ROYAL NICKNAMES.

They Tell Briefly the Story of Each King's Career.

How do kings come by the curious nicknames that have been bestowed upon them? would be an interesting subject for some one to write about. We know fairly well how England begot its Lion Hearted, its Great, its Confessor and its Conqueror kings, but how about those of other lands? Thus France has had its monarchs who were termed the Little, the Bold, the Stammerer, the Simple, the Indolent and the Fair, in addition to the Long, Handsome, Beloved, Affable, Fortunate, Good, Wise, etc. German history tells us of one who was called the Fat and another the Blind; also the Child, the Fowler, Blood, Red, Black, Superb, Sharp, Holy and Lame. Russia has had a wonderful list in which the titles of Terrible, Fierce, Lion, Grim, Proud, Impostor and Lightfoot are prominent. Denmark shows a curious array, with its Blue Tooth, Forked Beard, Single, Hungry, Harefoot, Lamb, Pious and Cruel. Hungary has had a Saint, German Thunder, Venetian and a King Mary; Portugal, a Fat, Idle, African and Perfect; Spain, a Monk and Gouty and an assortment of oddities, including the Infirm, Bad, Noble, Strong, Valiant, Gracious, Sickly, Impotent, Beneficent and Ceremonious. The names in a way tell briefly the story of each king's career.

THE LIFE PLANT.

Its Curious Leaves and How They Die and Bloom Again.

Visitors to Bermuda often bring back to this country as a souvenir of their trip the leaves of an interesting plant of the house leek family. It is known as the life plant, and when the leaves begin to shrivel and fade they send out little shoots which in turn bear leaves that continue to grow and remain fresh and green for months. The leaves are about four inches long, rich green in color and of a smooth waxen texture. If you take one of the leaves and pin it to the wall indoors, it will begin to sprout within three or four days, be it winter or summer. At first the top portion of the leaf will begin to wither and shrivel up, and this is likely to continue until the upper half has lost its green color. Then tiny white roots will sprout from the edges, and in time diminutive green leaves will appear on these. These little offshoots will sometimes grow to be an inch long and contain several pairs of leaves. The limit of their existence seems to depend upon the amount of heat and light they can obtain.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Her Astral Spouse.

An unmarried woman was drawing dangerously near the threshold of that age where the unmated must abandon every matrimonial hope. Belonging, as she did, to that large contingent of women to whom marriage represents the only possible career, her anxiety as she saw her chances of achieving it dwindling to the vanishing point became keen, and in her distress she began to seek for comforting reassurances among that fraternity who for a suitable consideration obligingly offer to reveal the secrets of the future.

In the course of an interview with one of these "wise women" she was told, "My dear, you already are married on the astral plane, and it is your astral husband who is keeping the earthly men away from you."

"Oh," cried the ungrateful bride, "please tell him not to!"

Properties of Gold.

Pure gold is unaffected by the atmosphere either at ordinary temperatures or when the metal is heated. It is also proof against the action of common acids when used singly. Moreover, it confers its properties more or less upon copper and silver when these metals are alloyed with it. Thus, for example, twelve carat gold will withstand the action of nitric acid and the atmosphere at ordinary temperature, but some of the copper will be oxidized during annealing. Nine parts of gold may be alloyed with ten parts of platinum in any ordinary crucible and fire, but such an alloy will not be uniform; a larger proportion of platinum will free itself from the gold on solidification, and a homogeneous alloy of the two metals cannot be obtained.—Jewelers' Circular-Weekly.

Mice That Were Tipplers.

A correspondent writes: In Quetta some years ago I had occasion to go early one morning into a miscellaneous store kept by a Parsee, who also kept a liquor bar. As I entered the shop I noticed a mouse reeling across the floor, and I remarked to the shopkeeper that the mouse seemed to be hurt, but his reply astonished me. He said that that mouse and several others that infested his shop were confirmed drunkards. During the night they regularly drank all the liquor which remained in the glasses which the soldiers had used in the evening for their drinks.—Exchange.

Crushed.

"Halloa, Badger," said Thorpe, "met a friend of yours the other day. He's been talking about you, and I feel it my duty to tell you what he said."

"Ah, well, I don't care to hear what he said. I know it was something disagreeable," replied Badger.

"How do you know that?"

"Because you are so anxious to tell it. Good morning."

The Relief of It.

"Well, I finally summed up the courage to speak to her father last night. I tell you, it was a great relief."

"Gee! What did he say?"

"Oh, you misunderstand me. He wasn't in."—Philadelphia Press.

ART OF WALKING.

The First Requisite For a Good Gait Is a Good Poise.

The delightful art of walking, the happy practice of vagabondage which Stevenson and Whitman praised so well, the most innocent of pastimes, the simplest of exercises, is in danger of falling into abeyance, says Bliss Carman in the Delineator.

Our fashionable people affect one ridiculous manner of walking and then another year after year, but almost no one thinks it worth while to learn to walk normally. The normal walk is not a matter of caprice, but of art. It lends itself to the infinite varieties of character and becomes in each instance expressive of the individual, so that we recognize a man by his gait as easily as by his voice.

The first requisite of good walking is a good poise. If the body is well poised at each point of its motion, the motion itself must be good. The process of walking which has been described as a series of falls is, to be somewhat more accurate, a series of falls and recoveries so insensibly merged that there is no saying where the fall ends and the recovery begins. In walking we are in a continuous state of unstable equilibrium. We pass gradually from one position to another, yet are never out of poise. We are playing with gravity. A good walker spins the earth deftly beneath his feet, as an acrobat in a circus, lying on his back, spins a barrel or a painted ball.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

The Indifference of the Actor to His Stage Companions.

The indifference of the actor of almost every grade to the play and his fellow players is to the outsider one of the many inunderstandable things about this little known profession. There is an authentic case of an actor who gained sufficient favor and fortune in a certain play to appear in it continuously for four seasons. Although he naturally played the principal part, he did not appear until the second act, and it is a well known fact that during those four years he never saw the first act played or any part of it. There is no life behind the scenes, because actors and actresses who amount to anything go at once to their dressing rooms immediately their scenes on the stage are finished.

I recall an instance of a young woman whose dancing was a genuine sensation on Broadway for several years. She was very young and very pretty, and her engagement did much to establish the success of the theater at which she appeared. It must have been quite two years after she achieved her first success when the star, who was also the manager and owner of the theater, casually remarked one night in his dressing room: "Let's go down on the stage and look at Miss —— dance. I have never seen her, but they tell me she is very good."—Outing Magazine.

Caribou Horns.

Not one out of every ten female caribou has horns. When it does have them they are much smaller than those of the bull. The horns of the female, however, in general have many more branches than those of the bull, and they are much more regularly and finely formed. The cows carry their horns much longer than the bulls. They have been seen with their horns in the month of April. The old bulls shed their horns from the 10th to the last of November. They hardly ever carry them after the month of November. The young bulls shed theirs from the first of December until the middle of February. The younger the animal the longer he retains his horns.

Shakespeare and Scenery.

It is a peculiar fact that, while Shakespeare, of all dramatists, offers the greatest opportunity for scenery, he also, of all men who ever wrote, can best do without it. In fact, I believe Shakespeare owes his greatness in part to the fact that he did not have any scenery. He had to make everything clear without it. That is why his lines appeal to the mind as well as the action of the eye. Had he known different, said Daniel Frohman in the Delineator, Shakespeare would not have been nearly so great, because he probably never would have taken the pains. However, the converse isn't true. We are not hiding any Shakespeares behind scenery today.

Garrick's Little Joke.

Scene. The Star and Garter.

David Garrick and the usual galaxy assembled.

Garrick—Nolly, can you tell me why Dr. Johnson and Boswell are like thunder and lightning?

Goldsmith—Tell us the answer, Davy. I'll not spoil your fun by trying to guess it.

Garrick—Why, it should be plain to all who know them that whenever the one flashes the other claps and roars.—Harper's Weekly.

Contrary Counsel.

The church was packed, even the aisles lined with chairs. Just before the benediction the thoughtful clergyman, who loved order as he did the gospel, thus admonished his hearers:

"In passing out, please remain seated until the ushers have removed the chairs from the aisles."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Couldn't Stand the Strain.

Landlady—I'm sorry to say, sir, that the coffee is exhausted. Lodger—I'm not surprised. It has been so very weak lately.—Strand.

The word "cab," a contraction of "cabriolet," was not used until 1823.

DID YOU KNOW that we sell the best bread that is sold in this town?

The bread we sell is absolutely pure and as CLEAN as it is possible to have bread.

This bread is made and handled by machinery—and not by greasy, sweaty bakers.

Did you ever think of this? Don't this make a great difference?

Do a little thinking and see what you think?

The bread we sell is made in Washington—we get it fresh every day.

Read This Gurrantee:

Washington, District of Columbia, } SS:

on this fourth day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and seven, before me, the subscriber, a Notary Public, in and for the district aforesaid, personally appeared W. S. Corby, of the firm of Corby Bros, and made oath as follows:

We guarantee that CORBY'S MOTHERS BREAD, and all bread and rolls manufactured by the CORBY BAKERY are absolutely pure and will stand the test required under the recently passed PURE FOOD LAW, in effect January 1st 1907

Signed
