SMITH & CLEMENTS,
Feb. 14. 1895. CHESTERTOWN MARYLAND

Extraordinary Announcemnt.

JAMES A. CASEY, a progressive Rock Haller, is now offering to the people of this county special low prices on his entire stock in order that the bulk of goods now upon our shelves can be reduced. For fifteen years we have been catering to the wants of the trade here, and all during that time we have never thrown out catch-penny advertisements in order to hoodwink the people, but a steady, straightforward plan adopted in the beginning has been continued to the present time, and now for the future we promise greater bargains than have ever been shown in Rock Hall.

✦ THE STOCK ✦

Embraces a general line of goods, and consists of Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Hardware, Notions of all kinds, including special bargains in Underwear and Hosiery, together with a first-class supply of Gum and Rubber Goods, so extensively used by oystermen. The approaching holidays get nearer and nearer every day, and don't forget that we are fully prepared to meet your wants, as we can supply you with a complete line of goods at prices unequaled in this community. Our Grocery department receives special care, all the goods being bought for spot cash at headquarters, enables us to place in the homes of our people a line of fresh groceries at prices which are considered rock bottom. In the Boot and Shoe department there are many bargains awaiting you, and a call will convince you that we advertise bargains. Remember, we carry everything to be found in a well-appointed store, and from this time on sweeping reductions will be made, and a number of goods during the month will be closed out at prices that will astonish you. Look out for change of advertisement next month.

JAMES A. CASEY,

JAMES S. BRADLEY

Chestertown, Md., Dealer in

DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, NOTIONS, BOOTS AND SHOES,

and a GENERAL STOCK OF MERCHANDISE, embracing everything to be found in a well-stocked establishment. For 20 years our business has enjoyed a steady increase, and to-day we number among our customers some who started with us in our infancy. In looking over our stock we find that we have too many goods at this season of the year. They must move, consequently we have reduced the price. Many useful articles in

Dry Goods & Boots & Shoes,

are included in this sale, and the advantages to our customers will be more appreciated when they see the goods. GOOD WOOLEN BLANKETS are now in the reach of everybody, as the prices are lower than ever. Our Underwear in Shirts and Drawers are especially cheap, while the complete line of other goods are never higher, but sometimes less than others. Thanking my friends who have dealt with me in the past, I respectfully ask a continuance of the same in the future.

Jan. 10, 1895. JAMES S. BRADLEY, Chestertown, Md.

Wm. P. Howard to the Front.

Important notice of removal to the stand lately vacated by P. B. Darrel, on Front street. Something remarkable—tender beef in Chestertown. Having secured larger quarters I am now better prepared to handle the general trade. Our stock is New and Fresh, and consists of which will always be tender. Smoked Sausage received daily, while our Hams and Breakfast Bacon are the pride of the household. Flour by the barrel or sack. Coffees, Teas and Sugars, and at rock bottom prices. Choice lines of CONFECTIONERY. Also the leading Brands of TOBACCO and CIGARS. Maryland Biscuits and Hot Rolls always on hand, and orders for special use quickly and promptly filled. Very busy now, more to say in this paper later. Give me a call, and don't forget my removal.

GENERAL GROCERIES,

☞ INCLUDING FRESH BEEF, ☜

Jan. 3, 1895. WILLIAM P. HOWARD.

POSITIVE CLEARING SALE.

✦ E. W. F. SIMPERS, ✦

Front St., Chestertown, Md., Opposite Stam's Opera House.

1st.—At this season of the year I have too many winter goods on the shelves. They must go. The cut in prices for the next two weeks means our loss and your gain.

2d.—We call special attention to our line of CROCKERYWARE, probably the most complete line, and best assortment in the county. Sets of dishes at moderate cost, and a general assortment of Crockeryware to please most any one.

3d.—HOSIERY, BLANKETS, SHIRTS and GLOVES constitute a very important part of our general stock, and the low prices figure conspicuously. Don't forget this department.

4th.—Best of all—OUR GROCERY DEPARTMENT is now a household word. Everything is kept fresh and clean. Nothing stale goes over our counters, and the wife is always satisfied because it came from E. W. F. Simpers'. The Sugar-Cured Hams are always what you want. Flour in the choicest brands, either by the barrel or sack. The reader knows what a Grocery Department means; it means everything sold in a Grocery store, consequently it is useless to itemize every article. What about the prices? They are all right. Never higher than others, but sometimes a little less. Two weeks later we will have more to say about other lines of goods we are determined to clear out. So keep your eyes open on our advertisement. Resp'y, etc., E. W. F. SIMPERS, Chestertown, Md.

MEDFORD T. PORTER, STILL POND,

The RELIABLE BLACKSMITH

"I am going to say something to you today that I have said to you every Easter day for 30 long years."

That is the way the sermon began.

"Christ, my children, rose from the dead on Easter day, but before he rose he died. Some day we may rise and join him in everlasting glory in paradise, but before we shall rise from the dead we must die. We all must die, but when? Shall we be prepared when our summons comes? Are we prepared to die now? Yes, now. Why not? We know not when our time shall come. Every Easter day for one long generation I have repeated this warning as I do today. And among those who heard me there were many who were not alive to hear me on the following year. Some of you must die before next Easter day. When death comes to you, will you be unprepared? Shall the blood of him who died that we might live alway be shed in vain in even one sinlge instance? This—is—for—you—alone—to—say."

Even the choir listened to this. The boys stopped fidgeting, and the men sat very still. The woman in black looked at the bunch of violets on the altar, and tears fell upon her gloves.

That was what he said, although he used more words then I have done and took a longer time to say it, and after he left the pulpit and joined the assistant ministers back of the chancel rail there were more wet eyes than the washerwoman's in that great church, and there were many promises made for the coming year that the makers will not live to keep.

* * * * * * *

Early Easter Monday the ladies of the Altar guild were again at work. The flowers which had been lent for the festival were returned to their owners. The chancel stairs were thronged with serving men and maids waiting to carry them home. The other flowers—the cut stalks from the florists, the bouquets from the hothouses and the little bunch of wild violets—were taken away in a wagon to a hospital. The sick have their Easter on Monday.

It was in a long white floored ward. Near the end of it stood an iron cot by a window. This was Jim's cot. Jim was a newsboy before a street car had cut off one of his legs. Before that he had been in the Fresh Air fund, and he loved the country with a love that the real country boy never dreams of until he has grown to be a city man.

They carried down this long ward these fine flowers from the Easter altar—roses, orchids, lilies and still more roses. Their fragrance made the air heavy, and the lame boy turned his face toward the window.

After all had been distributed a nurse brought to him a spray of wild violets. They were all that was left. He took them in his hands and pressed them to his lips. Then he said something about the country so low that the nurse couldn't catch it and fell asleep.

A Famous Egg Dance.

There is a pretty account of the marriage of Marguerite of Austria with Philibert, the handsome duke of Savoy. It is called "Marriage aux oeufs." She had come to the castle of Brae, in the charming district of Bresse, lying on the western slopes of the Alps. Here the rich princess kept open house, and Philibert, who was hunting in the neighborhood, came to pay his court to her.

It was Easter Monday, and high and low danced together on the green.

A hundred eggs were scattered in a level space, covered with sand, and a lad and lass, holding each other by the hand, came forward to execute a dance of the country. According to the ancient custom, if they succeeded in finishing the braule without breaking a single egg they became affianced.

Then Philibert, radiant with youth and happiness, appeared upon the scene. He bent his knees before the noble chatelaine and besought her hospitality. He proposed to her to try the egg fortune. She accepted. Their grace and beauty charmed the onlookers, and they succeeded, without a single crash, in threading the perilous maze.

"Savoy and Austria!" shouted the crowd. And she said, "Let us adopt the custom of Bresse."

They were married and enjoyed a few years of exquisite happiness. Then the beloved husband died. Marguerite survived him long, but never forgot him.

EASTER LILIES.

In purple and crimson glory
The Easter sunlight poured
A flood through the chancel windows
In the temple of our Lord.
Its waves passed over the altar
To bathe the cross with their glow
And stain the lilies with crimson,
Like sunset over the snow.

Till every fragrant chalice
Seemed filled to the brim with wine,
Distilling there into vapor
And rising in clouds divine.
Farther and farther the incense
Its delicate perfume spread,
Like loving thoughts sent earthward
By souls of our happy dead.

With prayers from our hearts uprising,
Which mingled and seemed to reach
Through the space 'twixt earth and heaven
So blending them each with each,
That my soul could feel the presence,
The smile and the tender eyes
Of one who gathers the lilies
In gardens of paradise.

—H. F. Blodgett.

Has the Most Legs.

The little creature which bears the distinction of owning more legs and feet than any other known organized being is the milleped, which literally means "thousand footed." There are several species of these curious worms, all possessing the characteristic of having a many segmented body, each segment provided with a pair of legs. Unlike the centipeds—"hundred footed"—they are perfectly harmless.—St. Louis Republic.

An Optimist.

"My husband," said Mrs. Sharp, "is one of the most cheerful of optimists"—

"Indeed!"

"Oh, yes; he never doubts his own judgment."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The first watches, made at Nuremberg and called "Nuremberg eggs," commanded nearly $500.

The Discovery Saved His Life,

Mr. G. Caillonette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill, says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at M. A. Toulson's Drug Store.

WITHIN CLOISTERS.

Solemn Services of Holy Week Behind Convent Walls.

The world is very wide awake and noisy in the spring of Easter week. On the street the boys sell huge bouquets, crying their blooming wares with hoarse voices. In the shops the tired saleswomen work early and late. In the churches there are crowds of chattering people who make wreaths and talk in garrulous fashion. There are rooms where the gaslight burns far into the spring morning. That is where the weary dressmaker is hurrying her work.

The orchestras are rehearsing new music, the actresses are planning new dresses, the florists are haggling about the price of a rose, the choir leaders are nervous and anxious, the new clergymen are wondering if their Easter service will be a success, and there are still jealousy and heartache among the women over their Easter bonnets.

In the convent garden it is very quiet and different, says the San Francisco Examiner. The lilac tree near the wall is in bloom, and the little altar of the Blessed Virgin in the arbor is draped with the yellow sprays of the blossoming currant. There is no one in the garden except a bent little sister, with a sweet, worn face. She is watering a little bed of pansies, but inside the big brick convent there is a sound of many feet. The sewing class is just over, and the girls are filing out into the study hall to put away their workboxes—the big, cool, clean study hall, with its shining floor and very straight clean chairs.

As the girls enter they drop a deep courtesy to a tall figure robed in black, which sits upon the platform. Then each girl, after she puts away her box, walks quietly to one of the chairs. The tall nun at the desk shuts a little signal box she holds in her hand, there is a sudden rap, and all the girls are seated.

"Children," says the religieuse, "we are entering upon a season of great joy. Let us prepare ourselves. Tonight the retreat will begin."

She makes a pretty, gentle little address and urges every child to put away all worldly thoughts and make herself worthy to celebrate the glorious Easter. She calls them children, yet there are girls of 18 or 20 among the crowd. In a convent every one is a child.

The refectory is big and bare and set round with long tables. There is a reading desk in the middle, but no one reads tonight. The retreat has begun. Silent sisters enter noiselessly and pass the food to the silent girls. When the meal is done, there is a big dish of warm water passed. Each girl thrusts in her spoon, her knife and her fork and wipes them.

It is warm in the garden yet, and the girls go out there. They walk in little groups of three and five. A few of them walk alone. All of them are telling their beads, with a murmur as of humming bees. The big bell rings. It's time for evening prayers. There is a snap of the signal box; every one rises. Another snap; they form in line. Another snap; they turn and walk from the room, their footsteps echoing on the hard floors. At the door they turn and courtesy.

It is 7:30 o'clock—bedtime at the convent. There is a glimmer of light in the west yet, but the blinds are closely drawn. Up stairs in the dormitory there are rows and rows of white beds, hung with snowy curtains. In the middle of the room is a table with a slate on it. If any one wants a collar or a handkerchief, she writes upon the slate and signs her number. In the morning the article she asked for will be there, folded upon her neat pile of clothing.

In a few minutes the rustling behind the white curtains ceases. A velvet footed religieuse walks from bed to bed to see that all are quiet. Then her low voice sounds distinctly through the room:

"Sacred heart of Jesus, immaculate heart of Mary."

From behind the curtain comes the answer, "I give you my heart."

Up in the chapel the nuns are praying—praying that the coming retreat may be full of blessings to the "children of the Sacred Heart."

Before 6 o'clock the next morning there is a long line of veiled figures filing into the chapel. They are all plainly clad and dressed in black. Each one carries a prayer book and her beads. The candles on the altar twinkle bright, yet far away. The incense swingers swing their burden monotonously. The breath of the lilac comes in at the window, and the day is begun. There are services in the chapel many times that day.

On Good Friday morning the very small children are just a little frightened when they see the chapel. The golden draperies are gone from the altar, the flowers have vanished, and all the twinkling lights are gone. It is gloomy and grewsome in the chapel when the altar lights are gone.

In front of the altar a row of nuns kneel with their arms out like a cross. Some of the larger girls are allowed to kneel there, too, and many of them are sobbing. One of them stays so long that she is borne out fainting. To the younger children the gentle sisters tell the old, old story of the dreadful day when Christ was crucified. It is so quiet and so dark in the chapel and the face of the pictured Christ is so sad that the little ones are frightened.

When the evening prayers are said, the girlish voices pour in the gloomy grandeur of the "Stabat Mater."

Long after the lights in the dormitory are out the nuns kneel before the altar with outstretched arms, and the little children dream that night of tears.

The next day there are prayers and vespers again. The children hope. Their sins begin to seem less hopeless. In the evening there is confession.

Then comes the glad Easter morning. The girls put on snowy veils. The chapel is a blossom with flowers. There is a burst of ecstatic music.

"Kyrie Eleison—Christi Eleison."

The nuns' faces are alight with a glorious radiance. The lilac tree swings her purple and white branches like a censer.

Christ is risen.
He is risen indeed.

Valuable Instruments.

An Italian paper says that the violoncello upon which Signor Pratti plays is valued at $2,000. It is a Ruggueri instrument. According to this same authority, all the prominent fiddlers have small fortunes invested in their violins. Ysaye has a Guardagnini worth $1,200, and Jean Gerardy plays upon a Guarnerius, valued at $4,000. Dr. Joachim has a large collection of valuable violins. The Stradivarius that belonged to Ernst, and said to be worth $10,000, has come into the possession of Lady Halle.

Mosaic floors, laid with small pieces of different colored stones set in regular patterns, were known to the Egyptians 2300 B. C. In Babylon floors of this kind dated from 1100 B. C. They were common in the Athenian and Roman houses.
