CHRONICLE.

"SALUS POPULI SUPREMA EST LEX."

DAVID P. HOGE--EDITOR.

Cambridge, Maryland:

SATURDAY MORNING, JANUARY 28 1837.

☞The Orphans' Court of this county wil sit on Monday week 30th instant.

The Jury in the case of R. H. White, indicted for the burning of the Treasury building in Washington, have rendered a verdict finding the prisoner guilty of the offence a charged, but not guilty, on the ground tha the prosecution was not commenced within two years, the time prescribed by law. This verdict gave rise to argument, as it was considered doubtful whether it was to be construed as a verdict of acquittal or not. Subsequently the jury having retired, returned a verdict of not guilty.

In the course of this trial one of the witnesses gave a curious account of the manner in which locked doors may be opened, by means of a wire instrument tempered hard which he exhibited to the court. This wire is introduced through the key hole and extended to the handle of the key of which it takes hold, and enables the operator to turn it about at pleasure. Locking a door inside and leaving the key in, is therefore, no security against the ingenious contrivances of rogues in these days of improvement. Another instrument equally or more efficacious was also shown and described by this witness. It was made so as to screw on to that part of the key which projects beyond the wards of the lock, towards the outside of the door. By this instrument, which was described as one of English invention, it is said that doors may be opened with the greatest facility, and without making the least noise. Henry White, the brother of R. H. White, having been tried for the offence for which the latter was prosecuted, has been found guilty.

The expunging resolutions have been passed by the Senate of the United States, and black lines have been drawn around one of the proceedings of that body, solemnly adopted, and deliberately recorded on the journals There were few present of the members of the Senate to witness the disgraceful operation, the opposition members retiring in disgust, and leaving the wilful violators of the constitution, to perpetrate the deed of darkness in the mode which might seem to them proper, and with the unenviable feelings of gratification which its commission, no doubt, excited in the bosoms of the authors of the measure.

We publish to day, a petition addressed to the General Assembly of New Jersey, praying the passage of a law to prevent the influx of colored persons from other States.—Such a law as the petition prays, ought to be enacted by the Legislatures of all the non slaveholding States.

Our acknowledgements are due to the Hon John N. Steele for various public documents.

A projet of reform, it will be perceived, has been presented to the committee of the House of Delegates which has charge of the subject, and one that will probably be adopted by the House and the Senate. If the desired alterations in the Constitution can be made by the Legislature, we see no necessity for the parade of a Convention It is true that conventions have been called in other States, whose labors have proved satisfactory to the people; but of late too much power has been claimed for such bodies, and the people would do well not to be too confiding. If a convention really were empowered to do what the letter of Mr. Dallas and the Van Buren press throughout the country set down, as indubitably within the range of the legitimate authority of such assemblies, we should never give our voice in favor of one. But we do not believe that conventions possess such powers; and we are, therefore, not opposed to the call of them for the alteration of State constitutions, when such a measure is necessary, to restore harmony and give satisfaction to the people of a State.—These desirable ends, we trust, can be attained in Maryland by the action of the Legislature, and as that body seems to be earnestly bent upon the work of reform, we augur much good as the result of their proceedings.

tes, to which was referred the resolution proposing an inquiry into the expediency of passing a law to prohibit the carrying of deadly weapons, has made a report declaring it inexpedient to attempt the prevention of the practice by penal enactment. The committee, or a majority thereof, inclined to the opinion, that the evil to which the resolution referred, should be left for correction to the "moral sense of the community;" and that no law ought to impose a penalty until by some "overt act of crime" the intention o wearing deadly weapons was made manifest This opinion appears to us correct. The report of the majority was sustained by the House, though a counter report was made by the mover of the resolution for the inquiry, maintaining and urging the necessity of preventive legislation.

A beautiful illustration of the power of a military chieftain with an army at his back, has been afforded in the new Republic of Texas. The Congress passed a resolution declaring that the President should not release the prisoners of war, Santa Anna and Almonte, without the concurrence of the Senate, and that during the recess of that body the President should not exercise the power of releasing said prisoners, which, it was understood he claimed, and intended to exercise. Gen. Houston (the President,) immediately vetoed the resolution; and although it was subsequently passed by two thirds of the two Houses of the Texan Legislature, (the number requisite to give it the validity of a law even without the assent of the President,) yet he disregarded that fact, and set the prisoners at liberty, pronouncing "the resolution unconstitutional and a usurpation of his executive authority." The General is sustained by the army, and the Congress, of course, have nothing more to say against such odds. It is presumed the Texan Chief has imbibed his ideas of Constitutional power and duty, from the distinguished Chieftain at the head of our Republic, who thinks, that each department of the Government, and every officer under it, are the exclusive judges of the nature and extent of their authority, and have a right to act according to their own construction of the Constitution, uncontrolled by the contrary expositions which that instrument may have received.

It is not deemed proper to reply to the article in the last "Aurora," the controversy having assumed an aspect, in the last "Chronicle," which was given it, with the view of bringing it to a close.

A Borough Election.--'Well, Sam,' said Mr. Pickwick, as his valet appeared at his bedroom door, just as he was concluding his toilet—'all alive to day, I suppose?'

'Reg'lar game, sir,' replied Mr. Weller; 'our people's a collecting down at the Town Arms, and they're a-hollering themselves hoarse already.'

'Ah,' said Mr. Pickwick, 'do they seem devoted to their party, Sam?'

'Never see such dewotion in my life, sir.'

'Energetic, eh?' said Mr. Pickwick.

'Uncommon,' replied Sam; 'I never see men eat and drink so much afore. I wonder they a'nt afeered o' bustin.'

'That's the mistaken kindness of the gentry here,' said Mr. Pickwick.

'Wherry likely,' replied Sam, briefly.

'Fine, fresh, hearty fellows they seem,' said Mr. Pickwick, glancing from the window.

'Werry fresh, replied Sam; 'me and the two waiters at the Peacock, has been pumpin over the independent woters as supped here last night.'

'Pumping over independent voters!' exclaimed Mr Pickwick.

'Yes,' said his attendant; 'every man slept vere he fell down; we dragged 'm out, one by one, this morning and put 'em under the pump, and they are in a reg'lar fine order now. Shillin' a head the committee paid for that 'ere job.'

'Can such things be!' exclaimed the astonished Mr. Pickwick.

'Lord bless your heart, sir,' said Sam, 'why where was you half baptised?'—that's nothin' that a'nt.'

'Nothing!' said Mr. P.

'Nothin' at all, sir,' replied his attendant. 'The night afore the last day o' the election here, the deposite party bribed the bar-maid at the Town Arms, to hocus the brandy and water of fourteen unpolled electors as was stopping in the house.'

'What do you mean by hocussing, brandy and water?' inquired Mr. P.

'Puttin' laud'num in it,' said Sam. 'Blessed if she didn't send 'em all to sleep till twelve hours after the election was over. They took one man to the booth in a truck, fast asleep, by way of experiment, but it was no go—they wouldn't poll him; so they brought him back, and put him to bed again,

'Strange practices, these,' said Mr. Pickwick.

DORCHESTER HOUSE.

THE undersigned respectfully announces to his friends and the public generally that he has taken that well-known

Tavern House

IN THE TOWN OF CAMBRIDGE

lately occupied by Mr. John Bradshaw, (which will in future be styled the "DORCHESTER HOUSE,") where he designs keeping a first rate establishment for the accommodation of all, and every person, who may favor him with their patronage. His TABLE will at all times be furnished with the best the market will afford. His BAR is now, and will continue to be, stocked with pure and unadulterated Liquors, of every variety; to attend in which he has procured the valuable services of Mr Thomas Smith, who will always be ready to administer to the comforts of visiters. To attend his STABLES, he has careful and experienced Ostlers, which, together with his personal knowledge of the character and habits of that most valuable of animals, will, he flatters himself, afford ample assurance that all horses left in his charge will be well attended to. The House, in the course of the ensuing summer, will undergo a thorough repair, and be very considerably enlarged.

The advantages of s location must be acknowledged by all who visit it; for, while it is in the middle of the village, it is yet retired and quiet, it stands on a fine airy situation, about equi-distant from either end of the town.

The undersigned pledges himself to his patrons that his effort to render their sojourn with him agreeable shall be unremitting, and that nothing shall be left undone to accomplish that object he, therefore, respectfully solicits a share of the patronage of an enlightened public.

The public's obedient servant,

WILIAM H. YATES.

TAILORING.

The Subscriber

BEGS leave respectfully to announce to his friends and the public, that he still carries on the

Tailoring Business

IN ALL ITS DIFFERENT BRANCHES,

At his old stand, in Cambridge.

He has lately procured a NEW SYSTEM OF CUTTING OUT GARMENTS, which has never been used before in this part of the State. His adjusted upon a mathematical principle and cannot fail to succeed in all cases. Upon this plan, the science of cutting clothes is no longer uncertain, and dependent upon the eye and accident, for a good fit. It is as unerring as the truths of geometry. He congratulates himself and his friends upon the possession of this long-sought desideratum. He is prepared to make up clothes for his patrons in the neatest and most fashionable style having made an arrangement to procure the of the season. His work shall be finished in the best manner, and warrants his garments to fit. Having been located in this place for the last twelve years, he returns his acknowledgments to his friends and the public, for the flattering encouragement they have bestowed upon him. He pledges himself to devote his most assiduous attention to accommodate those who may wish work to his care. In conclusion, he invites all to call, and he flatters himself they will be entirely satisfied that he has promised nothing but what he will most rigidly fulfil.

The public's obedient servant,

Chancery Re-Sale.

THE purchaser of the Real Estate of which Joseph and John Douglass were once seized, to wit: Part of Smith's Ending, part of Adam's Dear Purchase, and part of Addition to Bartlett's Meadows, containing

472 ACRES,

having failed to give the requisite security for the payment of the purchase money, I will re-sell the same, at the risk of the purchaser, on next, unless the required security shall have been given. Joseph Douglass sold his interest in this land to William Wheatley, and being incapable of division will be sold and the proceeds distributed to the several parties entitled.

MONDAY, the 20th day of FEBRUARY,

The sale will take place at the Court House door, in Cambridge, at 12 o'clock, noon; and the terms of sale will be one fourth cash on the day of sale, the balance in six and twelve months from the day of sale, with interest on the whole sum, with bond and security approved by the trustee.

Chancery Sale.

BY virtue of a decree of the High Court of Chancery, I will offer at public sale, to the highest and best bidder, at the Court House door, in the town of Cambridge, at the hour of 12 o'clock, M., on MONDAY, the 13th of February next, more or less, of valuable wood and cleared LAND, being part of the tract called "Goodrich's Choice," "Rochester," and "Trippe's Good Luck," comprising within its limits the Farm upon which William Bonner, Jr., formerly resided. This property is situated in Cabin Creek Neck, in the New Market District of this county, and distant about a mile from navigable water. The improvements upon it are highly respectable; I understand the soil is reasonably productive, and the situation very conducive to health. The title is in fee simple, and believed to be indisputable. Any further description of the premises is deemed unnecessary, as those who are disposed to purchase, will examine for themselves.

200 ACRES,

According to the terms of the decree, one third of the purchase money must be paid on the day of sale, and the residue in equal instalments, upon a credit of six and twelve months, with interest on each instalment from the day of sale, to be secured by obligation with security to be approved by the trustee. As soon as the entire purchase money is paid, I will convey the property to the purchaser or purchasers.

NOTICE.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the public that he has removed from the house which he lately occupied, and kept as a tavern, to his recently erected establishment, on Main street, Cambridge, where he will continue his former business. His present stand, nearly opposite the Court House, and the nearest public house to Cambridge to the river, is believed to be one of the most extensive and commodious of its kind on the Eastern Shore. Tendering his grateful acknowledgments to those who have heretofore with so much liberality extended to him their patronage, and indulging the hope that he will hereafter merit and receive their countenance and support, he pledges his assiduous attention to his business, and the employment of his best exertions to please and give satisfaction to them and others who may favor him with their custom.—His Bar will at all times be supplied with choice wines and liquors, and his table with the best the market affords.

☞Boarders will, as hitherto, be taken by the year, month, week or day, on moderate terms.

OF THE

COMMISSIONERS OF THE TOWN

OF CAMBRIDGE.

WHEREAS, on application by petition in writing of a number of the citizens of the Town of Cambridge, for the appointment of a Wood Corder or Wood Corders for the said town, It was ordered and determined that Messrs. George W. Wingate and William R. Perry be, and they are hereby, appointed Wood Corders for the said town; whose duty it shall be to measure all wood brought to the said town for sale, and to have for their services six and a quarter cents per cord, and two cents by the quarter of cord, for all wood by them or either of them measured, and so in proportion for a less quantity, to be paid in each instance at the time by the seller.

And it was further ordered and ordained, That if any peason or persons shall wilfully neglect the above Ordinance, or violate the same by the sale of wood without measurement in the said town, every such person or persons shall incur the penalty of fifty cents for every cord so sold, and so in proportion for a less quantity—one half of such fine to be paid to the Wood Corders equally, and the other half to the Bailiff for the use of the town; the same to be recovered under the Act of Assembly of 1793, chapter 66, section 23, before a Justice of the Peace.

WHEREAS, the Commissioners believe that the 10th section of the Act of Assembly of 1831, chapter 323, (which renders it unlawful for any retailer, ordinary keeper, or other persons, at any time to sell ardent spirits to any free negro, mulatto or slave, without the license or permit therein prescribed,) is habitually violated by some persons, It is, therefore, ordered and determined, and it is hereby declared to be the duty of the Bailiff to report to the Commissioners of the Town any retailer, ordinary keeper or other person who shall sell any ardent spirits after 8 o'clock at night in the months of October, November, December, January, February and March, or after 9 o'clock at night in any other month.

And it is thereupon unanimously Resolved, That if any information shall be given by the Bailiff, or any other person, of the violation of the above Ordinance, the Commissioners do hereby unanimously pledge themselves to make application in writing to the County Court, if in session, or to the Orphans' Court, for a discontinuance or withdrawal of the license of any such delinquent.

Resolved, That the above Ordinances be published three times in the Cambridge Chronicle and Dorchester Aurora.

By order,

WILLIAM REA, Clerk.
