Local Matters.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.—The obstruction of travel northward from Baltimore by the burning of several bridges on the Philadelphia and Northern Central Railroads—said to have been done by the authorities of Baltimore to prevent the passage of Northern troops through that city to Washington—has compelled persons residing in the North, and who happened to be in Baltimore or the South prior to that event, to seek their homes through our peninsula. This circumstance has caused the passage of a large number of travelers through our town during the past week, among whom were several gentlemen of distinction in our country, but no one whose name is more familiar to our readers than that of T. S. ARTHUR, Esq., the publisher of the popular work known as Arthur's Home Magazine, and a literary writer of world-wide celebrity and renown. Summoned from his home in Philadelphia last week to attend the bed-side of his dying mother in Baltimore, he saw her breath her last on Monday evening; and learning that an order had been issued prohibiting steamers leaving the city after the next day, he was reluctantly compelled to hasten home before the last sad rites of sepulture were performed.

Finding the hotels and boarding houses already full, and unable to procure a conveyance to connect with the railroad at Smyrna, he made known to us his dilemma, and solicited our intercession in his behalf. We of course at once became interested in his case, and after spending a short time in pleasant conversation, we soon succeeded in securing him a comfortable conveyance, when with many expressions of gratitude, he started for home, where we trust he is now safely domiciled in the bosom of his happy family.

Col. MAY, of the regular army, the hero of Resaca de la Palma, in the Mexican war, was in town on Monday night. He has resigned his position in the army, and was on his way to his home in New York.

ENROLMENT OF THE MILITIA.—By order of Col. Joseph Wickes the work of enroling the militia of our county has been commenced. Besides the two uniformed companies, there are about eighty others in Chestertown of lawful age to bear arms. Attention is called to the order in another column.

☞ We would charge the public not to believe more than a tenth part of all the rumors that are constantly floating about. Almost every one we meet has some special news of an exciting character, which is either not true at all, or has so little of fact in it as to make it entirely worthless.

A SUNDAY MASS MEETING IN BOSTON—A REGIMENT FORMED UNDER FLETCHER WEBSTER.—BOSTON, April 21.—A mass meeting of our citizens was held in State street this morning, and addressed by Fletcher Webster, Charles L. Woodbury, and many other distinguished citizens. The meeting was for the purpose of raising a regiment for Fletcher Webster to command, and was completely successful. The most intense excitement prevails.

MOVEMENTS OF PRESIDENT DAVIS AND GENERAL BEAUREGARD.—We learn, says "The South," upon excellent authority, that on Saturday Governor Wise received a despatch from President Davis, stating that with Gen. Beauregard, and a well appointed army, he was prepared to enter Washington so soon as Virginia was in a condition to afford such assistance as was necessary. Governor Wise replied, "Come on—Virginia is prepared and eager to march with you into the Federal Capital."

SPECIAL ELECTION IN BALTIMORE.—It will be remembered that the seats of the members from Baltimore City in the House of Delegates were declared vacant previous to the adjournment of the last session of that body. An election was accordingly held in that city on Wednesday, when the following ticket was chosen without opposition: John C. Brune, Ross Winans, H. M. Warfield, J. Hanson Thomas, T. P. Scott, H. M. Morfit, S. Teackle Wallis, Chas. H. Pitts, Wm. G. Harrison, Laurence Sangston.

THE late departure of fugitives slaves from various Northern States to Canada, says the Washington Star, is a circumstance which tells more forcibly than words can express, the fact that hereafter the South is to have no more reason to complain of the non-execution of the Fugitive Slave law. These hundreds of runaways had been domiciled in different non-slaveholding States for years, none of them having recently escaped from the South. Realizing that the change in popular sentiment throughout the North has rendered it certain that whenever and wherever reclaimed within the limits of the United States they would be surrendered to their owners, they have thus taken time by the forelock and rushed into Canada. In the face of this pregnant fact, proclaiming beyond all question that the South will have no further Fugitive Slave law grievance to complain of, the disunion newspapers are endeavoring to create the impression that the exodus was one of slaves recently escaped from the South!

WE suffer for the offences of our progenitors: our descendants will suffer for ours. The self-justifying ancestor may asseverate that his surfeits of viands and wines, and his indulgences in narcotics, do him no harm; but three generations afterward, delirium and gout will shriek out their denials in his great-grand-children.—Horace Mann.

TO THE PUBLIC.

A correspondence between E. F. Chambers, Esq., and several gentlemen, was published in the last week's Conservator. The letter of E. F. C. is dated 30 March, the same day my reply to his malicious and unfounded attack was published in the "Kent News." I appended to my Address a correspondence between myself and nine gentlemen, whose letter negatived pointedly and fully the misrepresentations of E. F. C.'s address in reference to me. The force and weight of this correspondence, as well as the facts stated in my publication, were so annoying and overwhelming to the individual, that, on the spur of the moment, while writhing under the agony of merited discomfiture, he addressed a letter to four of the nine gentlemen who had responded to my letter.

He inquires of those gentlemen, if I did not state the precise number of slaveholders in Kent. Who denied it? In my address I refer to the census returns, to its weakness in "numerical strength," &c. "and of stating a fact furnished by them." Also in my letter to the nine gentlemen alluded to, "a certain number." He also inquires if I did not ask if there were not other interests in the community?—Did I or any other man of common sense ever deny there were various interests? He says: Judges, lawyers, doctors, carpenters, butchers, &c., and he might have added, mechanical, maratime, commercial, agricultural, manufacturing, the freeholder, tenantry, &c. He next inquires if he did not condemn the man who would set at variance the different classes, &c. Who denied any of these things? In my published address I stated that I was "unconscious that any such construction could be placed upon my speech by any candid and just man; that I did not understand his remarks in reference to the various interests of society, to which he alludes, as designed to impute to me different views, or to have a personal application. I think he knows me too well to suppose that I would have suffered him to escape without a merited rebuke," &c. Why does he refer to matters utterly unimportant and wholly irrelevant? The language imputed to me does not change in the slightest or remotest degree, any sentiment that I uttered, nor does it afford the shadow of a ground for the gross misrepresentation of my views. The object was adroitly managed. Feeling the overpowering force of my address and the letter of the nine gentlemen, he wished to divert public attention from the true issue between us, and like the wounded adder, to cast his venom against the person of his opponent.

I submit to the good sense, judgment, and taste of the community, if there is a single word of "Billingsgate" or "scurrility" in my address. To assert it, is to confound and pervert the meaning of words and evinces the desperate recklessness of a defeated assailant, equalled only by the silly inquiry made by him in his letter to the gentlemen alluded to. The correspondence between those gentlemen and myself was long, and necessarily had to be placed at the end of my address. To have inserted it in the body would have broken the thread and connection, and impaired the sense and unity of my letter to the public. Being thus placed at the termination of the article, he inquires in his letter to Messrs. Smyth, Westcott, Ricaud, and Ruth, "whether they in their letter to me designed to sanction, approve, or certify to anything stated in the preceding article, headed 'George Vickers' Reply to the attack of Judge Chambers.'" The several answers of those gentlemen were that they had not seen the reply. The letter of those gentlemen to me is dated 25th March, and my publication is on the 30th. They are wisely asked, on the 25th March, if they sanctioned or approved, &c., an article published on the 30th of March, five days before they saw or could have seen it. I submit, whether any sensible man ever asked a more absurd question? and yet such questions, coupled with vituperation, constitute the staple of this last effort of a wise ex-Senator and ex-Judge. But, as I ask that "nothing may be extentuated, nor aught set down in malice," I leave him to his own reflections, and to the compunctions of a conscience, which may long stifle, but cannot entirely suppress, its own convictions of a gratuitous and vindictive calumny.

I owe an apology to the public for inviting their attention to this subject, while the vital interests of the country are pressing with unusual sadness the patriot's heart. The condition of public affairs and the impenetrable cloud that skirts the future, hang as a pall upon the spirits of the people, and should admonish us all of the necessity of unity of feeling and effort in these times of ominous peril, and lead us to look to a source higher than all earthly power for relief, in this the darkest hour of our country's history.

GEORGE VICKERS.

CHESTERTOWN, April 27, 1861.

THE FRENCHMAN AMONG THE BIG-BUGS.—French gentleman, retiring for the night. I must zee de proprietaire du maison!—I vas vary mooch recommend to dis hotel—dey tell me all de rish peoples, all de big bugs, stop here! Ma foi! de bugs am ver' big. I sall not have plood enough in my pody to satisfy them!" A little of Costar's Exterminator, sold by S. Wickes, Chestertown, would have killed them all. Let all who are annoyed with rats, mice, roaches, &c., give it a trial.

LEADING DEMOCRATS FOR DECISIVE MEASURES.

Judge Douglas and other leading Democrats who have heretofore favored a peace policy, now openly advocate the most decisive measures, and avow their readiness to sustain the Government heartily and energetically. Other opponents have come forward in the same patriotic spirit, and the feeling is spreading.

From the South we have the opposite manifestation of feeling; the President's proclamation is viewed as a declaration of war, and replied to with defiance.

TO THE LOVERS OF GOOD HORSES.

THE public attention is specially called to Mr. R. H. Dulany's

"Splendid Cleveland Bay,"

he is full bred, imported from England in 1856, and took the 1st premium as the best horse at Chewsford Fair, for "Coaching" purposes, cost his owner six thousand dollars.

Scrivington

is a fine dark and rich bay, full sixteen hands one inch high, fine bone and muscle, black legs mane, and tail, weighs 1300 lbs., free from all natural defects, remarkably docile, a great and striking characteristic of this race of horses.

His colts at four and six weeks old have been frequently sold for from one to one hundred and fifty dollars, and at eighteen months to two years old at three and four hundred dollars by Dulany.

SCRIVINGTON is not recommended as a race horse, but for harness or any kind of heavy draught. He was never trained only exercised six or seven mornings on "Upperville Jockey Club" course, by Mr. Walter E. Morgan, who drove him in harness at the rate of one mile in three minutes. Mr. Morgan now keeps a depot at No. 77 North Calvert street, Baltimore, for the sale and purchase of horses, treatment of their diseases, &c. Scrivington's pedigree is very full and strictly true as stated—descended from that most noted Cleaveland Bay Horse "Hamilton Hero" on one side, and Splendour on the other. Splendour when three years old beat "Greylock" who had defeated fifty three Cleveland Bay horses trotting.

The Cleaveland Bays are and have long been proverbial in England for their very superior qualities as coach horses. He does not come here from any want of patronage in Virginia, but only from a pledge made long ago to me. Mr. Dulany has a Black Hawk Morgan and a four years old Cleaveland Bay at home this season. There is no humbug about Scrivington, and the public may rely upon everything as stated so far as I can find out from a knowledge of him since 1857; the earliest associations of my boyhood were in Fauquier, and I believe Mr. Dulany to be a high minded, honorable Virginia gentleman. References to citizens of Upperville, Fauquier Co., Leesburg, &c., Virginia: R. H. Dulany, Welburn, Loudon co., Va. Address him near Upperville. Walter E. Morgan, Baltimore. See handbills.
