PRONOUNCING WORDS.

A Test and a Flippant Fling at the Critic and His Theory.

Comes now another to trouble us in these days when the wayfarer has already enough bothers to keep him from lingering overlong in his humble repose. It is a man who has discovered that there are 25,000 English words more or less commonly mispronounced and who would show us how to rescue ourselves from the disgrace.

By way of illustration he challenges all comers to try to pronounce offhand such words as actinism, archimandrite, batman, beaufin, bourgeois, brevier, buoy, demy, fugleman, fusil, oboe, rowlock, tassel, vase and velleity. He intimates that anybody who can give them all correctly can qualify as a .300 hitter in the pronunciation league, but still has a long way to go before he reaches perfection.

But what of it? An oboe sounds as sweet whether one calls it an oh-bow or an oh-boy. If the writer of this article told his printer to set it in boorzhwah type the printer probably would call a meeting of the chapel and insist on a strike vote. You can call it a vase or vawze, but it takes a dime to get it filled, where it used to cost only 5 cents. As to demy and velleity, most of us have got along very well for a good many years without writing or speaking either of them and hope to struggle along the same way at least until we have a little rest from worry over the high cost of potatoes.

The hardest thing about it is to determine which of several schools of pronunciation is most desirable—the London, the Melbourne, the Canadian, the Texas, the Massachusetts, the Alabama, the Georgia or the Missouri. Moreover, if 25,000 words are mispronounced most of us are democratic enough to let the majority rule and be willing to make it unanimous. — St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

AMERICA AWHEEL.

The Case of Pippkins Will Do to Illustrate the Point.

"My neighbor, Pippkins, has changed his manner of vacation," declares Edward Hungerford in Everybody's. "In other years his annual outing was a rather portentous affair. The family began to plan it some months in advance. There were railroad and steamboat and hotel booklets on the library table. When the time came Mrs. Pippkins and the girls went to a huge wooden hotel on the edge of a lake. They dressed three times a day. When Pippkins ran down on one Friday of each fortnight he boarded a hot, dusty, overcrowded train and rode for five uncomfortable hours. They insisted that he don a Tuxedo each evening for dinner. He used to wonder if the game was quite worth the candle.

"Today there are no such doubts in Pippkins' mind. He has a car—so have four-fifths of the families in our quiet street. Pippkins caught the fever early in the game. Today he is a veteran and hardened motorist. He talks earnestly and learnedly of gears and of transmission, and he is superlatively critical of every car except his own. I might write a story upon how that car and its predecessors in the Pippkins family have changed their very soul, but this is not the time nor place. Sufficient is it to say that Pippkins is now a motor expert, and Dr. King down at our corner says that Pippkins has grown ten years younger.

"Mrs. Pippkins and the girls have all but forgotten when they have been on a railroad train in summer. They live in the family car.

"Multiply Pippkins all the way across the face of the land, and you begin to have a definite perception of America awheel."

MME. JUSTINE SHANNON

For the first time Chautauqua patrons will have an opportunity to hear a celebrated Grand Opera prima donna.

Justine Shannon studied with the famous Swedish teacher, Mme. Sigrid Westerlind, and after several successful appearances with the Gothenburg Symphonic Orchestra spent several months in Paris with Mme. Mathilde Marchesi. Subsequently she went to Italy under the direction of Mme. Adele Borghi and Cavalier Oscar Anselmi. She made a wonderful debut in "Aida" at Trieste and then for two years appeared in leading Austrian and Italian cities in the principal contralto roles of such operas as "Il Trovatore," "Un Ballo In Maschera," "La Gioconda," "Faust" and "Norma."

The range of her voice is from deep contralto to high mezzo soprano and is of unusually fine quality.

Since returning to America she has been extensively booked in concert tour.

Perfect Physical Poise.

For the perfect physical poise we don't need to study pictures in the modern magazines. The ideal form is well expressed in sculpture dating back to 500 to 600 B. C., when the Spartans were masters of Greece. These ancients, says Popular Science Monthly, carried themselves in such a way that the muscles, organs, circulation and even the brain and nervous system were braced in harmonious relationship. How can we attain the same poise in walking? Briefly, by setting the shoulders back and squaring them evenly, by carrying the chest high and well arched forward, by keeping the stomach in and the neck perpendicular, like a column, and by forcing the chin in.

Canes of Rhinoceros Horn.

Probably some of the most expensive canes to manufacture are those from rhinoceros horns. Such a cane, when made of one piece of horn, often costs as high as $500. The high price is due to the expert treatment which the rhinoceros horn requires immediately after the beast has been slain.

Birds Will Come Back.

The strongly developed homing instincts of birds can be relied on to attach them to the neighborhood where they first saw the light, and the identical pairs which nest in the houses provided for them one year will often return the next season to enjoy the same bounty and protection.

Right From the Heart.

A little boy in the city followed the suggestions of his father (who some how in the midst of "the turmoil" has managed to live for the good things of life and let the banalities which take up the popular attention alone) that he keep a diary.

The little fellow found it rather difficult to make records, not understanding that the human document must be beautifully simple. But one day he struck the keynote of life with just one bold, unconscious stroke:

"This has been a fine day. Mother did not go anywhere all day."—Indianapolis News.

DOMESTIC SUPPLY CO Binghamton N. Y.

WANTED

The following is quoted from a letter just received from the U.S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D.C.:

"The U.S. Government needs, and needs badly, great numbers of stenographers and typewriters, both men and women.

"Students just starting a course of study may be informed that there is now practically no limit to the number of stenographers and typewriters the Government needs.

"The commission believes that the study of stenography and typewriting by a great number of persons with the view of entering the Government service will be justified. The usual entrance salary ranges from $900 to $1200 a year."

The business demand for secretaries, stenographers and bookkeepers is also very urgent, and also all students beginning a course with us during the next few months can be sure of employment promptly upon graduation at salaries higher than ever paid before.
