The MOLINE Tractor is Universal

Free From Side Draft—Perfect Control

One man with one tractor does all field work from plowing to harvest

You have brought your corn from plowing through cultivating, and now it is ready for binding.

Maybe it's down and tangled. But, even if not, it is a real job to bind it with a horse drawn binder.

Side draft, guiding the team and operating the binder often make you wish you had four hands, as well as eyes in the back of your head.

The Moline-Universal Tractor and Corn Binder Hitch eliminates side draft. Control is perfect. You set it straight and the tractor front wheels that carry 98% of the weight stay straight, with just the slightest motion of the steering wheel right in your lap.

Here's what one man and a Moline-Universal Tractor can do in a ten-hour day:—

Plow 7 to 9 acres
Disc 27 acres with a 7' Tandem Disc Harrow
Disc 38 acres with a 10' Disc Harrow
Harrow 76 acres with a 20' Peg Tooth Harrow
Cultivate from 13 to 20 acres with a two-row Cultivator
Drill 35 acres with a 10' Grain Drill
Harvest 40 acres with a 10' Grain Binder
Harvest 10 acres with a Corn Binder
Mow 25 acres with a 8' Mower
Rake 40 acres with a 12' Rake

Immediate deliveries—a satisfactory stock of repair parts always on hand—prompt service when you need it.

You will thank us when your binder work is over.

If desired you can use the "drag behind" or horse drawn implements you now have with the Moline-Universal the same as with other types of tractors.

NATIONWIDE FIGHT AGAINST DISEASE

American Red Cross Will Have Health Centers in All Parts of United States.

The American Red Cross has launched upon a nation wide campaign of fighting disease and physical defect among the American people. A new and unique health institution has come into being as the result of several months' study by the Red Cross Health Service Department at National Headquarters.

Officials in charge of the department predict that before long this new health activity will be in actual operation all over the country, and that the sign—"American Red Cross Health Center"—will become as familiar to the people everywhere as are now the signs of the telegraph companies.

Busy Long Before War.

The interest of the American Red Cross in the fight against disease is not, however, of recent origin. Long before the war the organization began this health service through its medical units in disaster relief work and its department of Town and County Nursing. During the war and following the armistice thousands of American Red Cross officials have been fighting disease in the war-stricken countries. At the same time tens of thousands of local Red Cross officials have been engaged at home fighting disease, notably during the influenza epidemics.

The American Red Cross has determined that all this valuable experience in health service abroad and at home shall not go to waste. So long as there are a half a million people dying yearly in this country from preventable causes, and so long as more than one-third of the American children and young people are victims of physical defects, the Red Cross recognizes the urgent need for continued Red Cross health service at home.

How Organization Works.

The Red Cross Health Center is governed by business principles, applies business methods, and, in its more simple form, can be established and conducted by lay people.

It proceeds upon the demonstrated fact that health is a commodity that can be bought and sold like brooms and soap. Therefore, it establishes itself in a storeroom in the principal business section of the community. It displays its goods in the form of attractive health exhibits in its show windows. It advertises constantly and extensively. And it uses every business and social device to attract customers.

The Red Cross Health Center is of service to the sick in that it gives out reliable and complete information about existing clinics, hospitals, sanatoria and other institutions for the sick and the defective; about available nurses, both trained and practical; about when to consult a physician and why to shun the quack and his nostrums.

Teaching Disease Prevention.

The Red Cross Health Center is, however, of even greater service to the well. It teaches people how to prevent sickness and disease. This is done in many interesting and attractive ways—first of all, by the distribution of popular health literature and through health lectures illustrated with lantern slides or with health motion picture films. Then special exhibits are given, one after the other, on various health subjects. Practical demonstrations are made; also health playlets by children to interest and instruct themselves and their elders. Classes are organized in personal hygiene, home care of the sick, first aid and in food selection and preparation. Health clubs, both for younger and older people, are formed; also Little Mothers' Leagues. Nutrition and growth clinics are conducted for children.

Already more than a hundred of these Red Cross Health Centers are in actual operation throughout the country. Many of them also conduct medical clinics, but the one chief, outstanding feature of the American Red Cross Health Center is its health education service which teaches well people how to keep well.

FRENCH PRAISE FOR OUR RED CROSS WORK

Lauding the work accomplished by American philanthropy for war-stricken France, Andre Tardieu, former high commissioner from that nation to the United States, in a recent article widely commented on throughout the French press, says:

"The American Red Cross has accomplished a work which calls for the heartfelt gratitude of every true Frenchman. In 1918 this great relief organization spent in behalf of France nearly 87,000,000 francs, and in 1919 its expenditures on charitable projects in our country attained the tremendous total of 171,000,000. It has recently turned over to the French relief organizations huge stocks of supplies whose value must be counted in the hundreds of thousands of francs.

"Fifteen million American boys and girls, banded together in the Junior Red Cross of America, are back of a movement to establish the closest ties between themselves and France's younger generation through the charitable works they have financed, and are now carrying out among our little war sufferers.

"The bonds of friendship between France and America is cemented with mutual admiration, respect and gratitude."

CITY'S GLORY LONG DEPARTED

Petra, Once Great Trade Center, Is Now Place Utterly Without Human Inhabitants.

In A. D. 106 one of Trajan's generals conquered Petra, the ancient city of the Nabataeans in Arabia, and created the Roman province of Arabia Petraea, but the city continued to flourish as a trade center under the strong peace of Rome, writes Lowell Thomas in Asia magazine. In those days Petra was the focusing point on the caravan routes from the interior of Arabia, Persia and India to Egypt, Palestine and Syria. It was a great safe deposit of fabulous wealth, fortressed by frowning cliffs. When Roman power waned, the Romanized Nabataeans were unable to withstand the desert hordes. The caravan trade was diverted through other channels and Petra declined in importance.

A little more than a century ago, John Lewis Burckhardt, a Swiss traveler, who had heard rumors of a great city of rock lying far out on the fringe of the Arabian desert, penetrated the gorge and found once more this wonderful old city of Petra, which had not been mentioned in any literary record since A. D. 536.

In the century or more since Burckhardt wrote of his discovery of the rock city in a letter from Cairo, only a few explorers and archeologists from the west have visited Petra. The journey is so long and arduous and the danger of violence from Bedouin nomads so great that not many have had the time or zeal to attempt it. The lion and the lizard kept the court where Jamshyd gloried and drank deep until Thomas Lawrence brought his fighting Bedouins into this city of tombs and empty palaces.

CHILD WHO CAUSED A WAR

British Girl Only Six Years of Age Was the Innocent Center of Trouble in Assam.

The discovery that Mary Winchester, who when only six years of age was the cause of the Lushais war, is still alive, has aroused the greatest interest.

She was abducted by the natives of northern Assam, and when the fighting was over it was found that the chiefs of the Lushais had almost defied her, and they pleaded with the British officers to be allowed to keep her to become the head of the tribe. Mary's father was a native of Elgin, and belonged to one of the leading county families in Morayshire. When the story of the Lushai outrage reached Elgin it caused great consternation, and the M. P. for Moray and Nairn raised the matter in the house of commons and took it further—even to Queen Victoria herself. So it came about that the punitive force was sent against the Lushais. On receipt of the news that Mary Winchester had been rescued and was alive and well, Elgin gave itself up to a riot of rejoicing, and later still, on her arrival at her grandparents' home, the whole town made holiday to welcome her.

Prior to traveling north Mary had the honor of being received by Queen Victoria. The little maid, despite the fact that she had changed her native dress for European attire, was then and for some considerable time afterward of a dark almond color wherever her skin had been exposed to the tropical sun of Assam.
