VALUABLE PROPERTY

FOR SALE.

IN CHANCERY. Hester L. D. Savage and others, vs. John G. W. Waters and others. } BY VIRTUE of a decree from the Honorable Judges of Dorchester county Court, sitting as a court of equity, I was appointed Trustee to dispose of certain real estate mentioned in the decree; and in pursuance thereof, I will sell in Vienna, at Silas Flemmings' tavern, on Saturday, 5th day of June next, the following valuable property, to wit:

That valuable Farm and premises near Jones' Mills, formerly in the occupation of Major John Mitchell: This Farm is situated on the main road leading from Cambridge to Vienna, about 3 miles from Vienna and fifteen miles from Cambridge, and is considered one of the most productive and valuable farms in the county; and contains about 340 acres: it has an excellent apple orchard, and dwelling, and out houses, in tolerable order. Included in this eligible tract is a reversionary right in those valuable Mills, now in the occupancy of Capt. Wm. Craft. The lease hold will expire in about 12 years. Also,

That valuable Farm situated on Chicamicomico River, near the Bridge, containing about 360 acres, which formerly belonged to the Messrs. Tripps, and was purchased by the late Robt. Dennis, under a decree from the Chancellor. This farm is also very desirable, the soil is first rate, and a large proportion of it is heavily timbered. Also,

A Water Lot, in Vienna, opposite the store of Jeremiah Colston, unoccupied.

The terms of the foregoing sale, will be a credit of 12 months, with interest from the day of sale, the purchaser or purchasers, giving bond or bonds, with approved security to the Trustee, as such, for the payment of the purchase money, with interest from the day of sale, and on the ratification of the sale, and on the payment of the whole purchase money, (and not before,) the trustee will, by a good deed, to be executed and acknowledged according to law, convey to the purchaser or purchasers, his, her or their heirs, the property to him, her or them sold, free, clear and discharged from all claim of the complainants, or of the defendants, and of those claiming from, by or under them, or either of them.

It is also ordered by the Court, that the creditors of the late Robert Dennis, do deposit their claims in the Clerk's office, within six months from the day of sale, with the proper vouchers thereof.

PORTRAIT

Of the late Luther Martin, Esquire.

[TO BE PUBLISHED BY HIS GRANDSON]

AT the earnest solicitation of many Gentlemen of the Bar, and other friends of that distinguished Jurist (the late JUDGE MARTIN,) the Publisher is induced to offer to the citizens of Maryland and the public generally, his PORTRAIT, now in his possession, taken from a likeness, said to be strikingly correct by the intimate friends and acquaintances of the deceased. It will be executed on copper by a first rate Artist, on a quarto medium sheet of a similar size of that of the late WILLIAM PINCKNEY, Esq. and be delivered to subscribers at $1 25, one fifth payable in advance to enable the publisher to proceed in the execution of the intended work. It will be furnished as soon as possible if sufficient encouragement should be offered. The citizens will be waited on in a few days for their subscriptions. May 15.

Eccleston Brown, vs Francis J. Webb, heir at law of James Webb. } IN CHANCERY, 3d May, 1830.

THE object of the petition filed in this cause is to obtain a decree for the recording of a deed executed by James Webb, deceased, conveying by said deed to the complainant, part of a tract of land called "Betty's Delight," and particularly described in said deed.

The petition states that the omission to record said deed was without any fraudulent design or intention whatever by any person—It is, therefore, adjudged and ordered, that the complainant by causing a copy of this order to be inserted for three successive weeks in the Cambridge Chronicle, before the third day of June next, give notice to the heirs at law of the said James Webb, deceased, or any persons who may be interested, of this application and of the substance and object of the petition, that they may be warned to appear in this Court, in person or by solicitor, before the twentieth day of September next, to shew cause, if any they have, why a decree should not pass as prayed. True copy.

CHESTER.

THIS justly celebrated little Horse will stand in Dorchester county this Season—commencing on Monday the 22d instant, at Cambridge—on Thursday the 25th, at New Market—on Saturday the 27th, at Buck Town—on Tuesday the 30th, at Church Creek—and on Thursday the 1st April at Corner's Store, (Neck), he will regularly attend these places, on those days of every other week, until the 20th of June.

Chester was got by Young Tom, out of a full bred Medley and Vingtun mare and is six years old this Spring.

Gentlemen desirous of raising saddle horses will seldom fail by breeding from a Tom, and I think I can say without fear of contradiction, that this Horse combines more advantages than any other Tom has ever done on this Shore, arising from the blood of his dam and his natural docile qualities, rarely met with in a Stud; he may be approached and handled by a stranger without fear, as he was never known to be out of temper—he is completely broke to any kind of gear, and a common observer will at one glance discover him to be a saddle horse of the first order.

Terms.—Two Dollars the single leap, Four Dollars the spring's chance, Seven Dollars to insure a mare in foal, and 25 cents, in each case, to the Groom.

100 Dollars Reward.

RANAWAY from the subscriber, living in Cambridge, on the 16th of last December, a negro man named CHARLES SMITH.—The said negro was hired during the last year to Mr. Jacob Pattison, on Taylor's Island, where, in consequence of attachments there formed, it is believed he now lurks. Charles is about 25 years of age, above the ordinary size, and of robust appearance—He has a scar on the side of his mouth, occasioned by a burn, which is so notable a mark as to render it impossible not to be observed. As circumstances render it probable that he has fled to Baltimore, the subscriber is induced to offer a reward of 40 dollars for his apprehension in this county—a reward of 75 dollars if taken out of the county—and the above reward if taken out of the state and deposited in some jail whereby she gets him. BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT

THE WIND.

There is a grandeur in the reckless upheavings of the ocean, when the tempest arouses its billows from their secret depths—there is a terror in the convulsive throes of the giant earthquake, when its mysterious energies combine to shake the foundations of the vast globe—and a beauty in the calm sunshine, when it sheds its rich and mantling glory over field and mountain, lake and river,—that lifts the soul aloft with enthusiasm, depresses it with fear, or animates it with pure and elevated emotions, as their different and various phenomena prevail; but there is another of the great and living intelligences of nature, that claims a more extended domination, and awakens a separate and untaught feeling. It is the viewless, yet mighty WIND—whether breathing in the soft and grateful air of summer, or swelling in the terrific strivings of the winter storm—whether it gently stirs the leaf on the green bough of the forest, or tears the oak from its ancient and rooted bed—alike it tells of majesty and power, and stands forth amid the wonders of creation, endowed with a spirit that mingles with the elements and moves them at its will. We feel it in the faint hues of twilight, fanning the cheek with its airy wings, and soothing the anguish of the troubled bosom: and when the big tornado comes bounding over the mountains, crashing the tall trees, and bringing desolation upon the beautiful and peaceful valley, we pause to contemplate the devastation of its awful footsteps, and raise our thoughts to the Being who "rides upon the whirlwind and directs the storm." It urges the gentle gale that wafts the mariner towards his destined haven, while the smoothly undulating sea sparkles in the sunbeams and dances beneath his prow; and when the wrathful hurricane booms along the surface of the waters and bows the gallant ship before the sweeping of its stormy pinions, it enters into and rules the wide commotion. And who is insensible to the discourse of its strong and emphatic language? who can listen to its tones when he stands upon the mountain top and hear them as they wail around him, and not to receive the impress of the saddened feeling they seem to so articulately express; or when the light breeze freshens, and springs up like a warrior armed for battle—when its rushings resemble the boundings of the warhorse as it comes careering past him, who does not catch the stirring impulse and respond to the thrilling of patriotic ardour!

When the poet wanders forth to mark the beauties of nature and feed his fancy with her glowing images, he welcomes the zephyr that sports around his path, laden with fragrance from the "sunny south;" for he feels that the sweetest inspiration of his lyre springs from the memoirs that gush up from their silent fount at the magic whisperings of its voice, and he woes its influence: he acknowledges poetry to be an inherent principle in the harmonies of the visible world, and catches its softer beauties from the mild and playful breeze, while the deep and rushing gale gives birth to its wildest intonations. Even in the crowded city, where the structures of human pride and human necessity encumber the fair surface of creation, the wind-god cheers the "peopled desert,," when he comes like a guardian angel to visit the cheeks of its pent-up inmates, and chase away the dense and noxious vapours that hover above its domes and spires, obscuring the splendour of the meridian sun. There the poet leans over the casement of his solitary chamber, as he bares his pale forehead in the shades of evening, when the tired wind comes in from the great deep and lingers as it passes along the hot walls of the "thronged and busy mart," ere it roams beside the winding river up to the solitudes of the green forest,—and indulges in his fanciful and lonely musings, or pours forth his willing tribute to the Eolian deity, in numbers like to these:—

"Spirit that breathest through my lattice, thou
That cool'st the twilight of the sultry day,
Gratefully flows thy freshness round my brow;
Thou hast been out upon the deep at play,
Riding all day the wild blue waves till now,
Roughening their crests, and scattering high their spray,
And swelling the white sail. I welcome thee
To the scorched land, thou wanderer of the sea!

"Nor I alone—a thousand bosoms round
Inhale thee in the fullness of delight;
And languid forms rise up, and pulses bound
Lovelier, at coming of the wind at night;
And languishing to hear thy grateful sound,
Lies the vast inland stretched beyond the sight:
Go forth into the gathering shade—go forth,
God's blessing breathed upon the fainting earth!

"Go rock the little wood-bird in his nest,
Curl the still waters bright with stars, and rouse
The wide old wood from his majestic rest—
Summoning from the innumerable boughs,
The strange deep harmonies that haunt his breast;
