EXTRACTING TEETH WITHOUT PAIN.

CONSIDER THE PEANUT.

Except for the Potato its Annual Value Exceeds That of Any Vegetable Crop Grown in This Country.

Washington, D. C.

While cotton is still king in the South, the peanut promises to dispute or to share its dominion in some sections as part of well-balanced farming practice. The State of Texas, for example, has planted 600,000 acres to peanuts, more than doubling the acreage of last year, according to figures just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The prospective crop, on the same authority, is more than 70 million bushels for the whole south. Texas already had the largest acreage in 1916, though in 1909 it stood sixth, with most of the Atlantic and Gulf Coast States ahead. Georgia jumped from 190,000 acres last year to 420,000. The increase in Texas has been an index of the increase throughout the lower South, though the proportionate increase elsewhere has not been so great. For the South as a whole, however, it is remarkable that the acreage has increased from less than a million and a quarter acres to more than two million acres.

The peanut may have been held in light esteem in the popular mind because of its association with circus and clown, or because the expression "peanut politics" has designated a low form of partisanship. Yet this crop has long been important in North Carolina, Virginia, and Georgia, with Suffolk, Va., as the headquarters of the industry. Here the price of peanuts is to a large extent established for the whole country, and at prevailing prices peanuts are in competition with cotton.

BEATING THE BOLL WEEVIL

The boll weevil drove many a Texas farmer to peanuts. From what seemed to be a hopeless situation the peanut has rescued him, and at the same time rescued the oil-mill men who were on the verge of a shut-down with their supply of cotton seed diminished. The department of Agriculture had long been advocating a change from the single crop standard set by cotton. As long as cotton was the only money crop the arguments fell on deaf ears, but, backed up by the boll weevil, the campaign began to bear fruit. The farmers began to give part of the cotton acreage to peanuts. This presented a new problem and the oil-mill men began to ask questions.

They found that many of the growers were "hogging down" the peanuts; that is, they were turning the hogs into the fields to harvest the nuts, and were marketing the crop "on the hoof." The department of Agriculture had proved that a 40-bushel crop of Spanish peanuts would produce more than 400 pounds of pork to the acre, and supplied a good ration that needed only a little topping off with corn to harden the meat. Furthermore, if the peanut hay is harvested before the hogs are turned in, the hay almost pays for the growing of the crop, because it furnishes a palatable food to which all kinds of stock will turn eagerly from any other kind of hay. And if that were not enough, the peanuts, in common with other legumes, bear nodules on their roots which gather nitrogen from the air and put it in the soil.

Organization of New Bakery Companies.

The Quartermaster General has been directed to organize at once forty Bakery Companies in addition to the ten companies now within the continental limit of United States.

These companies will be numbered from No. 1 to 52, Nos. 5 and 6 are in Honolulu and the Philippine Islands.

The personnel of these companies will consist of

1—1st Lieutenant.
1—2nd Lieutenant.
1—Sergeant 1st Class, $51.00 per month.
23—Sergeants, $44.00 per month.
15—Corporals, $36.00 per month.
45—Privates, First Class, $33.00 per month.
15—Privates, $30.00 per month.
2—Cooks, $38.00 per month.

In addition the Government furnishes food, lodging and clothing.

The equipment consists of the Army Field Bakery No. 1 oven with equipage. One of these ovens with equipage is designated as a unit, and is so equipped that it is a Field Bakery complete in itself with a personnel of six men capable of supplying 1800 men per day with bread.

Fifteen (15) of those units constitute a bakery company and a company has a capacity of fourty thousand pounds of bread per day.

This is an opportunity for strong and energetic young men to learn a trade. Men who volunteer now will have an excellent opportunity for promotion. There are about 800 vacancies in the grade of Sergeant Baker and 600 in the grade of Corporal to be filled by the most capable men.

In addition to this there will be vacancies in the grade of 1st and 2nd Lieutenant for experienced bakers with the necessary educational qualifications. A young man with a High School education stands a good chance to enlist, learn the baker's trade, and place himself in line for promotion to the grade of Noncommissioned Officer and Commissioned Officer. Why not enlist now for one of these companies? You have an opportunity for service abroad and a good chance for promotion.

The Quartermaster General has decided to offer the commissions in the companies to deserving men from ranks.

By authority of the Quartermaster General.

O. J. CHARLES,
Major Q.M.Corps.

A New Form of Serenade.

Not so many years ago it was the custom to serenade newly married couples by calling at their home and giving them an hour or two's torture by the sounding of every conceivable noise making instrument. A new one was sprung in Centreville Friday evening of last week, however, when Mr. and Mrs. James P. Keating returned from their honeymoon in the Pennsylvania mountains. A number of friends met them at the M. D. & V. Station in automobiles humorously placarded, and after the young folks were safely inside the machines, the entire motor cavalcade started on a joy ride through town. With horns honking and electric signals sounding, the party passed through the various thoroughfares until the public finally awakened to the fact that a novel serenade was in progress. After the jokers felt they had enjoyed sufficient fun at the expense of the young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Keating were taken to their home on Commerce street.

Nerves and Good Health.

Obviously "nerves" and sound good health are not compatible. If you doubt it take a dispassionate look at some of your friends who are intensely emotional or who are classified as temperamental. They may not be invalids or even semi-invalids, but they are certainly not "pictures of health." Giving way to fear, anxiety, temper, depression, temperament, this is the surest way of inviting indigestion, constipation, finally autointoxication. And the result on the appearance? Lusterless eyes, sallow or blotchy skin, lifeless hair, lack of "spring" in the carriage—these are but a few of the things that must inevitably come to the highly strung who let go.

Aside from its being absolutely destructive to beauty, nervousness, if not treated, may develop into something a great deal more serious.—Exchange.

Food and Intellect.

It used to be thought that fasting purified the spirit and made the intellect clearer. The mind with wings unclogged by the gross appetites of the body was supposed to be more free and nimble. The British Medical Journal does not believe that the intellect is strengthened by fasting, though undoubtedly it may be clouded by overeating. On the other hand, fasting has often ill effects on the temper, which undo whatever spiritual good it may do in other ways. And as regards the intellect, it is a truism that the brain must be fed like any other part of the body. The quantity of food required to keep one in sound condition varies so largely that it is impossible to lay down more than a tentative average standard. The quality is a matter of custom and environment. Here, too, no right universal rule can be enforced.

Two Girls.

Two sentimental college youths were discussing the quality of girl they would choose as life companion. The more sentimental of the two asked, "Which kind of girl do you prefer, the one who can walk and walk and walk without ever having to stop and rest or the girl who has to stop every now and then in a shady place by the roadside?"

"I like the girl," said the more conservative youth, "who can walk and walk and walk without ever having to stop and rest, but who prefers to pause by the wayside every now and then."—Argonaut.

Thoughtful Wife.

"What's that string about your finger for, Jones?" asked a member of the firm.

"Oh, my wife tied it there to remember something she told me," answered the clerk.

"And do you remember what she told you?"

"Yes, sir. She told me to be sure and not work too hard." — Yonkers Statesman

LOWEST CASH PRICES!

When we offer our goods for cash you may know the prices are going to be low for the high grade merchandise we handle. The fact that prevailing prices on everything is higher than in previous years, leads us to believe that selling on a close margin will greatly benefit our customers and still leave us a fair profit by selling more goods.

The only way to do this is to sell for cash and give you the benefit of these amazingly low prices. By so doing we do not mean for you to pay the instant the goods are received, but a good plan is to open a weekly account. Give us a small order, and if you pay cash or not you will see the difference when it comes time to settle.

Bring us your Produce and we will give you highest prices in exchange for goods that are of the best grade and guaranteed to satisfy. Watch this space each week, and you will be sure to find some things you need at prices that will please you.

The following specials will be for next Wednesday only:
