Notice.

The Draymen of the town would most respectfully inform the citizens of Cambridge that in consequence of the advance of corn, &c. they have been compelled to raise the price of hauling. For the future, instead of the price being 25 cents, it will be 37 1-2 cents per load—barrels, &c. in the same proportion. They have taken this step, not with the view of making maney, but to secure a support for themselves and horses.

For Rent.

I would rent for the ensuing year, the Farm which I have been cultivating for a few years past, distant from Cambridge about three and a half miles. There is on the farm every building necessary, I believe, for the proper security of all grain, &c., and in good order with slight exceptions. To a man disposed to improve I would be willing to lease it for a term of five or more years, if desired. As it is uncertain how long I may remain on the Eastern Shore it would be well for those wishing to rent to call immediately, as they will then be sure of seeing me on the farm.

Farmers desirous of this cross, may send their sows, with five dollars each and corn to feed them, to Appleby Farm, where they will receive attention, in secure pens, for a reasonable time. No warranty against accidents.
