"GAY NINETIES SHOW THE WAY TO MODERNISTS"

The ghosts of the "gay nineties" probably are enjoying a laugh at the ultra-moderns.

The "Modernists," as represented by the Oakland Motor Car company, thought they had something new and smart in the way of an automobile advertising novelty when they marked the introduction of the Pontiac Six by striking a medal. It bore a likeness of Pontiac, famous Ottawa chieftain, and was inscribed "Pontiac, Chief of the Sixes."

But just a few days ago a laborer excavating near the Oakland Six plant unearthed a medal of almost identical size and bearing another conception of Chief Pontiac's features. On its obverse side was the inscription "Pontiac Buggy Co., Pontiac, Mich., Western Amesbury Line."

Investigation revealed the medal was struck in 1896 to celebrate the introduction of the "Western Amesbury" line of buggies which the reverse side of the medal asserts. "are worth 100 cents on the dollar in gold."

Thus the Pontiac Buggy company which later envolved into the Oakland Motor Car company, appears to have beaten Oakland to the idea by a margin of about 32 years.

DEATHS

Mr. Wm. A. Sacker died at the home of his son Horatio J. Sacker in Queen Annes County, on Monday night last aged 87 years. He was born in London England and was a sea faring man many years, going around the world twelve times, also served in the English army and was awarded the Victorian Cross for bravery. He leaves four sons. His body was carried to Baltimore last Thursday and interred in Druid Ridge Cemetery with Masonic rites. W. T. Hicks, funeral director.
