Greatest Crater in the World.

Besides discovering that "the valley of 10,000 smokes," as the vast volcanic area in Alaska is now known, really has literally millions of active vents in the space of a hundred square miles, and is the first wonder of the world, the exploration party has found that Katmai has the greatest crater on the face of the globe, and has also discovered a mud river 17 miles long—almost enough mud for a national political campaign.—Boston Globe.

Founding of Havana.

Havana, or San Christobal de la Habana, as it was originally named, was the last of seven cities founded in Cuba by the island's conqueror, the Adelantado Diego Valesquez, the date being July 26, 1515. Since that was 23 years after Columbus' discovery, there cannot be many new world cities older than Havana, assuming that most of the other six in Cuba have since disappeared.

Worry Is Form of Fear.

Fear is one of the worst enemies of our civilization, our comfort, and moreover of our efficiency. The whole trend of modern psycho-therapeutics, Christian Science, and all such aspects of mental influence, is an attempt to overcome fear in people's minds. And the most important aspect of fear, of course, is worry. Worry is a chronic but none the less powerful form of fear.—Exchange.

Misnomer for Shepflock.

A Western editor recently referred to a "herd" of sheep, and he was promptly corrected by another editor, who asserted that he should have called the "herd" a flock. Most people will be disposed to side with the latter, and yet, how are they going to explain the fact that the person who takes care of a flock of sheep is a shepherd?—Christian Science Monitor.

Maybe They're All Right.

One hears a person declare that another hasn't much sense. But there is always somebody else to think that the man who said that hasn't much; and somebody else thinks the man who thinks that hasn't any too much to hurt—and so, if we listened to the opinions of everybody nobody would have any sense.

Girl in a Compote.

We often have occasion to deplore the scantiness of our vocabulary, and yesterday, when a dear girl told us that she had received just the loveliest compote, we assumed our best society manner and told her that we hoped to see her in it before the day was over.—Ohio State Journal.

"Cutting" Ship's Mast.

Instead of the old method of cutting trees for ship's masts by the use of ax and saw, a man now climbs to the point to be cut and ties dynamite cartridges around the tree trunk. He then lights the end of a long fuse and retreats to a safe distance.

Tigers Abound in India.

Tigers abound in India to this day. In some parts of that land the natives, especially the Hindoos, regard the tiger with such superstitious awe that they will not kill one. Some think it is tenanted by a spirit which makes it immortal.

The Alibi.

A college president known for his drollery was describing the Home Guard of Connecticut: "An admirable force, whose service will be confined to the state, except in case of invasion."—Christian Register.

Governors Have Pardoning Power.

The governors of nearly all the states have power to grant pardons and reprieves. A pardon remits all punishment imposed for a crime while a reprieve merely suspends execution of sentence for a specified time.

Not Out of Date.

Says an old proverb: Some wives can throw more out the back door with a teaspoon than their husbands can bring in with a scoop shovel at the front door.

Mean of the Rich.

Most of the rich men probably are rich because they do not turn over the job of spending their money to the people who are broke.—Houston Post.

On Good Authority.

"Daughter, do you think that young fellow is the man for you?" "Oh, I know it, papa." "How do you know it?" "He told me so himself."

Optimistic Thought.

To show mercy when punishment ought to be inflicted is not charity, but infirmity.

Pain and Bravery.

No man can be brave who thinks pain the greatest evil.—Cicero.

Attack vs. Protection.

It is safer to be attacked by some men than to be protected by them.

City of Many Mills.

The English city of Sheffield has 400 steel manufacturing concerns,

YOUNG MEN WANTED.

Young men with an elementary knowledge of electricity are offered exceptional opportunities for good positions in the United States Navy through a recent request from the Bureau of Navigation for a limited number of recruits in the rating of electricians (general).

These recruits are sent to the electrical schools maintained by the Navy Department and after completing a thorough course of instruction, are placed on board the ships of the navy. There is no limit in the promotions to which they may rise by strict application to their duties.

The general requirements are that applicants must know the names and uses of the various parts of the dynamo and dynamo engine, must be familiar with the ordinary types of switchboard and methods of wiring must understand elementary arithmetic, and must be between the ages of 18 and 25 years.

There is also an urgent need for more young men in all the branches of the naval service, and Maryland, with its fine record for recruits in the past, is looked to by the Bureau of Navigation to continue to give its share.

Full particulars of Navy enlistments can be obtained from the nearest postmaster; directly from the Navy Recruiting Station, Calvert and Lexington streets, Baltimore, or from the Navy Recruiting Substations at Cumberland and Hagerstown.

Upon going to the main station at Baltimore, applicants should take with them proper proof of their age.

Canneries Must License.

Special regulations to prevent speculations in canned goods went into operation November 1st by the Food Administration. All canners will be placed under license and forbidden to make future sales of canned corn, peas and tomatoes before February 1st. This date later may be extended, depending on the needs of the Allies and the American military forces. As in other industries controlled by the Food Administration, canners will be required to sell their products at a reasonable margin of profit regardless of market conditions or replacement values.

No Child Too Young to Swim.

"No child is too young to be taught swimming," says Madeline Berlo. "There is no reason in the world why a child should not learn to swim before it is five years old. In fact, there is every reason why it should. The children of savage tribes in the islands of the Pacific learn even before that age. Some of them learn to swim before they learn to walk, which clearly shows that all our civilization is wrong in assuming that years and knowledge are necessary to ability to swim."

Repairing Mirrors.

To renew the silvering on the back of a mirror, lay it face downward on a smooth surface and prepare a piece of tinfoil large enough to patch the damaged part by rubbing it with mercury. Place the patch in position, lay a sheet of paper over it and put on it a weight having a perfectly flat surface and heavy enough to press it down tightly. Let the mirror be in this position for a day or two and the foil will adhere to the glass.

Too Much.

Human life is often painted as painfully meager and pinched, but one of its most common shadows is regret bred by lack of self-restraint. Eating too much, talking too much, drinking too much, playing too much, tempting fate too much by various forms of gambling—all these forms of excess and others also contribute prodigally to the sum of the world's pain and sorrow and multiply its misfortunes.—Exchange.

Laundering a Collar.

It is said that 23 operations are necessary in laundering a collar, but the Jamestown Optimist can't find more than eight, which are as follows: Washing in hard water, using a trace of starch, fraying the edges, ripping the buttonholes, corrugating the inner surface, putting on four fly specks, ironing slightly and then throwing into the wrong bag.—Kansas City Star.

Sardines and Herrings.

Enormous quantities of very young herrings are caught in seines along the Maine coast. These are packed in cottonseed oil and sold as "sardines," which is exactly on a par with selling chopped veal under the name of chicken. The true sardines are caught on the coasts of France, Spain and Italy and are packed in olive oil.

Monopolize Thought.

It surely is the little things that cause the most worry in this old vale of tears, and when some mere trifle like a shoestring or a garter gives way at an especially inopportune moment one doesn't give much thought for the time being to our international relations.—Columbus Journal.

Uses of the Howitzer.

Howitzer is the name given to a particular piece of ordnance which is of great value in sieges. It is a small, light gun, which fires a shell at a small velocity but at a steep angle of descent. This makes it valuable as a means of bombarding trenches and in attacking low-lying defenses.

To Join Metal and Marble.

A cement for making metal and marble adhere consists of 30 parts of plaster of paris, 10 parts iron filings and half a part of sal ammoniac and acetic acid added to make a thin paste, which must be used immediately.

How Times Have Changed.

Wardrobe Mistress (to baggageman) Yes! Times have changed, Bill. I remember when we had a dozen large trunks for the chorus girls' costumes; now we only need that one.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

Only One of Its Kind.

On Dinis island, in one of the lakes of Killarney, Ireland, is a plane tree which has the reputation of being the only tree of its kind in Ireland.

That's So.

A laugh doesn't weigh much—except when it's on you; and as a rule a laugh has a good temper—for sometimes it is very hard to provoke a laugh.

Exceptions.

Everything keeps getting dearer—except our sweethearts and wives, who couldn't possibly be any dearer than they are now.—Boston Transcript.

All in the Belt.

An Englishman has perfected a belt-driven automobile, changes of speed being effected by moving the belt from one set of pullies to another.

The Last Resort.

Lady of House—"Why don't you go to work for a living?" Lazy Luke—"Well, lady, I want ter give every'ing else a fair trial first."

Won't Stand Repetition.

Never repeat a poor excuse. It may be better than none the first time, but the second time it is much worse than none.—Life.

Essential to Happiness.

Proper care of the body is vital to happiness.—Grenville Kleiser.

THE REASONS WHY

You Should Have a

PIPELESS CALORIC FURNACE

IN YOUR HOME

Health, Comfort and Convenience.

1—The Caloric conserves health by keeping an even temperature of circulated, moist, warm air throughout the house.

2—Heats from one to eighteen rooms with only one register.

3—Requires only a minimum amount of space. No pipes to obstruct the cellar.

4—Keeps the dust and dirt of fuel and ashes out of the house.

5—Does not heat the cellar, thereby permitting the storage of perishable products in the basement.

6—Maintains the proper fire with very little attention. All drafts regulated from floor above.

ECONOMY.

7—Reduces coal bills. No heat is lost through radiation in the basement and walls. Every pound of fuel consumed delivers a maximum amount of heat directly to the rooms.

8—Can be installed in old buildings without the necessity of costly remodeling. Can be placed in new buildings with less trouble and expense than any other type of furnace manufactured.

9—Its low cost places it within the reach of thousands of home owners who have previously been forced to rely upon inadequate stove heating.

GUARANTEE

10—The Caloric Patented Pipeless Furnace is manufactured and guaranteed by The Monitor Stove and Range Company, an organization which has been making and selling heating appliances for 98 years. The Monitor Ironclad written guarantee, that is given with every Caloric Pipeless Furnace, insures satisfaction to the purchaser.
