ANOTHER BONAPARTE COMING TO AMERICA.—Prince Pietro (son of Lucien) Bonaparte, whose sentence of death has lately been commuted by the Pope to banishment, embarked at Leghorn on the 17th February for America.—French paper.

PROPHECY OF MR. WEBSTER.

"Loking to the state of things actually existing around us," said Mr, Webster in 1833—94, "looking to the great number of State banks already existing and to the vast amount of paper issued by these banks—considering that, in the very nature of things, this paper must be limited & local in its credit and circulation, I confess I see nothing but a well conducted National Bank which is likely to afford any guard against excessive paper issues, or which can furnish a sound and uniform currency to every part of the United States. This is not only a question of finance—it not only respects the operations of the Treasury—but it rises to the character of a high political question. It respects the currency, the actual money, the measure of value of all property and all labor in the United States. I hardly know any thing less consistent with our public duty and our high trust, nor any thing more likely to disturb the harmonious relations of the States, in all affairs of business and life, than for Congress to abandon all care and control over the Currency, and to throw the whole money system of the country into the hands of four and twenty State Legislatures."

"We are waging war"—said Mr. Webster, when he introduced his bill for the temporary recharter of the Bank—"for the benefit of the poor! We slay that monster, the Bank, that we may defeat the unjust purposes of the rich, and elevate and protect the poor! And what is the effect of all this? What happens to the poor and all the middling classes in consequence of this warfare? They are all at the feet of the capitalists. They are in the jaws of usury. Look to the rates of interest amounting to twenty, thirty, fifty per cent. Sir, this measure of Government has transferred millions on millions of hard earned property in the shape of extra interest, from the industrious classes to the capitalists, from the poor to the rich. And this is called putting down a monied aristocracy! Sir, there are thousands of families who have diminished, not their luxuries, not their amusements, but their meat and their bread that they might be able to save their credit by paying enormous interest.—And there are other thousands, who having lost their employment, have lost every thing, and who yet hear, amidst the bitterness of their anguish, that the great motive of the Government is kindness to the poor!"

Many of the Van Buren presses are constantly harping on the length of time consumed by Messrs. Wise and Peyton at the close of people, that the failure to pass the appropriation bill, whereby the great works of the country will be injured and retarded, is owing to the time thus consumed by these two great champions of constitutional law and freedom. What are the facts of the case? The bill providing for various reductions in the revenue of the country, and various changes in the land system, had been passed by the administration majority in the Senate of the U. S. and sent down to the House of Representatives for their concurrence. The House immediately took up the bill and passed it as sent from the Senate, with the exception of an additional section, proposed by Mr. John Bell, providing for the distribution of the surplus, if any should exist, after a reservation of five millions, beyond the demand of Government, as a contingent fund.— The bill thus amended, was sent back to the Senate, and that by the Van Buren Senate, on a strictly party vote rejected. The excuse given, by that party, for this outrage upon a people, for this blow, to the great works and defences of a nation, was, they were opposed to a surplus, and intended that none should exist, and therefore they would provide for the distribution of none; but the amendment of Mr. Bell in the event of no surplus existing was harmless—it could not distribute it, if there was none in the Treasury. Upon this miserable pretext, the Van Buren party in the Senate predicate their defence for defeating a measure which passed the House of Representatives, the immediate democratic branch of the government, by a majority of two thirds—and yet that party assume to be the people's party and the people's friends—ah, and the great democratic party too—and now when an outraged people are beginning to arouse to a proper estimate of such conduct, they are falsely told that Whig Orators consumed the time of the House in nine hour speeches, and prevented the passage of important measures.—The speeches of Wise and Peyton, were made after the fate of all the great measures were sealed, and we think that the time was well spent—an administration was in its last moments, that will be remembered for centuries—an administration that has warred on every cherished institution of the land, and on the great principles of constitutional law and right. The effect of some of those measures is now heavily pressing on the country and will ruin thousands. If men of patriotism gave vent to their feelings either in indignant invective against its misdeeds, or in jubilee of its end and dissolution, it is not to be wondered at. For ourselves we repeat, we think the time well spent, and to prove it we intend in our next to give some extracts from the speeches.—Easton Gaz.

ACCOMMODATING.—A giddy crack brained chap, having pronounced 'O yes," most audible three times, in New Market, collected a number of persons together, and made the following proposals to the gapers; "Who wants to buy a horse that can walk five miles an hour, trot eighteen, and gallop twenty?" "I do," said a gentleman, with manifest eagerness. "Then," replied the crier, "If I see such an animal, I will be sure to let you know."

"I say, Pomp, what be de difrence 'tween poetry, and de wat ye call plank verse?" "Why I gip you something Scip, I tink what be lustration of de subject:—

Go down to Mill Dam
And fall down slam—
dat be poetry; but
Go down to Mill Dam
And fall down whappo—
dat be plank verse."

The cultivation of fine tobacco for Segars is a profitable pursuit in Florida.—In due time, we doubt not, Cuba will find a strong competitor in Florida, for the supply of the article. The Apalachicola Gazette of the 8th, to show its profitableness says—

An acre of ground will yield 500 to 800 lbs. of clear tobacco; as much as 1200 lbs has been actually obtained from three cuttings.

This Tobacco is never sold, but employed by the Planter himself in the already much celebrated Florida segars, for which a vast number of twisters are employed.

A box of one thousand of these segars will weigh 7 a 8 lbs. neat. The twisting and expenses are from 3 to 4 dollars per 1000, and the sale is ready at 12 a 15 dollars per box, for there is not a supply for one quarter part of the demand.

Taking the 600 lbs. as a low average rate per acre, and dividing it by the highest rate, 8 lbs. or 1000 segars; the result is 75 boxes of a thousand. and multiplying this last by 12 dollars the lowest price of sale there results 900 dollars for gross produce of an acre, but there are expences say of 300 dollars for twisting, &c., at 4 dollars per thousand, which deducted. would leave 600 dollars for clear produce of an acre, or from the easy labor of one hand—one hand can tend two acres.

"Turn out, turn out, or by golly I'll serve you as I did a man t'other day," hollowed a Jonathan, who with his gal in the lumber box, was about coming in contact with a dandy in his fine gig.—The affrighted beau turned out for he was sadly terrified at the mysterious threat, and as brother Jonathan was passing, asked how he served the other man.? "Why, I turned out myself."

A loafer who let himself was asked what he could do, to which he replied "split rails." His employer sent him to the woods; but having little regard to the rift, set himself to work chopping it. He found it impossible to make even the first impressions, so curly was the grain. Getting discouraged, he left his axe in the tree, when a thunder tempest arose and the axe attracted the lightning, when he exclaimed, Oh crackey! I guess you've got your match now.
