the tears which sympathysing heaven sheds upon the bosom of the earth, becomes congealed and and frozen to death beneath his blighting influence. The volcanic fires which range in the boson of the towering mountains cower in dismay from his terrific glance. At length the tyrant, with his iron sceptre and icy crown, is seated on his throne. His attendant ministers rush to assist in the frightful coronation. and amid the demoniac yells which announce the termination of the lone-ceremony, the harsh old Boreas shrieks forth the requiem of the departed year! OBITUARY.

Departed this life at vienna on Thursday morning of last week 10th inst. in the 29th year of her age HESTER A. consort of Henry Willcox Esqr., To those by whom she was known, commendatory remarks on the demise of Mrs. W. would be a work of supererogation, as her known combined amiable qualities cannot fail to be long remembered and cherished, by her numerous family relations, and extensive social circle, This notice therefore is not intended so much to compliment the deceased as to benefit her survivors by urging an imitation of the useful morals and religion enforced by her excellent examples while living. At an early period of life her mind was deeply imbued with christian enjoyments and these to the close of her earthly career did evidence to those around her that many of the blessing which God hath designed for our are known; and by anticipation they are tasted beforehand and are thus many times enjoyed and that if we are the objects of his favor the future is ever bightening to the eye of meditation, our steps shall be guided by an infalible counsel" our good and our evil shall be distributed with kind and parental regard, firmness supplied by him shall raise us above our trials and victory crown our conflicts "In her affliction which was protracted and severe, she was not known to repine or wish her sufferings less, but with calm conposure and christian resignation awaited the mandate of her divine master, which was at last receved and her spirit taken to him that made it to rest in his bosom and to abide in his presence. Her fond Husband and infant babe together with numerous, connexions (all bearing her great affection) are left to mourn this bereavement but not to mourn as those without hope.
