Muir Could Drive a Bargain.

Most people know that the famous naturalist and writer, John Muir, left a substantial fortune behind him when he died, but few perhaps are aware that during the ten years he dedicated altogether to business he was known as the hardest man at a bargain in the whole of California. "As a bargainer," writes Arno Dosch, "John Muir was pure Scotch. Muir had the biggest and most dependable supply of Tokay grapes in California. The San Francisco jobbers bought his yield to meet their regular shipments to the north and east. There were at that time four big fruit jobbing houses in San Francisco, and they tell tales yet in Commission row of the bargains John Muir drove with them. He was never known to name a price first. Whether he was selling grapes or land, he tried first to find out what the other man was willing to pay. But he always had a price in mind, and he got it. It made no difference what was the market price of grapes. He made the jobbers pay what he expected."

Lighting London Streets.

In 1416 citizens were obliged to hang out candles on dark nights to illuminate the streets. This was enforced by an act of parliament in 1661. In 1684 Edward Heming, the inventor of oil lamps, made a daring offer, which was that for a proper consideration he would engage to place a light before every tenth door on dark nights from 6 p. m. till midnight. His proposition was accepted, and he was given the exclusive right to light the streets as indicated for a term of years. But the scheme provoked a great uproar among the people. Some of them enthusiastically applauded it and hailed Heming as the greatest benefactor the city ever had. Thousands of other furiously denounced him and his scheme and demanded that the contract be canceled. Heming held on, and in time the people became reconciled to having the streets lighted. In 1736 the city government assumed the responsibility.

The Secret of Harmony.

Young Mrs. Mead, whose experience of married life had been brief and happy, had just engaged two servants, a man and his wife.

"I am so glad you are married," she said to the man with whom she had made terms. "I hope you are very, very happy and that you and your wife never have any difference of opinion."

"Faith, ma'am, Oi couldn't say that," replied the new servant, "for we have a good many, but Oi don't let my wife know of thim, and so we do be gettin' along well."

Escapes In War.

Until war ceases, which will be the greatest miracle of all, it will always be the exhibition ground of miracles. How can a bullet puncture a man's coat behind and before or pierce his boot and sock and be gravely shaken out of both without wounding him? And what mysterious channel does this human body contain which leads a bullet dexterously around the heart, a hair's breadth from the seat of life, yet never rending it—a phenomenon vouched for by more than one army surgeon? Shells have burst thunderously between the very legs of soldiers and left them still soldiers. Shells of two inches in diameter have passed through legs and arms without shattering the bone or bursting at the impact, although there appears to be literally no room for such a merciful performance. In fact, a history of the escapes in war would be wild reading even after a course of Munchausen.—Exchange.

Well Put.

A man who kept a roadhouse in Rhode Island was called upon to testify in a suit as to the number of cubic yards handled in some rock removing and filling in of lots in the vicinity.

Naturally enough, he showed very little knowledge of the matter, his idea of a cubic yard being so indefinite that it was suspected he hardly comprehended the term. In order to facilitate his understanding the judge said:

"Listen, witness! Assuming this inkstand to be three feet across the top this way and three feet that way and three feet in height, what would you call it?'

"Well, your honor," said the witness, without hesitation, "I should say it was some inkstand." — New York Times.

The Kings of Denmark.

The dust of the Danish kings is kept in a great cathedral at Roskilde, an old town twenty miles from Copenhagen. Every year the entire royal family always pays a visit to Roskilde in obedience to an ancient custom. On one of the pillars are marks showing the height of Peter the Great, Nicholas the Iron Czar, Alexander III. of Russia, the king of England and many other kings. The cathedral was built in the eleventh century. It has two mighty towers, which can be seen at a long distance. The oldest grave is that of King Harold I., who died in 987.—Exchange.

Misplaced.

Sergeant to Tommy (who has fallen out for the fourth time)—What! At it again? You know you ought never to have joined this 'ere regiment, me lad. You ought to 'ave joined the flying corps. They only let you fall out once there!—London Punch.

Don't Put Off Buying

Unless there is a big improvement in the freight car situation, we are going to have trouble very soon in filling our orders.

The Maxwell Company at Detroit cannot get cars enough to move even half its output.

We can fill your order now. You are taking chances if you wait until next week or next month.

Maxwell

You know that almost a dozen manufacturers have found it necessary to advance their prices on account of the high cost of labor and material. The Maxwell factory refuses to guarantee us against an increase in price; that is why we say "don't wait."

And why wait? You might as well have the enjoyment of your Maxwell while you are paying for it. Our makes this possible. It is a unique plan and it speaks volumes for the confidence we have in the Maxwell car.

Pay-As-You-Ride Plan

Expert men in charge of our service station offer a real service to Maxwell owners.

If you haven't time to come in and get acquainted, phone us for a Maxwell demonstration.
