HEALTH NOTES

INSECT ENEMIES

Wood ticks have been recognized as go-betweens in th spread of rabbit fever—tularemia—typhus fever, and more recently, of Rocky Mountain spotted fever, to human beings. They are accordingly being black-listed by health departments, including the State Department of Health of Maryland.

For the protection of campers and picnickers against these insect enemies, the State Department of Health advises persons who are in charge of summer camps and recreation grounds to clear out the undergrowth along paths and especially along the approaches to bathing shores. Explaining the reason for this recommendation, Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health said: "Everybody who has ever had any experience with them, will agree that wood ticks are pests, and that even when they are not sources of danger they cause great discomfort. But since it has ben found that certain kinds of ticks may also be carriers of the germs that cause certain diseases, they have been given a definite status as insect enemies and that there is a very real reason for waging war against them.

"The diseases for which ticks have been found to be carriers, include Rocky Mountain spotted fever, which usually occurs during the summer, and tularemia or rabbit fever, which is more likely to be contracted after the hunting season opens in the fall. Rocky Mountain spotted fever has been prevalent in sections of the West for some time, but it was not recognized in this part of the country until recently. Last year 23 cases were reported to the Maryland State Department of Health. All of them occurred in the counties, and in nearly every instance, investigation showed that the patients had been bitten by wood ticks. The same thing was shown in connection with the investigation of the 20 cases of rabbit fever that occurred in the State last year.

"The ticks that become 'carriers' suck out the infections material from animals that are themselves infected. They transmit this disease producing material to the human beings upon whom they attach themselves. Not all ticks are infected, but it is wiser to regard all of them as possible sources of danger—as they are of discomfort—and to clear out their breeding places. They are especially likely to be found on low bushes and in the undergrowth along the approaches to bathing shores.

"In removing ticks that have become imbedded in the flesh, be careful not to crush the insects. It is possible for the disease producing material to be absorbed through a break in the skin, or a scratch, as wel as through the bite of the insect."

ENJOYMENTS OF AGE

The saying that a man is as old as his arteries may be modified to read that a man is also as old as his bacteria. Infections and diet, says Dr. Lloyd Arnold, chief of the diagnostic laboratories of the Illinois State Department of Public Health, as quoted i nthe New York Sun, are the two factors that bring on premature senility. He says further:

We live in a world heavily and densely populated with bacteria. Few of these germs are capable of producing disease in man. But those which are disease producers must get into our body through some body-covering surface, such as the skin, the liming membrane of the nose, throat or intestines. If our diet is well balanced or our habits are good we possess a natural resistance against these germs. We must live with them, they are around us, but we do not act as hosts to these ever-present guests. If we can keep our body in its proper state of function by diet and by our daily habits we are healthy. The sunset period of our life's cycle will be postponed, and when it does arrive we will be able to enjoy it.

Where as our ancestors often began to be old at 40, Dr. Arnold says that modern man is just in his prime at 60; old age often does not begin to set in until 70 is well past. Since men can choose their own diet and control their own leisure they often have in their own hands the direction of the means of procuring those "enjoyments of ripe old age" which Dr. Arnold holds to be unlimited.

Art Work Made Whole After Five Centuries

Nearly five hundred years ago an artist, whose name is now unknown, painted a wonderful picture of the Annunciation. It was a large work and contained so much detail that shortly after it was finished it was cut up into four separate pieces, each of which formed a beautiful picture. If you visit the exhibition of French pictures at Burlington house, London, you may see the four portions of the picture reunited for the second time in five centuries.

For years it was not known what had happened to three of the four pieces. One was in the Louvre in Paris, but where were the others? Eventually it was found that the second was in Amsterdam, the third in Brussels, and the fourth in a private collection in this country. Photographs of the four parts were placed together, and these showed that they undoubtedly form one picture.

The first occasion since the artist painted it when the picture was seen as a whole was two years ago, when the parts were joined together at an exhibition in Paris.

Other great pictures have been cut up in the same way, but in nearly every case the severed parts have eventually come into the same hands and have been permanently joined together again.—London Tit-Bits.

Exercise of the Veto Traced to Roman Law

The use of the veto power by an executive of a state has an origin which has been traced back as far as the old Roman state, when the tribunes, by using the word "interdico," which means "I interdict," halted the legislative acts of the senate.

As far back as 1642 the veto power was recognized in Poland by law, any member of the imperial diet being able to block legislation by proclaiming the Polish words which mean in substance "I do not allow."

The king of England has the power of veto, but it is a power to which recourse has not been taken for generations, the last instance on record being in 1707.

The Constitution of this country also provides for the veto, but the President's power to veto is limited in that it can be overridden. The veto by President Jackson of the bill to recharter the bank of the United States is one of the first on record.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. ©1931, C. M. Co.
