Eczema Isn't
A Nice Disease.

It is painful, irritating, disgusting—offensive alike to the sufferer and his friends. The little watery, blistery eruptions itch and tingle. Scratching doesn't help. You may scratch to the bone and only make it worse, but it can be cured by using

Foster's German Army and Navy Cure

Eczema shows itself in other ways, but when little blisters, or scaly, watery patches appear, this ointment should be used at once. It cures quickly and permanently. It cures other skin diseases, too—tetter, ring worm, itch, salt rheum, dandruff, pimples, blotches and scald head. Numerous cases of itching piles, which are caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the rectum, have been permanently cured by this potent and soothing emollient.

DAIRY WORK AT THIS SEASON.

Better Cows and Improved Methods of Feeding Required.

A Splendid Tribute to the Kent County Farmer.

We are always glad to drop a word of cheer, or offer a timely suggestion to the farmer, and right here pause to give the verdict of a visitor to Kent last week, relative to the position occupied by the Kent county farmer when compared with the most progressive and intelligent men of the most highly improved agricultural counties of the State. A gentleman (a farmer) of Kent, suggested that "The farmers of this county are slow, the depression bears us down with a weight of untold woe." The visitor then paid a tribute, which we are sure will find an echo from every section of the State. He said: "If Kent is slow, what of her less fortunate sisters? I have no hesitancy in saying, that she is not slow. What county in the State has more fertile, or more highly improved acres? Where is farming done with a greater degree of perfection? What county more readily grasps new ideas, and in the front ranks of agricultural progression carries them forward with greater success? Nowhere has the peach been carried to so great a degree of perfection; her acreage of wheat and corn is large, the general quality of her stock stands second to no county in the State; her farmers' clubs are annually experimenting in new fields, and developing new sources of revenue to an extent which no other county can boast of; the creamery has been made a great success, and is still growing in importance; in short, the agriculturists from every county in the State, have gradually grown into a habit of watching with more than ordinary interest and even greater profit, the general progressive trend of the Kent county farmer, and, right here, I want to suggest that you publish the following timely suggestions as to the diary and its profitable results. It may at least contain suggestions which local dairymen and farmers can turn into golden profit."

"There are other ways of employment, but none seem to offer greater inducements than the diary, if properly handled. On nearly every farm one can find some good cows to start with, and one cow, by judicious breeding, soon has a working dairy, says a writer in the Ohio Farmer.

"I would advise no one to rush headlong into dairying by going out and buying a promiscuous lot of cows. This way nearly always proves disastrous. Nor do I advocate dairying to the exclusion of everything else. But I do advocate the keeping of better cows, and the employment of better methods of keeping, caring for and feeding them.

"We have our cows come fresh in the fall during September and October, so that by the first of November the cows are all at work. By this time our farm work is all done, and we can give the cows the very best attention. Instead of loafing for the next four or five months, and living off of what we have made during the summer, we turn manufacturer. And, with the cows as our machinery, we manufacture the by-products, such as hay, straw and corn fodder, into sweet butter, that is always in demand at paying prices.

"We do not try to sell our butter in a cheap market, but send it where people will buy and appreciate a good thing, and are willing to pay for it.

"We keep only what cows we can carry on an eighty-acre farm. But our receipts run as high as ninety dollars per month for butter alone, besides the amount used for skim and buttermilk.

"We raise our best heifer calves on the skim-milk; the balance, with the buttermilk, goes to the pigs. We not only manufacture butter, but pork as well. We raise two litters of pigs from the same sows each year. Our pigs are farrowed in February and September. I know scientific breeders will say that breeding twice a year will ruin the sow and decrease the constitutional vitality of the pigs. But our pigs always have constitution and vigor enough to grow to weigh from one hundred to two hundred and fifty pounds each at six months old. And so long as they willingly do this, we shall pursue our present course.

"I am quite sure of one thing; there is nothing that will put a kink into a pig's tail so quickly as plenty of sweet milk, with the addition of a little wheat middlings."

RULES OF POULTRY KEEPING.

Paste Them on the Henhouse Door for Reference.

"Uncle Mike" Boyer, the well-known New Jersey poultry-seer, has given the following rules for the "government and care" of poultry in the Massachusetts Ploughman. They are sound. Paste them up on the back of the poultry-house door:

1. Gather the droppings of the henhouse every morning.
2. Sprinkle air-slacked lime over the roost platforms and around the house after each cleaning.
3. During the summer season pour kerosene over the roosts every week.
4. Scald the drinking fountains once a week.
5. Fumigate the interior of the houses every month by burning sulphur in them.
6. Whitewash the inside of the buildings every spring and fall.
7. Have a scratching-pen to each henhouse, and keep this filled with chaff and leaves, among which scatter the grain at noon and night.
8. Keep the fowls exercising; do not let them become overfat.
9. Keep heads of cabbage hanging in the henhouse during the entire winter.
10. Do not expose the stock to winds, snow or rain anymore than necessary during the change of seasons.
11. Have the house warm and comfortable.
12. Do not overcrowd.

What Does Chicago Know About It?

There are 31 points necessary to a beautiful woman. Three things white—the teeth, the skin and the hands. Three black—the eyes, the eyebrows and the eyelashes. Three red—the lips, the cheeks and the nails. Three long—the body, the hair and the hands. Three short—the teeth, the ears and the feet. Three broad—the chest, the brow and the space between the eyebrows. Three narrow—the mouth, the waist and the instep. Three large—the arms, the hips and the legs. Three fine—the fingers, the hair and the lips. Three small—the bust, the nose and the head.—Chicago Post.

FASCINATION BY SNAKES.

The Tongue Play of the Reptiles a Lure For Their Prey.

The pheasants which formed the subjects of the following observations were hatched out in an incubator from eggs kindly given me by Sir Cecil Miles. The eggs were taken from the hen and transferred to the incubator a few days before the young birds were due to emerge.

Two pheasants were hatched out at about 3 p. m. That evening, at about 6:30, a finely chopped egg was placed before them, but they showed no signs of pecking at it, nor did they peck at grain or sand next morning at 11 a. m. At 4 p. m. they began to peck, but seized very little. One struck repeatedly at a crumb of egg on the other's back, but failed to seize it, though the other bird was quite still.

The little birds showed no signs of fear of me. They liked to nestle in my warm hand. My fox terrier was keen to get at them, much keener than with chicks, probably through scent suggestion. I placed two of the young pheasants, about a day old, on the floor and let him smell them, under strict orders not to touch them. He was trembling in every limb from excitement. But they showed no signs of fear, though his nose was within an inch of them. When the pheasants were a week old, I procured a large blindworm and placed it in front of the incubator drawer in which the birds slept at night. On opening the drawer they jumped out as usual and ran over the blindworm without taking any notice of it. Presently first one, then another, pecked vigorously at the forked tongue as it played in and out of the blindworm's mouth. Subsequently they pecked at its eye and the end of its tail.

This observation naturally leads one to surmise that the constant tongue play in snakes may act as a lure for young and inexperienced birds, and that some cases of so called fascination may be simply the fluttering of birds round this tempting object. I distinctly remember, when a boy, seeing a grass snake, with head slightly elevated and quite motionless, and round it three or four young birds fluttering nearer and nearer. It looked like fascination. It may have been that each hoped to be the first to catch that tempting but elusive worm! Presently they would no doubt be invited to step inside.—Nature.

HE HAD A NEW THING.

And Genius, as Is Always the Case, Got Its Reward.

Two men were seated at a small table near the front door waiting for their sandwiches and coffee when they were approached by a shabby stranger, who touched his hat and said:

"Gentlemen, may I ask a favor of one of you?"

They were silent. It was no new experience to them.

"What I wished to ask was, gentlemen," continued the stranger, "how to spell the word balloon."

They looked at one another in evident surprise and one asked, "The word 'balloon,' you say?"

"Yes, gentlemen. I got into a discussion with a friend, who says there is but one 'l.' I maintain there are two."

"Your friend's right," said one of the men at the table.

"No, he isn't," retorted the other. "You're right. Two 'l's.'

"Let me see, now," said the first. "B-a-l-double-o-n-bal-oon. I think you're wrong, Bill, and that this man's friend wins the bet."

"It's no bet," said the shabby stranger. "We simply got into an argument. You can see for yourself there is chance for an argument. If I had a pocket dictionary, I could tell in a minute. Gentlemen, would one of you loan me a dime with which to purchase one?"

They looked at him coldly for a moment and then each pulled out a dime and gave it to him.

"You're a good thing," said the first one.

"Yes, you've got something new," added the other.

But the shabby stranger did not smile. He simply thanked them, and said he would buy one for his friend also.—Chicago Record.

Orchids For Cut Flowers.

So many beautiful flowers drop their petals soon after cutting that they are out of favor with purchasers. The efforts of florists are generally in the direction of introducing such flowers as will hold their own for some time after cutting. It is possibly one of the leading advantages of the carnation that it lasts so long on the parlor table, and this is found to be true with many species of orchids which are coming into favor for cutting purposes, quite as much on account of this persistence as on account of their rarity and sweetness. In this closely related family the cypripedium is found particularly valuable. There are not only persistence, sweetness and curious features in the forms and colors of the flowers, but they also have the long stems which enable the American florists to use them without the necessity of lavishly stemming them.—Meehan's Monthly.

Free Lunch With a String to It.

In most of the free lunch places down town there is a nickel in the slot machine device, which is placed in close proximity to the lunch. So big is the gambling propensity in most men that they will frequently drop enough nickels into one of these machines to pay for a square meal and never "win out." These machines more than pay for the lunches set up by the proprietor.—Chicago Tribune.

Bursting Flywheels.

From a recent discussion regarding the bursting of flywheels it appears that, although a sudden change in momentum, as from putting on a load, may fracture the arms, it is probable that centrifugal stress from increased speed is a far more prevalent cause of flywheel accidents.—New York News.

A New Use For the Telephone.

It has remained for the latter part of the nineteenth century to evolve another and wholly different method from that usually employed for the transmission of osculatory favors. This is to have the matter accomplished by telephone. The invention is not, however, patented, and may upon occasion be adopted in other cities than Washington.—Washington Times.

At the discovery of America maize was grown by the Indian tribes from Patagonia to Hudson bay. In Mexico and Peru its origin was attributed to the gods.

Elizabeth, N. J., was so called after the Lady Elizabeth, wife of Sir George Carteret.
