Acknowledge It.

Chestertown Has to Bow to the Inevitable—Scores of Endorsements Prove It.

After reading the public statement of this fellow-sufferer given below, you most come to this conclusion: A remedy which cured years ago, which has kept the kidneys in good health since, can be relied upon to perform the same work in other cases. Read this:

Michael Murphy, Warren St., Havre De Grace, says: "I willingly re-endorse Doan's Kidney Pills and I will say for the benefit of other kidney sufferers that there is no better remedy in existence. In 1903 I procured a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills and they so promptly cured me of kidney trouble that I publicly endorsed them. I could not lie in one position for any length of time on account of a soreness across the small of my back and whenever I stooped, sharp pains seized me. My kidneys were also very weak and the secretions were so frequent in passage that I was obliged to arise several times during the night. Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of the trouble and during the five years that have since passed, I have had no return of it."

New Year Cradle Song

By Ella Bentley

I THINK that up in the skies, most dear,
At the shrine of the rose hued east,
A mass is sung for the dying year.
With the moon for the vestured priest,
And every star is an altar light,
And the church itself is the big, big night,
While you are the littlest acolyte.
(Sleep, my baby one, sleep.)

I THINK, most dear, that the prayer you say
Is the incense holy and sweet
You waft to God on the wings of day
When the night and the twilight meet,
And the sorrowful song that the north winds sing
When the winding sheet of the snow they bring
Is the dirge for the dear year's burying.
(Sleep, my baby one, sleep.)

I THINK, most dear, that those clouds you see
On the edge of the passing day
Are not the mist that they seem to be,
But friars and monks in gray,
And I think they're telling their rosaries, too,
And every bead is a drop of dew
That falls to the earth when its prayer is through.
(Sleep, my baby one, sleep.)

I THINK, most dear, in the world to me
That just as you are tonight
Somehow I wish you could always be—
God's littlest acolyte.
But slumber now for the dark is here,
And soon you'll open your eyes, most dear,
To greet the dawn of a different year.
(Sleep, my baby one, sleep.)

—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

China Paints Itself Red.

The Chinese paint the whole country red, figuratively speaking, on New Year in more senses than one. Red is the color with them which denotes good luck and prosperity, and all the New Year cards and invitations are on paper of that color. Every child gets its New Year present wrapped in red paper, and red inscriptions are pasted over the doors of the houses. These inscriptions bear characters praying for good fortune, wealth and happiness, and they are posted on each side of the outer doors of the houses. New pictures of Chinese generals are put on the front doors; the houses are scoured and made clean. Among other things, eggs are dyed red and are offered to the gods. Dinner parties are got up in bright vermilion. The red used is that which you find around our firecrackers, and, as for them, the Chinese spend more in firecrackers on New Year than we do on the Fourth of July.—Philadelphia Press.

Kaiser's New Year Dinner.

At the kaiser's New Year dinner the old customs relating to personal services rendered to his majesty by the paladins of the realm are revived in all their glory. The royal cupbearer presents to the kaiser the first goblet of golden wine, the lord carver brings him the first cut of meat, and the supreme master of the hunt places a pheasant, gorgeously decorated, before him.—New York Herald.

The Wassail Bowl.

The wassail bowl has been regarded as the property of Christmas, but it is really a New Year custom. It was the custom of our ancestors to drink the old year out and the New Year in in a bowl of liquor, which came to be called the wassail bowl from the exclamation "Waes hael!" ("Be in health!") of every toper as he lifted it to his lips. The bowl was passed round from guest to guest, all drinking from it in token of the good will and happiness with which the New Year opened. From the wassail bowl came the "loving cup," which still figures at the banquets of London guilds.

Hard Boiled Eggs as Fortune Tellers.

The girl who would know what her future husband will be like should eat a hard boiled egg—in which salt takes the place of the yolk—immediately before going to bed New Year's eve. If she is brave enough to do this, she will dream that some one brings her water to quench her thirst, the face being that of the man she will marry.

What Will He Offer?

What will the New Year
Offer to you, dear?
Spring's daffodilly,
And summer's lily,
Ripe nuts when the autumn winds are chilly,
And snowballs white and frost flowers bright
When he's grown to an old year, and then good night!
