LITTLE, BUT VERY PRACTICAL

Occasionally the Small People Have Exceedingly Comprehensive Ideas About Things Mundane.

"What a splendid big boy!" said a lady visitor, addressing the small son of a distinguished novelist, whom she found deep in an illustrated fairy tale. "And you can spell out what it says under the pictures, can't you, dear? Why, it won't be long before you'll enjoy the stories your papa writes as much as any one!"

The little fellow regarded her gravely. "The stories papa writes aren't meant to enjoy," he explained. "That's the stories he tells. The stories he writes are just to pay the butcher and the grocer!"

The caller was naturally quite shocked at the child's literal and mercenary acceptance of her favorite author's jocular way of referring—within the family circle—to his literary labors.

Many years ago a somewhat similar anecdote was related by the poet Bryant of his little daughter Julia. A neighbor, shown into the library where the little maiden sat solitary upon the floor, with a huge volume of Milton, with Dore's illustrations, spread open before her, inquired pleasantly, by way of greeting:

"Reading poetry, already, little girl?"

Little Julia corrected her politely, but with authority:

"People don't read poetry. Papas write poetry and mammas sing poetry, and little girls learn to say poetry, but nobody reads poetry. That isn't what it's for!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

TWO MONTHS OF DAYLIGHT

Mystery and Witchery Offered to Travelers in the Land of the Midnight Sun.

There is always mystery and witchery to the people of temperate climes in thinking of the Land of the Midnight Sun, and accounts by travelers who have witnessed its rare beauties are welcome as a page from some romance.

From the end of May to the last days of July in Norway and Sweden the sun shines day and night without giving place to darkness. The stars are never seen during this time of continuous daylight, and the moon shines pale and cold. Summer is so short that the wild flowers have just enough time to grow, to bloom and to fade, and the farmer is barely able to gather in his harvest, which, however, is sometimes nipped by a summer frost.

The midnight sun passes and a few weeks later the hours of sunshine shorten rapidly, the air becomes chilly and the nights colder, although the sun is warm during the day. All this happens by the middle of August, and then the grass turns yellow, the leaves change their color, wither and fall; the swallows and other migrating birds fly southward; twilight comes again, bringing the stars, one by one, which now shine brightly in the pale blue sky; the moon appears again as queen of the night, lighting and cheering the long, dark days of the Scandinavian winter.—New York Herald.

Repair Shops for Airplanes.

The enormous use of airplanes during the European war has resulted in an extensive use of special motor airplane repair shops.

These portable airplane factories were first used by the French, and are marvels of ingenuity, for, in addition to carrying propellers and wings for airplanes, they are fitted with lathes, drilling machines, forges and in fact, most of the apparatus necessary to completely rebuild an airplane except, of course, the engine.

Fitted with powerful engines these airplane motors can get up a tremendous speed despite their weight, and are quickly on the scene of any airplane smash.

In the roofs of many of these motors, by the way, are windows or openings through which an observer can watch the flight of the airplanes.—Cleveland News-Leader.

A Futile Love.

Senator Borah said at a dinner in Boise:

"We all love peace, universal peace, yet we do nothing to hasten its advent. This makes us seem foolish and futile, like the sailor.

"Two sailors in a sailors' boarding house got into an argument about the meat they were eating. The first said it was beef. The second said it was pork.

"'Shiver me timbers, it's beef,' said the first.

"'It's pork, ye lubber,' said the second—A-1 pork.'

"'Well, it tastes like beef, anyway,' said the first sailor, 'but I hope you're right, for I love a bit of pork.'"

Ants Eat Flowers.

A new type of ant, large, vicious and prolific, is playing havoc with the flower industry of the Italian Riviera. Horticulturists are required to report the appearance of this pest immediately and to take prescribed steps for its destruction. The ants are supposed to have been introduced from the Argentine.—Scientific American.

The Flip Flapper.

"Now, Madge, I'm not squeamish, but if you want to make a good impression upon my aunt you've got to peel off some of that war paint. She doesn't so much as powder her nose."

"Why, Tommy, what a shining example of old-fashioned virtue your aunt must be!"—Judge.
