AN OLD MAN'S TRIBUTE.

An Ohio Fruit Raiser, 78 Years Old, Cured of a Terrible Case After Ten Years of Suffering.

When suffering daily torture
From backache, rheumatic pain,
Any ill of kidneys or bladder,
Turn to Doan's Kidney Pills.
A cure endorsed by thousands.
Read an old man's tribute.

Sidney Justus, fruit dealer, of Mentor, Ohio, says: "I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills of a severe case of kidney trouble of eight or ten years' standing. I suffered the most severe backache and other pains in the region of the kidneys. These were especially severe when stooping to lift anything, and often I could hardly straighten my back. The aching was bad in the daytime, but just as bad at night, and I was always lame in the morning. I was bothered with rheumatic pains and dropsical swelling of the feet. The urinary passages were painful, and the secretions were discolored and so free that often I had to rise at night. I felt tired all day. Half a box served to relieve me, and three boxes effected a permanent cure."

SIDNEY JUSTUS.

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Justus will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

But we are of value to the state. We are expected to mould the future men and women—to form their character—and I say without fear of contradiction that wherever you find a good school, there you will find, also, a more intelligent and thrifty population. The teacher helps the state just as efficietly as the Judge, the State's Attorney or the Clerk of the Court—then pay them accordingly. The High School Principals in this state should be paid more. County clerks receive about $2000 or $2500 per year and perhaps more. The High School Principal receives an average of $973.93 possibly one-third as much. Then why not pay the teachers more? Is it not just as important to the interest of the state and to the people of the state to have a wise, honest and efficient principal as it is to have a wise, honest and efficient clerk of the court?

Increased salary would add to the dignity of the position, raise the standards of educations and promote all the interests of a refined civilization.

We are dispensers of knowledge and culture. Now as we are placed at a small money value, these things that we stand for are placed below par. Knowledge has no financial value; culture is at a discount. The finer things of life are neglected and the ignorant are the important ones. This is true beyond a doubt. Even college professors are poorly paid. Sometime ago I went into the home of an eminent professor, the author of many important books, a wise and learned teacher. There were all around the signs, is not of proverty at least of a meager provision of the comforts of life. Yet that man had refined tastes. He loved the beautiful in art and in literature yet had not the means to gratify his desire in even a slight degree. On the other side of the street lived the other man—a business man. His home was furnished luxuriously. Now I would not say a word against this—for we all would do it, if we could. But somehow it doesn't seem that the adjustment is right. Should we not change it? If the butcher charges us twenty-five cents a lb. for meat he should not grumble if we charge him 16⅔ cents tax for the mental food of his boy—the idol of his heart. If the lawyer or the doctor charges us five dollars a minute, should they not be willing to help pay us five dollars a day? I believe these matters should be readjusted.

Now, in conclusion, in view of what we now get, in view of what we give and have to prepare for, in view of our service to the state, in the name of justice and right, I make a plea for raising the salaries of our Maryland teachers. The last Legislature reduced the tax rate for educational purposes from 19¾ cents to 16 cents! Shame on our state, thus to take a backward step! and all honer to that priceless champion of teachers' rights, Mr. Lee Carey, of Worcester, who kept the rate from going still lower. Let us not rest, ladies and gentlemen, until we regain our rights, and let us not be content until the next Legislature atones in full measure for the crime committeed upon all the best interests of "Maryland, My Maryland."

July Weather Forecasts.

The weather prophet for July forecasts many thunder storms and very many torrid days. Rev. Ira Hicks, of St. Louis, Missouri, who has the confidence of very many people throughout the country, predicts fierce storm periods during the month, the first being central on July 5th and a very warm wave during the first ten days of the month. Heavy rain, hail and thunder storms from the 4th to the 7th, followed by unseasonably cool weather. Second or reactionary storm period on the 10th, 11th and 12th. The third storm period covers the 15th to the 19th and during this period the warmest weather of the month is predicted. The fourth or reactionary storm is on the 22nd and the 23rd, in which storms and earthquake disturbances are forecasted. The fifth and last regular storm period runs from the 26th to the 30th. During this period frequent thunder storms are forecasted. Note these predicts and see whether correct or not. Mr. Hicks makes all his forecasts from the position of the planets.

ADVERTISING A BOOK.

How the Author of "Valerie" Captured Parisians Long Ago.

We had some notes a little while ago on the methods which some authors have adopted for the advertisement of their books. A correspondent sends us an example of this sort of thing, which is the better worth quoting because we have never seen it quoted in this connection before. It is taken from a life of Mme. de Krudner, whose novel "Valerie" appeared shortly after Mme. de Stael's "Delphine." "You know quite well," the author wrote to a friend, "that neither talent nor genius nor the excellence of one's intentions is sufficient to insure a success. Everything demands some charlatanism." And the biographer proceeds to tell us how she translated her doctrine into action.

During several days, he writes, she made the round of the fashionable shops incognito, asking sometimes for shawls, sometimes for hats, feathers, wreaths or ribbons, all "a la Valerie." When they saw this beautiful and elegant stranger step out of her carriage with an air of assurance and ask for fancy articles which she invented on the spur of the moment the shopkeepers were seized with a polite desire to satisfy her by any means in their power. Moreover, the lady would soon pretend to recognize the article she had asked for. And if the unfortunate shopgirls, taken aback by such unusual demands, looked puzzled Mme. de Krudner would smile graciously and pity them for their ignorance of the new novel, thus turning them all into eager readers of "Valerie." Then, laden with purchases, she would drive off to another shop, pretending to search for that which existed only in her imagination. Thanks to these maneuvers, she succeeded in exciting such ardent competition in honor of her heroine that for a week at least the shops sold everything "a la Valerie." Her own friends, the innocent accomplices in her stratagem, also visited shops on her recommendation, thus carrying the fame of her book through the Faubourg Saint-Germain and the Chaussee d'Antin.—London Academy.

HUNTING VIOLINS.

Tarisio Was Found Dead Surrounded by Valuable Instruments.

Violin makers now and again come upon pieces of wood of phenomenal resonance and beauty, and when they do we may be sure they give special care to the making and finishing of the instrument formed of the wood. Stradivarius, at any rate, did. In 1716 he had a piece of luck in this particular, and his luck went into an instrument with which he fell so much in love that he absolutely refused to sell it or allow it to be played upon by any hands but his own. He kept it locked up, and when he died at the advanced age of ninety-three he bequeathed it to his sons. By and by an enthusiastic collector named Salabue got on the scent of this instrument, and about the year 1760 he acquired it—at what figure is not known—from one of the great man's sons.

Salabue cherished it until his death, about 1827, and then a strange character appears on the scene as purchaser. This was an eccentric old fellow named Luigi Tarisio, who, abandoning his trade as carpenter, had started collecting old violins and was now searching in every nook and corner of Italy for the treasures of Cremona. He could neither read nor write, this enthusfastic collector, but he could tell a valuable fiddle the moment he saw it, and he estimated the worth of the Salabue "Strad" so well that after he had acquired it he kept it to himself with all the loving care that its maker had already shown for it. Tarisio lived entirely alone in a wretched garret in Milan, and one day in the year 1854 his neighbors found him lying dead among a confused heap of Cremonas. The old man had amassed a collection of some 250 instruments, the result of a thirty years' "hunt," and, although he had started life a penniless carpenter, he died worth about £12,000.—Cornhill.

Arctic Mosquitoes.

The presence of mosquitoes in myriads within the bare, uninhabited arctic circle is surely in some degree a mystery. The mosquito is a bloodsucker, but in these unvisited plains he is for the most part, and of strict necessity, a vegetarian. A few birds excepted (and the birds are furnished with impervious feathers), there is no local life whatever. The Lapp in summer drives his reindeer to the sea, and no native crosses the fjeld if he can help it. Yet in this region, "seemingly the most unsuitable for its effective working," the mosquito flourishes, "a primeval and enduring curse, inexplicably developed to its utmost."—London Chronicle.

Land of Surprises.

New Zealand is not exactly contiguous to or a part of Australia, as many seem to imagine, there being a slight difference of some 1,700 miles between them. Things go by contraries in the "land of the kangaroo." The farther north you travel the hotter it is—125 degrees in the shade in Queensland. Lignum vitae, which sinks in other waters, floats in Australian waters. The Christmas dinner is eaten in Melbourne and Sydney when it is over 100 degrees in the shade.

What You Do.

Where you are is of no moment, but only what you are doing there. It is not the place that ennobles you, but you the place, and this is only by doing that which is noble.—Home Notes.
