MAUFACTURERS, JOBBERS & MILLS ARE

GLUTTED

WITH VAST STOCKS AND ARE SEEKING RELIEF AT THE MOST ASTONISHING PRICES ever known in clothing history. Owing to the unsettled conditions in the south (the cotton country), due to the war in Europe, three prominent clothing manufacturers—The Crown Clothing Co., The Royal Clothing Co., and The Clifton Cloak and Suit Co., all of Baltimore, Md.—have sold to us their high-grade clothing for men and women at 40c to 50c on the dollar, which we will offer to you, including our GRAND CLOTHING STOCK at corresponding prices, at our GREAT

JANUARY CLEARANCE SALE

Which Starts January 2nd, and will last for 20 days only.

To those that aren't acquainted with the commercial world, can't understand the great importance in clothing manufacture. Clothes makers make winter clothing in summer time and summer clothing in winter time, and before one season is started the former season's stock MUST BE disposed of. That gives them cash capital for their next season's business. But this year they were GLUTTED with vast stocks returned and canceled from their customers in the SOUTH, and it gave us a chance to buy their best stocks at way down prices.

TO THE MANY inquiries we've had this season—How early were we going to start our January Sale, we are pleased to inform our friends and patrons that this Great Sale is NOW ON, and those that have waited for this great money-saving event will be greatly rewarded, as our reductions will average near ONE-HALF on all

SELECT YOUR HERD BULL WITH CARE

The Sire Of the Herd Should Be Judged By the Production Of His Offspring.

G. E. WOLCOTT,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

The care that should be exercised in selecting the herd bull is shown by the records of the Jersey herd at the University of Missouri.

The first bull used in this herd was Missouri Rioter, a son of Bachelor of St. Lambert—the only animal of his pedigree known to be a strong breeder. The average production of his daughters was 1009 lbs. of milk and 18 lbs. of fat below that of their dams.

A WELL-BRED SIRE.

The next bull used was Hugorotus, an animal with no high producing individuals in his ancestry. His daughters produced 393 lbs. less milk than their dams; but the percentage of fat was much higher, making an increase in fat amounting to 14 lbs.

The third bull—Lorn of Meridale—had a fine pedigree; and his daughters increased the average production 1410 lbs of milk and 66 lbs. of fat. The average production of his daughters was 5969 lbs. of milk and 287 lbs. of fat.

The next bull was Missouri Rioter, 3rd, a son of Missouri Rioter. His mother was the best cow in the herd. His daughters produced 3230 lbs. of milk and 146 lbs. fat more than their dams.

Minette's Pedro was used after Missouri Rioter, 3rd. He was an animal of fine breeding with many high-class animals in his pedigree. Ten of his daughters were superior to their dams, and ten were inferior. There was an increase of 55 lbs. of milk and 4 lbs. of fat. This bull was holding the average of the herd.

Brown Bessie's Registrar was the last bull used with daughters old enough to test. The data regarding this bull are too limited to draw conclusions, but it is evident his daughters are inferior. The daughters produced 1734 lbs. milk and 76 lbs. fat less than their dams.

The records show the great care that should be used in selecting a bull; and the desirability of keeping the bull in the herd until the production of his daughters is known. Missouri Rioter was sold before his daughters began to produce, and a valuable bull was lost to the breed.

DIFFERENT VARIETIES OF SEED POTATOES SHOULD NOT BE MIXED BEFORE PLANTING.

Potato growers often find their stock mixed and are at a loss to account for it. Some who have not become well informed seem to think that the wind or bees may effect the blossoms and that is the way the mixture happened. It is only when potatoes are grown from the actual seed which is found in the ball-shaped pods where the blossoms have been, that the bees or wind can cause any mixing. There are several ways in which mixing may occur. One is by the accidental dumping of a sack of one variety into a pile of another. Another way which I believe often happens, where one is growing the McCormick variety is, that there are some tubers left over in the soil from a previous digging which perpetuate themselves and thus get into a later crop. Another chance for mixing which is probably the least common, although by no means rare, is bud variation. Bud variation is constantly happening in plants and the most common form in potatoes is the color of the skin. The White McCormick is a bud variation of the older pink-eyed variety. Now, there has appeared in the White variety a "sprout" or bud variation with splashes of pink on the skin.

If potatoes do get mixed it is often less trouble to separate them after they commence to sprout. Sprouts that have started in the dark in some varieties are pure white, others are yellowish white, others have some purple in them. A very common mixture is Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain. The sprouts of Green Mountain, when grown in the dark, are a clear greenish yellow, while those of Irish Cobbler are white, with purplish streaks and patches at the base.

It has been found that the quality of high egg production is what is known as a sex limited character, and that the male bird is capable of reproducing the high laying quality very much more than the female.

Heretofore, little attention has been paid to the male, outside of selecting one from a high producing dam. Now the approved method of breeding for egg production is to get a male from some known high producing strain, and mate him to the flock.

In order to breed for high productiveness, it is necessary to test out the ability of the male to get high laying pullets. This can be done by keeping the pullets from several matings in separate pens and getting a record of their eggs.
