PRESIDENT WILSON'S condition has become so alarming that specialists have been called in consultation with Dr. Grason, his regular physician.

AS a result of race riots in Arkansas sixteen people have been killed. Race riots seem to be the order of the day. Troops are patrolling the streets of several cities in that state. These riots are becoming alarming and it looks as though drastic measures will have to be taken to stop such occurrences in the future.

ALBERT C. RITCHIE
DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

Albert C. Ritchie, Democratic nominee for Governor, is the present Attorney General of Maryland, to which office he was elected four years ago by a majority of about 25,000 votes, running far ahead of the rest of the ticket.

Mr. Ritchie received his general education in Baltimore City and was graduated from the law school of the University of Maryland in 1898. In the same year he began the practice of law with the law firm of Steele, Semmes, Carey & Bond. Two years later he became a member of the firm. In March, 1903, Mr. Ritchie was appointed Assistant City Solicitor. In November of the same year he formed a law partnership with Stuart S. Janney. Since 1907 Mr. Ritchie has been Professor of Law at the University of Maryland.

In July, 1910, Mr. Ritchie became People's Counsel to the Public Service Commission of Maryland. One of the most important events in his career was the fight made by him in 1912 as People's Counsel for cheaper gas in Baltimore City. Practically single-handed, Mr. Ritchie was pitted against the best experts in the country and the ablest legal talent the Gas Company could employ. He devoted all of his time for nine monts to the fight, and his efforts resulted in a brilliant victory. The price of gas was reduced from 90 to 80 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, and the price of electricity from 10 to 8½ cents per K. W. H.

Mr. Ritchie resigned as People's Counsel in February 1913, to resume the practice of his profession. More than a year later it was charged that the gas company had evaded the reduction in the price of gas by lowering the quality. Mr. Ritchie devoted the summer of 1914 to study of this question, which he made as a private citizen and at his own expense. He filed a brief with the Public Service Commission and appeared before it at the hearings in behalf of the people of Baltimore. His work resulted in another victory when the Commission ordered the Gas Company either to restore the former quality of gas or to further reduce the price. The Gas Company decided to reduce the price to 75 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. The fights made by Mr. Ritchie, in and out of office, saved to the people of Baltimore an amount estimated to total about $700,000 annually.

In an editorial on the gas case The Baltimore Sun said:

"He (Ritchie) has gone up against the ablest lawyers the Gas Company could command—big corporations have a way of obtaining the best legal talent. He has measured lances with the most experienced fencers. And, whatever, the Commission's decision may be, Ritchie has made good."

When Mr. Ritchie resigned as People's Counsel, The Baltimore Star said editorially:

"His (Ritchie's) conduct of the gas probe was one of the most brilliant and exhaustive pieces of advocacy which have commanded public attention in Baltimore in recent years, but his very devotion to his work as a public servant required the neglect of his private practice, and it is not surprising that he finds it impossible to make further sacrifices. There can be little doubt, however, that he will be found serving the people in higher places in time; such abilities as his are needed in the public service."

After Mr. Ritchie had brought about a further reduction in the price of gas by his own investigation in 1914, The Baltimore Sun in an editorial said:

"Mr. Ritchie again wins the commendation of the public for honest service efficiently rendered."

The ability and energy shown by Mr. Ritchie as People's Counsel resulted in his nomination by the Democratic party in 1915 for Attorney General of the State. After his election he organized the first State Law Department, which took over the work of counsel to all of the State Boards and Commissions with the exception of the Public Service Commission.

In the summer of 1917, when the Governor convened the extra session of the Legislature to meet the emergencies growing out of the declaration of war, Mr. Ritchie undertook to draft the entire program of war legislation. Working day and night for weeks, Mr. Ritchie prepared all the war laws and had them printed and ready for introduction when the Legislature met—an achievement which was on a par with the splendid service he rendered as People's Counsel to the Public Service Commission.

Among the bills which Mr. Ritchie drafted were those postponing payments for the benefit of soldiers and sailors absent in the military service. Maryland was among the first States to adopt such legislation, Which was eventually followed by the Soldiers and Sailors' Civil Relief Act passed by Congress. In consultation with the labor interests of its kind devised in this country, and which was afterward copied by the Legislatures of other States. He also drew the bill giving absent soldiers and sailors the right to vote, which was, however, not passed until 1918. The Million-Dollar War Loan Act and the law establishing a State Farm for prison labor were also in the list of the war legislation presented by Mr. Ritchie.

Among the acts drafted by Mr. Ritchie and passed by the Legislature of 1918 were those increasing salaries of teachers and providing for the State aid to high schools; the Three Million Dollar Road Loan of 1918; abolishing prison labor; increasing the pay of policemen in Baltimore City; giving the Police Board of Baltimore City the power to reinstate officers who entered the military service; revising the insurance laws; creating the State Armory Commission; revising the bank laws providing that Contractors' bonds for State work should cover labor and materials. Mr. Ritchie also advised with the Governor in the preparation of the Budget Bill. The Attorney General secured the services of a committee of lawyers to advise with him in the drafting of the Home Rule Bill.

During the session of 1916 Mr. Ritchie drafted the laws abolishing continuing appropriations; creating the State Board of Labor and Statistics; creating the State Law Department; reducing the membership of the State Roads Commission; abolishing the envelop system of voting in the counties at primary elections and providing a registration day in the counties before primary elections.

Mr. Ritchie's work in Maryland gained for him nation-wide recognition, and he was summoned to Washington to become General Counsel to the U. S. War Industries Board, perhaps the most powerful of the admisistrative agencies connected with the prosecution of the war.

At the time of the announcement of Mr. Ritchie's appointment to the War Industries Board, the Baltimore Sun said:

"Let us hope that the State will again be able to command his services after the war. He has proved himself too good and efficient to be given up, permanently, without a struggle. There are few men in public life in Maryland who have shown as much energy, ability and devotion to the public welfare as he, and the people worthy of self-government will always strive to keep such men in office."

When the War Industries Board was dissolved in December, 1918, Mr. Ritchie received a letter from Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the Board, in which he said:

"The effective discharge of your work, and the cheerfulness which you carried at all times in difficult situations won for you the affection and admiration of all your associates. In the accomplishments of the United States War Industries Board you know you have done your full [illegible]
