hold her own, depend upon it. As a contemporary remarks: "Simplicity and naturalness are the foundation of her school of manners, and it is through these she has endeared herself to the American people. She knows no difference in her friends, whether they be clad in silk attire or russet, and the one is just as welcome as the other." Mrs. Cleveland stands on the American platform, and she need have no fear of the frowns and sneers of the flunkies and toadies who infest the national capital, and call themselves "society" and other people "persons."

Down with snobbery!

GREELEY AND MEDILL.

A Characteristic Anecdote of the Journalistic Jupiter.

At the dinner given the other day at the Union League Club, Chicago, to Charles A. Dana, a good little story was told by Mr. Medill. The Chicago Herald caught it, and here it is:

On some particular occasion, years ago, Mr. Medill's paper took the other side on a question in which the New York Tribune was vitally interested. Horace Greeley was greatly offended at this, and Mr. Medill was told about it, and thought he would drop in on the veteran journalist and try and explain his position. So he made a call on Mr. Greeley in his sanctum. He found Mr. Greeley at work seated at a large desk, which was littered all over with paper and scraps of writing. At one little corner of this desk, bent nearly double, Horace Greeley was scribbling away.

"How do you do, Mr. Greeley?" said Mr. Medill in a mellifluous tone of voice. There was no response. "How do you do, sir?" repeated the visitor, soothingly. Still no answer. A third time the courteous inquiry after Mr. Greeley's health was made, and this time there came a characteristic reply from the Jupiter of the press. "How de-do, d—— you!" said the shrill piping voice of Mr. Greeley. "I came in to have a talk with you, and ask you to have lunch with me afterward," explained the visitor. "I)—— you; I wouldn't take lunch with you!" was the retort. But Mr. Medill, knowing his man, stayed for all that, made things plain to Mr. Greely, whose bristling, porcupiny ways gradually disappeared, and he finally said: "Well, come on! I'll take lunch with you, but you'll have to pay for it, d—— you!"

IF Gen. Lew Wallace writes his "Life of Candidate Harrison" with the same care with which he wrote his famous "Ben Hur" it won't be done in time to do the most good. It is said that he first wrote "Ben Hur" on a slate that he might "rub out easily," then on soft paper with a pencil. He went over and over his pages with great care, and finally sent the book to the Harpers written on large unruled paper, in violet ink, so well done that the reader who went over it for the publishers said that it was the finest manuscript ever offered to him.

DON ALPHONSO, brother of Don Carlos of Spain, traveling as "Don Juan de Huelva, Count de Bourbon," is in Turkestan, and is astonished at the progress made there along the Transcaspian Railway. At Merv, which five years ago was a crowd of felt tents and mud huts, he found brick houses and macadamized and paved streets, and at the railway station at Bokhara was a luxuriously fitted up buffet with a young and pretty barmaid speaking French and German as fluently as her native language. Twenty years ago no Christian would have been safe in Bokhara.

IT is said that a charming French duchess recently going to some festivity for a benevolent purpose, was late and put on her gloves while driving. She did not notice until she stood in the drawing-room that to a black and white silk costume she had added one black glove and one white one. She kept them on, and at the next fashionable assembly in the place all the ladies wore gloves of different colors.

IF you desire to possess a beautiful complexion take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses and purifies the blood, and removes blotches and pimples, making the skin smooth and clear, and giving it a bright, healthy appearance. Take it this month.

THOUGH Boston is the acknowledged hub of the universe, it would have been better located if it had been placed nearer the peach orchards. The first peach train of the season only made its entry into that city on Monday. Pomologically considered the Bostonians are but dwellers in the suburbs of good feeding.—Phila. Record.

MANY bodily ills result from habitual constipation, and a fine constitution may be weakened and ruined by simple neglect. There is no medicine, for regulating the bowels and restoring a natural action to the digestive organs, equal to Ayer's Pills.

COURTESY does for human intercourse what salt does for potatoes. Little civilities give a relish to social associations and when practiced these beget the habit of courtesy which is a second nature.

An Elegant Substitute

For oils, salts, pills and all kinds of bitter, nauseous medicines is the very agreeable liquid fruit remedy, Syrup of Figs. Recommended by leading physicians. Manufactured only by the California Fig Syrup Company, San Francisco, Cal
