DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SUN FAIRIES.

"It was the most wonderful of evenings," commenced Daddy, "and the Elves gave a Picnic.

"Way, way up on a very high Hill they had this Picnic and they invited the Fairies, the Brownies and the Gnomes to come.

"When everyone had arrived at the top of the Hill, panting and puffing for it had been a hard climb and the Elves had asked everyone to walk for the exercise, they began at once to get out the Goodies to eat.

"'You see,' said one of the Elves, 'the reason we asked you to walk was because we wanted you all to be very hungry.'

'Out of moss-covered baskets they brought out the most delicious things to Eat, and they put everything on a great, enormous flat stone that was at the top of this Hill.

"'This will be our Dining Room Table,' they said, and all the Fairies, Brownies and Gnomes laughed, for they knew the Elves always had an unusual 'Dining-Room Table.'

"They ate from little plates beautifully made out of Straw and they drank from the most wonderful of Acorn Cups.

"When they had finished eating the Fairy Queen said she would tell them all a Story, and just as she said so, Mr. Sun began to grow very sleepy.

"'Are you going to leave us, Mr. Sun?' asked the Fairy Queen.

"'I have to,' he said. 'It's Bedtime and you're going to tell one of those Stories that puts me to Sleep.'

"'But it will grow so dark,' said the Fairy Queen, and the Elves added:

"'We didn't ask Mr. Moon to this Party. We forgot! So can't you stay with us?'

"'Sorry,' said Mr. Sun, 'but Bedtime is Bedtime you know and I am so very tired this Evening. It's been a hot day you see. That's my work! When it's hot and I've been working hard I'm tired!'

"'But in the Winter it isn't hot—and you often say then you're tired!' said the Fairy Queen.

"'That's right, I do,' said Mr. Sun 'but then it's so cold I have to work to keep everyone warm! Isn't that enough to make an old fellow tired?' and Mr. Sun smiled.

"Oh, I Am So Sleepy," He Said.

"'Oh, I am so sleepy,' he said, and all the Trees around, blowing in the wind, whispered to themselves:

"'He is so Sleepy,' and this they said over and over again.

"'I will tell you what I will do, though,' said Mr. Sun. 'I will leave in the sky the Fairies of the Sun.'

"'Have you Fairies too?' they all shouted.

"'Ah, yes! Wait and see!'

"Mr. Sun slowly went behind a Hill—but what should remain in the sky after he had left but wonderful Spots and Dots of red—bright, bright red—just the color Mr. Sun had been before he went behind his Hill for his night's Sleep.

"'They must be the Fairies of the Sun,' said the Fairy Queen.

"And from all around the Trees whispered again in the wind: 'The Fairies of the Sun, the Fairies of the Sun.'

"For the longest time they stayed in the Sky and they changed places with each other and played hide-and-go-seek with the Clouds.

"Such a good time as they had and the Fairy Queen told Story after Story for the Sky was very bright with the red Sun Fairies.

"Pretty soon, though, Mr. Moon began to peep up behind his Hill.

"'May I come to the Party?' he asked. 'I wasn't invited—but I'd enjoy coming just as much.'

"'Oh indeed you may, Mr. Moon,' said the Elves. 'We forgot to ask you—but we do want you.'

"'They forgot me,' grinned the Moon, 'but they want me, so it is all right.'

"And as he saw the Sun Fairies going away he said:

"'That's why I'm late. You had other Guests and I wanted to be admired.'

"'We do admire you,' said the Fairy Queen, 'but we were glad to see the Sun Fairies—for never before did we know what a Spotted Red Sky meant.'"
