DON'T GIVE UP

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk, the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.

"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely

Cured Me.

I presume my liver was very much out of order, and the blood impure in consequence. I feel that I cannot too highly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to any one afflicted as I was."—Mrs. N. A. Smith, Glover, Vt.

"For years I suffered from scrofula and blood diseases. The doctors' prescriptions and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and now feel like a new man, being fully restored to health."—C. N. Frink, Decorah, Iowa.

SAMUEL MALLALIEU,

Jan. 27, 1887. PROPRIETOR

FASHION'S GENTLE SWAY.

Anticipating the Advent of Crispy Autumn Weather.

The approach of autumn days and cool, crisp breezes have already put the fair arbiters of Chestertown fashions on the qui vive. In a few weeks the cutest kind of little bonnets, and the daintiest kind of dainty hats will burst into full bloom, as a result of the many fascinating moments spent in devising these autumn beauties.

On the Sunday following the full glory of the Harvest moon, September 28, should the cool days have arrived, rich gowns will also come out in royal splendor, as fit accompanyments of the early dropping of the leaves. Since it has been said that "every eye creates its own beauty," it would be as a matter of course a curious result which the masculine eye could fashion in the world of those "dainty, cute, neat, chipper," etc., creations for women's heads. But without regard to consequences here are a few rough hewn thoughts as gathered from avenue de la Transcript and Rue de la Main, or avenue de la Bridge in early autumn.

Now, with all due respect to the snug capote and brimless turban which show but little of the wealth of black or auburn hair on the finely rounded forehead, the smartest little creation for evening wear, to be daintily poised with an artistically arranged coiffure low behind, is a rare creation of some airy, light material made into a bonnet, with a delicate band under the chin. Usually, pink is a color which may be sufficiently decided for any ordinary type of beauty. No ornamentation other than possibly several dainty buds should be allowed to make an effort to lend to the artistic beaty of the bonnet or its wearer. Loud striking contrasts of velvet, with weighty wreaths of golden rod may suit the girl who is unable to see herself as others see her, but the taste of the Chestertown, or broader still, the Kent county girl, does not tend that way. Her tastes in fashion are as modest as her beauty is delicate and refined.

Black with limited touches of gold, if properly combined, will form a headdress of almost universal becomingness, particularly for late fall and early winter wear. Autumn lingers long among the hills of Kent, and not until the uncompromising law of nature calls upon the great god of the radiant sunlight to fulfill the destiny of his creation does the daylight steal away and kiss our homes good night. With the gradual shortening of autumn days, and the delightful quiet of lengthening twilights and evenings, fashions court will be made glad by the reappearance of the jaunty gown, fashioned into poems of neatness from heavier and warmer fabrics than those which characterized the summer beauties. The super-æsthetic tailor-made girl may be a thing of beauty and a consequent joy forever, but her social queendom is with us disputed by the Chestertown girl who is her own best artist, and fashions her own picture. Yet it is a fact that this tailor-fashioned sprite is chipper and cute, and her smooth and comfortable suits, give them a dash and fascinating witchery which the average girl, be she ever so charming and independent, can but view with a vague sense of consuming envy. The social surface may appear as calm and unruffled as a summer sea with these gay boats of fashion sailing over its bosom, but until its peculiar charm is varied by a complete furnishing of that the most unique of all empires what is known as the swelldom of high life, it is incomplete. Here the dilicious manifestations of individuality may blossom out and the lordly dictatorship of the modern beau ideal fashion and control the apparel of a host of admiring followers. The usual leader of the season's costuming is a nondescript creation, yet one who enjoys a giddy pleasure which even more substantial folk would accept did it present itself. But beneath the surface of the social and fashionable world there is an unanswered question which keeps the waters troubled, and just now does the wise woman with skilful fingers and happy intuition sit herself down in solitude, with puckered brow, to evolve from the half worn and demoralized debris of summer finery the wherewithal she shall be clothed through the early autumn, until embryonic modes and crude fashion vagaries shall have developed into definiteness and enduring popularity. The demi-season modes are usually a repetition of those of the previous season, with a little change as to detail. A gown of wool trimmed with guipure bears upon it the sign of summer still, however deep its coloring.

The Biggest Apple Tree.

The largest apple tree in New England, and probably in the world, is in the northwestern part of Cheshire, Conn., standing in Mr. Delos Hotchkiss' dooryard. Its age can be traced by a family tradition to 140 years at least, and it may be twenty or twenty-five years older. It is at the present time of symmetrical shape; the trunk is nearly round, without a scar or blemish on it; there are eight large branches; five of them have been in the habit of bearing one year and the remaining three the next. Mr. Hotchkiss has gathered in one year from the five branches 85 bushels of fruit, and his predecessor had harvested a crop of 110 bushels from the same five branches. By careful measurement, the circumference of the trunk 1 foot above the ground, above all enlargements of the roots, is 13 feet 8 inches. The height of the tree has been carefully measured and found to be 60 feet, and the spread of the branches as the apples fall is 100 feet, or six rods. The fruit is rather small, sweet and of moderate excellence.

You may sing of the beauty of springtime
That glows on the cheek of the young,
But I sing of a beauty that's rarer
Than any of which you have sung.
The beauty that's seen in the faces
Of women whose summer is o'er,
The autumn like beauty th charms us
Far more than the beauty of yore.

But this beauty is seen too rarely. The faces of most women lose the beauty of youth too soon. Female disorders are like frosts which come to nip the flower which betoken good health, without which there can be no real beauty. If our American women would fortify themselves against the approach of the terrible disorders so prevalent among them, by using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, their good looks would be retained to a "sweet old age. This remedy is a guaranteed cure for all the distressing weaknesses and derangements peculiar to women.

What Is a Bay Window?

The vexing and much vexed question, What is the legal definition of a bay window? seems to be drawing toward a solution. "How many windows shall a bay window contain?" is the point made. These windows are all built of frame, and the difficulty with the inspectors is to keep builders from overstepping their legal rights and constructing frame back buildings under the disguise of "bay windows." The claim is made that a bay window must be all windows—that is, windows on the front and sides; others think that a window on the front is all that is necessary. The latter view is taken by the builders of houses in rows where the bay windows of adjoining houses are so close as to prevent the possibility of privacy.

One builder who is building a row of houses in the upper section of the city thinks the law is doing him a wrong by compelling him to put three windows in his bay windows, which adjoin each other in pairs, divided by a brick wall. He is not expected to put a window in the brick wall, but in the framework opposite, adding to the expense of the house and altering the shape of the room. The main reason for compelling builders to construct windows on all sides of the bay is prevention against fire. This argument is answered by the builders, who say that the frame apartments having the least number of windows burn the slowest. When windows become broken the draught is greatly increased, consequently the danger is aggravated. To the looseness of the building laws many of the complications constantly arising can be attributed. The ordinance of 1882 to regulate the erection of oriel or bay windows throws no light whatever on the subject. While the ordinance regulates the construction of front bay windows, not a word is said about those on the rear of buildings.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Messages for Passengers.

Arrangements are being made for carrying out a scheme proposed by Mr. McNeil, of Londonderry, for the more efficient despatch of telegraphic communication between Tory Island and the mainland, which promise to be of great advantage to ship owners and homeward bound passengers. It is proposed that steamers passing on either side of Tory Island will throw overboard receptacles something like a small buoy, containing the messages to be sent by telegraph, and a boat's crew will be in readiness to pick them up and convey them to the nearest telegraph office. By this means it will be possible for a passenger to intimate his arrival to his friends twenty-four hours before he could do so now from Liverpool, and twenty hours before he could do so from any port on the Clyde. The matter has been taken up by Lloyd's committee, who undertake to forward passengers' telegrams at a minimum of 1s. each and ship owners' advices at a minimum of 6d. each. It is expected that the arrangement will soon be carried out.—Industries.

Recovering a Diamond Ring.

Tuesday a gentleman, a stranger in these parts, had occasion to cross the Huntington bridge, and was accompanied by a friend. When midway of the bridge he pulled a large and valuable diamond ring from the little finger of his left hand to exhibit to his friend. In handing the ring over it slipped from his hand and fell, and striking the floor bounded into the river. The friend stood where the ring fell till its owner went and secured the services of several men to dive in after it. He found two who upon the offer of handsome pay for their services consented to attempt the rescue. They went out in a boat and after many attempts secured the ring, which was in turn handed over to its owner. He paid the promised sum and went on his way rejoicing.—Hartford Courant.

Bullet Proof Armor.

In the early part of May some plate firing took place on board the English man-of-war Nettle, which brings up a subject of the greatest importance—namely, the possibility of making armor such as will break up the splendid forged steel projectiles which have hitherto held together almost without exception. The result of the Nettle and other recent tests goes to show that plates are now made with faces so hard as to defeat forged steel, and that it appears possible that steel faced armor in the future may dispose of them in the manner that Schneider admits such plates defeat indifferent projectiles.—New York Telegram.

The Final Test.

Customer—You are quite sure that this is a genuine diamond?

Salesman—Absolutely positive. It will scratch glass or the hardest steel, and, finally, it left a mark on the cheek of my friend Neverwynce.

Customer—Well, what of that?

Salesman—He is the society reporter of The Daily Scarifier.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Victoria's Crown Analyzed.

The English crown is made up of diamonds, rubies, sapphires, pearls and emeralds set in silver and gold bands. It weighs 89 ounces and 5 pennyweights, troy. In it there are 3,453 diamonds, 273 pearls, 9 rubies, 17 sapphires and 11 emeralds.—St. Louis Republic.

They are telling of a young man who was graduated at the Harvard Law school this year who has taken the full academic course of four years at Harvard, followed by three years in the Law school, and has supported himself throughout the seven years, coming out with a balance of $5,000 to the good. This is good enough to be true.

M. Eiffel is now utilizing his famous tower and a balloon for aerial telegraph purposes by night. It is intended to ascertain by the experiments at what distance the lights on the tower can be perceived from a balloon, and to what height from the summit of the tower an aerostat can be seen and communicated with by signals.

It has never hitherto been found possible to make a drilling machine which would drill square, hexagonal, oblong and octagonal holes in metal, but such a tool has been devised, and its appearance before the public is promised at no distant date.

An immense skate was recently captured near Victoria, B. C. Its dimensions were as follows: From tip of snout to tip of tail, 6 feet 3 inches; across the body, 4 feet 11 inches; depth of flesh, 4 inches. It was estimated to weigh 160 pounds.

Pilgrimages to Rome add goodly sums to the papal exchequer. Since Feb. 1 the French pilgrimage took £8,000, the various Italian ones £10,000, the American £12,000, the Austrian £4,150, and the German £5,000.

How Paradise Is Really Lost.

"Where was the Garden of Eden?" was one of the interesting questions on which Mr. Hormuzd Rassam discoursed before the Victoria Philosophical Institute, Sir G. G. Stokes, M. P., in the chair. Mr. Rassam has been recently excavating Babylonian and Assyrian sites, but he has not found the Eden site, and he showed how utterly impossible it was to fix the locale in a land where volcanic action and physical alterations had in many places changed the courses of the rivers in past ages. In this sense it is really "Paradise Lost."—London Telegraph.
