BROILED OWL.

The Feeling In Camp Before and After the First Nibble.

I told the guides that it would be better to begin supper right away in order that we might not get too hungry before the owl was done. I thought them slow in their preparations for the meal. It was curious, too, for I had promised them they should have a piece of the bird. Del was generous. He said he would give his to Charles; that he never really cared much for birds anyhow. Why, once, he said, he shot a partridge and gave it away, and he was hungry too. He gave it to a boy that happened along just then, and when another partridge flew up he didn't even offer to shoot it. We didn't take much stock in that story until it dawned upon us that he had shot the bird out of season, and the boy had happened along just in time to be incriminated by accepting it as a present. It was better to have him as a partner than a witness.

Wood was gathered then, and the fire blazed. The owl's breast—fat and fine it looked—was in the broiler and on the fire. There it cooked—and cooked. Then it cooked some more and sent up an appetizing smell. Now and then I said I thought the time for it had come, but there was a burden of opinion that more cooking would benefit the owl. Meantime we had eaten a pan or two of trout and a few other things, the bird, of course, being later in the bill of fare. At most dinners I have attended this course is contemplated with joy. It did not seem to be on this occasion. Eddie agreed with Del that he had never cared much for bird anyway and urged me to take his share. I refused to deprive him of it. Then he said he didn't feel well and thought he really ought not to eat anything more. I said grimly that possibly this was true, but that he would eat the owl.

It was served then, fairly divided and distributed, as food is when men are on short rations. I took the first taste—I was always venturesome—a little one. Then immediately I wished I had accepted Eddie's piece. But meantime he had tasted, too—a miserly taste—and then I couldn't have got the rest of it for money.

For there was never anything so good as that breast of young owl. It was tender, it was juicy, it was as delicately flavored as a partridge almost. Certainly it was a dainty morsel to us, who had of late dealt so largely in fish diet. Had we known where the rest of that brood of owls had flown we should have started after them then and there.—Albert Bigelow Paine in Outing Magazine.

"Root hog or die," was once a popular expression. The hog raiser doesn't say that nowadays. Sold under written guarantee by Davis & Satterfield.

A farmer that sowed wheat all over his farm and then expected to reap a crop of oats, wheat and corn from the same, what would you think of him? What would you say of a man who fed his horse, cow, hog and poultry from the same package of condition powder? The intelligent farmer uses Fairfield's Tonics because there is a separate preparation for each kind of animal. Sold under written guarantee by Davis & Satterfield.

Eggs multiply as though by magic when Fairfield's Egg Producer for Poultry only is fed. The magic in this case consists in supplying the hen with the elements needed for egg production and no others. This can only be done by having a compound prepared especially for poultry. Sold under written guarantee by Davis & Satterfield.

Poultry owners in this country will be much pleased to learn that science has at least perfected a remedy for the Roup in Poultry. Fairfield's Roup Remedy is the result of the latest scientific research, and has never failed to do the work. Sold under written guarantee by Davis & Satterfield.
