SMITH & CLEMENTS,
Feb. 14. 1895. CHESTERTOWN MARYLAND.

Extraordinary Announcement.

JAMES A. CASEY, a progressive Rock Haller, is now offering to the people of this county special low prices on his entire stock in order that the bulk of goods now upon our shelves can be reduced. For fifteen years we have been catering to the wants of the trade here, and all during that time we have never thrown out catch-penny advertisements in order to hoodwink the people, but a steady, straightforward plan adopted in the beginning has been continued to the present time, and now for the future we promise greater bargains than have ever been shown in Rock Hall.

THE STOCK

Embraces a general line of goods, and consists of Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Hardware, Notions of all kinds, including special bargains in Underwear and Hosiery, together with a first-class supply of Gum and Rubber Goods, so extensively used by our oystermen. The approaching holidays get nearer and nearer every day, and don't forget that we are fully prepared to meet your wants, as we can supply you with a complete line of goods at prices unequaled in this community. Our Grocery department receives special care, all the goods being bought for spot cash at headquarters, enables us to place in the homes of our people a line of fresh groceries at prices which are considered rock bottom. In the Boot and Shoe department there are many bargains awaiting you, and a call will convince you that we advertise bargains. Remember, we carry everything to be found in a well-appointed store, and from this time on sweeping reductions will be made, and a number of goods during this month will be closed out at prices that will astonish you. Look out for change of advertisement next month.

JAMES A. CASEY,
Dec. 13, 1894. ROCK HALL, MD.

Wm. P. Howard to the Front.

Important notice of removal to the stand lately vacated by P. B. Darrel, on Front street. Something remarkable—tender beef in Chestertown. Having secured larger quarters I am now better prepared to handle the general trade. Our stock is New and Fresh, and consists of which will always be tender. Smoked Sausage received daily, while our Hams and Breakfast Bacon are the pride of the household. Flour by the barrel or sack. Coffees, Teas and Sugars, and at rock bottom prices. Choice lines of CONFECTIONERY. Also the leading Brands of TOBACCO and CIGARS. Maryland Biscuits and Hot Rolls always on hand, and orders for special use quickly and promptly filled. Very busy now, more to say in this paper later. Give me a call, and don't forget my removal.

GENERAL GROCERIES,
☞ INCLUDING FRESH BEEF, ☜

Jan. 3, 1895. WILLIAM P. HOWARD.

POSITIVE CLEARING SALE.

E. W. F. SIMPERS,

Front St., Chestertown, Md., Opposite Stam's Opera House.

1st.—At this season of the year I have too many winter goods on the shelves. They must go. The cut in prices for the next two weeks means our loss and your gain.

2d.—We call special attention to our line of CROCKERYWARE, probably the most complete line, and best assortment in the county. Sets of dishes at moderate cost, and a general assortment of Crockeryware to please most any one.

3d.—HOSIERY, BLANKETS, SHIRTS and GLOVES constitute a very important part of our general stock, and the low prices figure conspicuously. Don't forget this department.

4th.—Best of all—OUR GROCERY DEPARTMENT is now a household word. Everything is kept fresh and clean. Nothing stale goes over our counters, and the wife is always satisfied because it came from E. W. F. Simpers'. The Sugar-Cured Hams are always what you want. Flour in the choicest brands, either by the barrel or sack. The reader knows what a Grocery Department means; it means everything sold in a Grocery store, consequently it is useless to itemize every article. What about the prices? They are all right. Never higher than others, but sometimes a little less. Two weeks later we will have more to say about other lines of goods we are determined to clear out. So keep your eyes open on our advertisement. Resp'y, etc., E. W. F. SIMPERS, Chestertown, Md.

Choice Cigars and Tobacco, Plain and Fancy Confectionery, special lines of Teas and Coffees. Leading brands of the best Flour, either by the barrel or sack, while the Ha me for family use are not only as good, but the BEST to be had. The stock is kept constantly fresh, consequently no stale goods are sold over our counters. Having largely added to our stock, we claim with pride to be the leaders in first-class and forgetting the things that are behind, we will press forward for the new year of 1895, and make it the best year of all. Our motto will be "Forward March" for the stock of goods, at the same time we will say "Halt" on high prices. This store must become a household necessity, and close cash customers are finding it out every day. A call solicited and satisfaction guaranteed. Look out for change of advertisement soon. HE WAS HARD TO BEAT

GROCERIES AT LOW PRICES,

A SLY OLD WOODCHUCK AND HIS PERSISTENT ENEMY.

A Long Island Farmer Relates His Experience With a Chuck That Had Become Very Smart Through Close Touch With Civilization.

"Speakin of woodchucks," said an old Long Island farmer the other day, "reminds me of some curious incidents with 'em. 'Twarn't more'n 50 years ago when they was thick as flies on this island, an we ate them instead of rabbits an made mufflers and mittens out of their skins. They was mighty warm, too, those old woodchuck mittens an mufflers. When a man wanted a big fellow, he only had to walk down into the nearest field an take his pick out of two or three. They was so plentiful that it was no trouble to kill 'em. But they have been killed off now so that there ain't many more roun. Onct in awhile a big fellow brings up a litter into the lower clover lot an we have to root 'em out.

"Ever hunt woodchucks? Waal, it ain't much if they be young ones. If you wait long enough, you'll catch them runnin across the lot in broad daylight. If you are a good shot, you can bring one down. They're tough, an a big fellow will carry away a big load of shot. But if you get hold of a big fellow, an old veteran, so to speak, you'll find it no easy job to dislodge him. He's too knowin a cuss to live. He'll only eat your clover at night, an, Lord, how much he can get away with in one night! In the daytime he keeps close into his hole an laughs at you. Dig him out? Waal, yes, you can try it, but he'll dig a good deal faster on the other end than you will an take it easy at that. Mind you, I'm talkin of old ones—those know all the tricks of the business. The woodchucks that you find on Long Island are wiser than those most anywhere else 'cause they have to be cunnin an shrewd not to get killed. They're so close to civilization that they learn new tricks all the time.

"A few years ago a cunnin old fellow took up his home in that clover field just off the lower medders, an we had the hardest time to kill him that you can imagine. I guess afore we got through with him he cost us 'bout $100—that is, fur clover destroyed an labor at $1.50 per day lost in trying to capture him. 'Twarn't any use layin in wait fur him with a shotgun. He was too wise to poke his nose out of the hole. But every night he'd come out an eat clover fast enough. He brought up seven litters of young chucks in that field, but we killed 'em all except the old one. He'd bring a new mate with him to his home every season, but she'd be shot in tryin to save her young ones. But we could never get a shot at the prime mover of the whole trouble. We waited fur him on moonlight nights an did get a shot at him onct. But I guess we only crippled him, an he never ventured out again except on dark nights. We had no chance then. We tried to dig him out, but after three days of steady work we got tired. Then we started to burn an smoke him out, but it ain't no easy matter to make smoke go down hill an get into all of the holes that a woodchuck can make. Finally we decided to drown the old critter out. We got together all the old pork an oil barrels that we could find an filled them full of water. Then when everything was ready Si an Jake, my two sons, stood ready with a pitchfork an shotgun while I poured the water into the hole.

"Waal, sir, that hole held more water than any millpond. It took the hull ten barrelfuls to bring it up to the surface, an then, jest as I put in the last pailful, that pesky old chuck showed his nose. Si jabbed at him with the pitchfork, an Jake shot the handle to pieces as he banged away at the critter. But it warn't no use. The water soaked away rapidly, an the woodchuck went down again, grinnin at our failure.

"But we warn't so easily discouraged. Next day we added five more barrels an all the tubs an pails round the house. Then we began to flood that hole again. This time we had plenty of water, but there was no woodchuck to appear. The water came up to the surface an flowed out of the hole, but no woodchuck. We thought he had left his home for good after his first duckin. But no. He came out again that night, an ate more clover than usual jest as if to spite us. Waal, we found out in time that the critter was so wise that he had dug his hole way up toward a hill so that he could sit up there an watch us pourin water in at the other end. This put a stop to any attempt to drown him out.

"It was Si that rigged up the trap that finally caught the old fellow. He took a big stone weight 'bout 50 pounds an suspended it right over the hole. Then he fixed a little stick down below jist as he would set a rabbit trap. The old muskrat couldn't get out of the hole noway without hitting that stick, an—well, the thing happened two nights later. The first night the critter didn't venture out, but the second mornin the stone was down, an the old fellow was crushed beneath it. We ain't had none in the fields since then."—New York Post.

Great Courtesy.

Mme. Calve had an experience with the courtesy of the Spanish thieves once while she was in Madrid. Two well dressed strangers stole her satchel, which contained some money and a number of luck pieces and talismans, including a bunch of dried flowers from her father's grave. The loss worried the artiste, but when the newspapers reported the theft the thieves sent her the precious relics neatly inclosed in a packet, in which was a polite note begging that the "finder" of the reticule might be permitted to keep the money as a souvenir of so charming a vocalist.—New York World.

Doesn't Get Around In Time.

Tommy—Do you say your prayers every night?

Jimmy—Yep.

"And does your maw say hers?"

"Yep."

"And does your paw?"

"Naw. Paw don't need to. It's almost daylight when he gits to bed."—Cincinnati Tribune.

As a Gentle Reminder.

Dimpleton—My father-in-law has a birthday next week, and I must give him something.

Briggs—Have you decided what it shall be?

Dimpleton—Yes. I think I shall send him a motto with the words, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."—New York Herald.

"Bonnie Doon" was by Burns. The Emperor Napoleon at St. Helena made the droll mistake of saying that the English had but one melody worth listening to, and that was "Bonnie Doon."

TOLD OF PRESIDENT FAURE.

The Head of the French Republic In the Days of the Commune.

M. Faure, the president of the French republic, is well known by a prominent French American resident of New Orleans, who was with M. Faure during the French commune. He describes the new president as a man of personal magnetism, of splendid executive ability and unquestioned bravery and firmness.

Faure began business as a small commission merchant in hides, wool, etc., at Havre years ago. From that, by energy, economy and thrift, he prospered, and his business increased until he was one of the most extensive commission merchants in that city. He became also one of the most prominent men of the city politically, and just before the Franco-German war he was made first "adjoint" to the mayor of the city and was a staff officer of the army, although his duties did not require his presence on the battlefield. He took an active interest, of course, in the war, and it was owing to his efforts that the commissary department of the French soldiery was kept well supplied. He was also a close adviser of the officials of Havre and in every manner demonstrated great executive talent and a born leadership.

It was in 1871, during the French commune, however, that his personal bravery and ability to confront desperate emergencies were tested. While acting in the capacity of "adjoint," or adviser of the mayor at Havre, a request was made of him from the mayor of Paris for firemen and engines. The city of Paris was in flames from one end to the other, and aid was being asked everywhere in engines and firemen. Faure at once called for volunteers and urged upon them the necessity of responding to the call. He thus raised a company of firemen to go to Paris and fight the fires that were raging everywhere. Faure showed his courage and won the hearts of the firemen and people by going with the volunteers as their leader. With all the engines the city could spare they hastened to Paris, and for three days, without rest or scarcely anything to eat, fought the flames.

Faure did the duties of a fireman, and on one occasion, when one of the men was asleep from fatigue, rather than awaken him took his place and did his work. He was in a dozen perilous positions during that three days' fight with fire, in company of his companions, and never flinched. In every instance he proved himself to be a man of determination and courage. He was first in every danger, and at the most critical times he never lost his self possession and will power, and with his volunteer firemen he did yeoman service in trying to save Paris from the embrace of the fire fiend.

The people of Havre never forgot M. Faure's valiant service on that occasion, and afterward, as a Republican, he was elected to the chamber of deputies. He served with several ministers as private secretary, and of late years has had more important connection with that branch of the government service. He has prospered in business as well as in political affairs and is said to be one of the most popular as well as one of the ablest statesmen of the French republic.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Mischievous Mme. Malibran.

No prima donna was ever more delightfully capricious, more full of mischief than the famous Mme. Malibran. At the rehearsals of "Romeo and Juliet" she could never make up her mind where she was to "die" at night. It was important for Romeo to know, but all he could get was "not sure," "don't know," "can't tell," or "it will be just as it happens, according to my humor; sometimes in one place, sometimes in another." On one occasion she chose to "die" close to the footlights, her companion, of course, being compelled to "die" beside her, and thus, when the curtain fell, a couple of footmen had to carry the pair off, one at a time, to the intense amusement of the audience.

John Templeton, the fine old Scottish tenor, was probably never so miserable as when he was cast to sing with Malibran. Very often she was displeased with his performance, and one evening she whispered to him, "You are not acting properly; make love to me better," to which, so it is said, Templeton innocently replied, "Don't you know I am a married man?" Evidently the lady did not think there was anything serious in the circumstance, for not long afterward, when in "Somnambula" she was on her knees to Templeton as Elvino, she succeeded in making the tenor scream with suppressed laughter when he should have been singing by tickling him vigorously under the arms.—Cornhill Magazine.

Pretty Good Guess.

The New Orleans Picayune says that a teacher, in explaining to her pupils the difference bteween civilized and uncivilized races, insisted upon three things as requisite for civilization—food, clothing and shelter.

The next day she brought the subject up again by way of review.

"What are the three things necessary to a civilized man?" she asked.

Several of the children remembered food and clothing, but the third requisite seemed to have escaped their recollection entirely. Finally, after the question had been repeated two or three times, one little fellow lifted his hand and said:

"A wife."

Whether the teacher sent him to the head of the class we are not informed.

Women Win In South Australia.

Word has come from the president of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Nichols of Prospect, that in Adelaide, South Australia, adult suffrage has been carried, giving the women a right to vote on the same terms as men and with no barrier to a seat in parliament. The bill now only awaits the queen's consent.

Mrs. Nichols says, "It is a grand victory for a hard and well fought battle of seven years."

A Large Demand.

Brown—Why so?

Smith—There are so many fellows nowadays who want the earth.—New York Sun.
