PROCLAMATION OF THE GOVERNOR REQUESTING THE PEOPLE OF MARYLAND TO RESPOND TO THE FOURTH ANNUAL ROLL CALL OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
ANNAPOLIS, MARYLAND.

WHEREAS, The American Red Cross will hold its Fourth Annual Roll Call for members between November 11th and November 24th.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, ALBERT C. RITCHIE, GOVERNOR OF MARYLAND, being mindful of the great achievement of the American Red Cross in behalf of the people of the United States, as well as other people of the world, do hereby urge all the citizens of Maryland to respond promptly to this call. Red Cross service is being given efficiently in our State, and it is the duty of all to help keep this organization, which has made such a splendid record in peace and in war, active and able to answer the demands constantly being made upon it.

I hope that all Red Cross members in Maryland will renew their membership, and will make an effort to enroll additional members. I am confident that Maryland will not fail to show its appreciation of what has been done by the American Red Cross. We must do our part in assisting it to continue to serve mankind.

THE GREAT SEAL OF THE STATE OF MARYLAND

GIVEN under my hand, and the Great Seal of the State of Maryland, at the Capitol, in the City of Annapolis, this 10th day of November, in the year of our Lord, Nineteen Hundred and Twenty.

ALBERT C. RITCHIE.

By the Governor:

PHILIP B. PERLMAN,
Secretary of State.

"THE AMERICAN RED CROSS DESERVES A HEARTY RESPONSE," SAYS PRESIDENT IN ANNUAL MESSAGE.

The Roll Call Is A Fitting Season To Take Counsel With Our Inner Selves And To Reaffirm Allegiance To The Great Relief Organization.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The following message from President Wilson, who is also President of the American Red Cross, to the American people, was issued from the White House today:

"The American Red Cross deserves a hearty response to its fourth invitation to annual membership, which will be issued during the fortnight beginning November the Eleventh, Armistice Day.

"Under the stimulus of war and through the co-operation of our people, this organization grew into immense size, enlarged its range of activity, served not only our fighting forces, but also civilians involved in the hardships of war in our own nation and in the nations associated with us in a great common enterprise, and gave to the world an example of effective mercy through co-ordinated effort.

"Since the cessation of hostilities the organization has faced a dual duty: First, to fulfill obligations created by the war, and secondly, to adapt its exper'ence and machinery to the needs of peace.

"It is, today, still assisting government agencies in the care and cheer of our disabled soldiers and sailors, in replacing those able to work in civilian occupations, and in counseling and aiding the families of former combatants; and it is still assisting, with diminished resources, the process of rehabilitation in some of the more prostrated countries of our former asso iates.

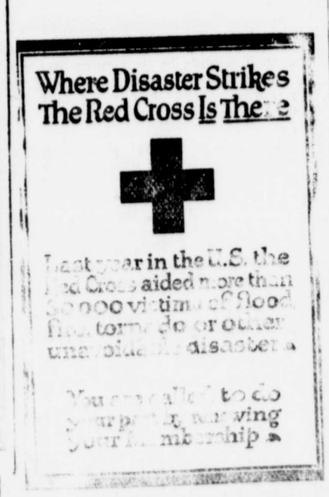
"While continuing these manifest obligations, the Red Cross has been accommodating methods and applying lessons learned in war to the normal needs of our own people in times of peace, especially in regions where provisions for public health and welfare were imperfectly developed. It has placed public health nurses in many localities, and has endeavored to enlist greater numbers of young women in the nursing profession in order that the supply might more nearly equal the steadily increasing demand for community nurses. It has devised a scheme of "public health centers" for the relief of maladies and for instruction in hygiene, dietetics, and general principles of disease-prevention. With its nurses and nurses' aids it has rendered incalculable service in the serious epidemics of influenza. It has carried instruction in hygiene and first aid into schools, the women's clubs, and the homes of our country. It has taught young and untaught mothers how to care intelligently for their babies, and has done much in many ways to promote child welfare, upon which the welfare of the nation ultimately rests. It has made it a fundamental principle to avoid futile duplications, to co-operate with public agencies when its co-operation was sought, and to supply deficiencies where such agencies had not yet been established.

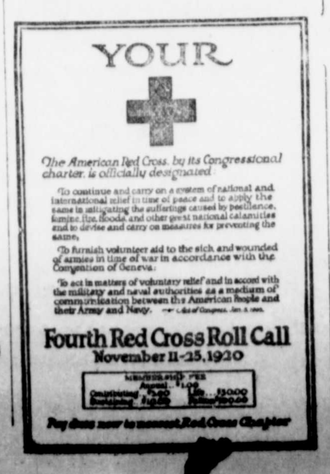
"It has continued its educational work among the school children through its Junior Red Cross branch, and it has, as one result of its war experience, put preparation for disaster-relief on a scientific foundation, so that it is now equipped to meet disaster emergencies promptly in almost every part of our country.

"By systematic plans and practical performances, it has given a clear answer to the question why the Red Cross should be continued and carried over from war activity into peace-time activity. The answer is in the record.

"Additional to these obvious aspects of the matter, there is another reason why I, as President of the United States and President of the American Red Cross, urge my fellow-countrymen to join the Red Cross in impressive numbers: Reaction follows emotion, and after great effort comes perilous lassitude. Sound patriotism and genuine human service are continuous not intermittent, not contingent merely upon the excitement of war. If there is in some of us an inward cooling of the fine fervor which animated us in the crisis of the nation's stress and peril, a contraction of the spirit which ennobled us as individuals and as a nation, now, during the "Red Cross Roll Call," is a fitting season to take counsel with our inner selves, to rekindle the old flame, to reaffirm allegiance to practical patriotism and practical humanitarianism, and to symbolize the regeneration of our better thoughts and handsomer selves by re-enlistment in a great army mobilized for the common good.

(Signed) "WOODROW WILSON."





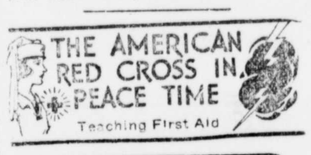
SENSITIVENESS HURTS A MAN

Affliction Often Results in Absolute Ruin of Persons Who Are Inclined to Be Ambitious.

In an article called "How I Cured Myself of Being Sensitive," a writer says in the American Magazine:

"'Wagner, you've got ability,' he cried, 'but you'll never get anywhere in this world until you quit tearing yourself to pieces! I've watched you for the last three years; twice I've had it in mind to push you up a notch in the office, and every time I've passed you and picked some one else, because I knew you aren't fit to handle other men. No man is fit to handle other men until he has learned to control himself. You can't, you're too blamed sensitive.

"'Little setbacks break your heart. A letter of complaint comes in from some customer and you take it as a personal criticism, and lose a day's work brooding over it. You see me in conference with some of the other men and you stab yourself wondering why you weren't invited and imagine that I have turned against you. You hear about some one who is making more money than you, and immediately all far fields look greener. You're a fairly useful cog in your present job, and it might put me to some annoyance to lose you. But you'll never hold a big job until you can forget your own petty self and learn to laugh when the world takes a crack at you. Hanged if I don't think sometimes it might be better if you were to get out and try your hand somewhere else.'"



Every person mentally and physically able to do so should take the American Red Cross instruction in First Aid Treatment. It's a life-saver and a pain-saver on the farm, in the factory, on the street, at the office, in the home, wherever accidents may occur. Here's a young wife who inexpertly wielded a can-opener and received an ugly gash across her wrist from the jagged can lid. Mother was there, however, with the First Aid kit and Red Cross instruction, and probably prevented a case of blood poison by giving prompt and proper treatment before the doctor arrived.

Boys and girls who learn early to take proper care of their teeth, throats, eyes, ears and stomachs, have made a long step toward healthy manhood and womanhood. Through its public health and nursing services, the American Red Cross aims eventually to reach all school children with teachings regarding disease prevention and health promotion. Here's a school nurse treating a little girl for sore mouth, at the same time implanting a valuable lesson in teeth-brushing and proper diet.
