"THE HAUNTED PALACE."

By SUSIE HALL.

There was once a palace built on a clearing which had been a woods. Very rich people at one time lived in this palace, finally they all died and the palace stood vacant; it remained in this condition for a number of years.

A wealthy merchant had some money stolen from him, a reward was offered to the one who would give any information about the money, a young man named Winters tried to gain the required information; he watched every place he could but nothing seemed to throw any light on the mystery. At last seeing a dim light in the basement of the old palace while strolling near he went and asked a friend to go with him to investigate. When they reached the palace they could not gain direct entrance at the basement, they climbed a rickety stairs on the outside and went into the room over the basement, looking through a knot hole in the floor they could see three men; they were all seated around a table on rude stools counting the money and laughing together. They could be seen only by the dim light of the candle, they had on very shabby clothing, two of them had beards the other did not. Winters and his friend thought they would then go to the village and report to the policemen, when they reached the place where they came up they found to their horror and amazement the steps were gone.

They kept very quiet for they knew if the robbers should hear them they would be caught. They remained here for two days without any word to or from the village. They thought probably they would see someone that would help them, but they did not for very few people came near this place as it was said to be haunted. At last they took their garments and made a rope of them, Winters let his friend down and he went to the village for help. The robbers had gone away to hide in the forests when the day broke, Winter's friend came back and had ropes with him, with these he helped Winters down. A policeman and the rich merchant also came from the village with Winters' friend, they all went to the basement door, pried it open and got the money from an old chest where the robbers had hidden it.

The robbers came home that evening expecting to get the money and then escape on a northbound car that would leave the village that night at 11.30 o'clock. I imagine their feelings when they came back and found their money gone!

Winters and his friend received the reward that was offered. The robbers went away on the northbound train but not with the money as they had expected to. The rich merchant lives in the socalled "Haunted Palace" himself now and says he enjoys life more living in this place better than in any past house in which he has lived.

If you would go there now you would find the aged merchant with his hoary hair sitting in his old arm chair.

The Weather in April.—According to the forecast of Rev. Irl Hicks in Word and Works the coming month of April will not be as pleasant and mild as could be desired. Rev. Hicks predicts a storm period from 2nd to the 7th, having its center on the 4th. During this period rain, cloudiness and thunderstorms are predicted. A second re-actionary storm period is predicted from the 9th to the 12th. Late sleet, and snow in the north and west and decidely cooler weather in the middle east causing frost 11th to 15th, accompained by passible hail storms. The next storm period is about 22nd to 25th accompained by a series of thunderstorms. The last storm period is from 26th to 30th, having its center on the 27th, when, it is predicted, then will be severe thunderstorms in along the Atlantic coast.

THE BELLE OF THE TOWN.

AN UPPER COUNTY POET.

There is a girl in our town,
She don't live far away;
She is trying all the time
To catch a beau, they say.

She trys with all her might and main
To catch Harry, Tom or Bill;
She expects some day to accomplish this,
I hope the poor girl will.

At all the evening parties
She is always there, to make
Giggles and frowns at all the rest,
She always takes the cake.

She is just the very girl
To dance the real jig;
And her features would be charming
If her mouth was not so big.

'Tis bad to love and not be loved,
'Tis bad to be jealous, too;
I think she will have to change
In the future days. Don't you? S. Z.
