ON THE SCREEN AT THE NEW LYCEUM

While on the set of M-G-M's "White Cargo" artist Morr Kusnet painted a sketch of Hedy Lamarr and Walter Pidgeon enacting a romantic scene in the film coming soon to the New Lyceum Theatre.

Lamarr-Pidgeon In "White Cargo" Drama

Hedy Lamarr and Walter Pidgeon provide a dynamic combination in "White Cargo" film version of this famous stage play, coming soon to the New Lyceum Theatre with Miss Lamarr as the glamorous Tondelayo, native charmer, and Pidgeon as the two-fisted driving rubber plantation supervisor Witzel. The story of the African rubber jungles is one of stark elemental drama, played by a faultless cast and directed with deft skill by Richard Thorpe.

Action is laid in a steaming rubber jungle. As the story opens Bramwell Fletcher, playing Pidgeon's assistant, has been driven almost insane by the jungle, and leaves on the river boat which brings Richard Carlson in to replace him. The dark-skinned Tondelayo displays her charms, but warned by Pidgeon, Carlson at first shuns her. Later she fascinates him, which precipitates a tense dramatic, situation ending in his fiery sweetheart's attempt to poison him.

Throughout the story is played against the drab cabins of the rubber workers and the sinister shadows of a jungle deep in the Dark Continent.

Miss Lamarr wearing a lurong, a new version of a sarong, is gripping as the sultry native beauty, and Pidgeon plays his two-fisted role with conviction. Frank Morgan is convincing as the bibulous but kindly old settlement doctor, and Henry O'Neill as the missionary of the district. Reginald Owen and Clyde Cook extract comedy from their roles as captain and first mate of the river steamer calling at the settlement.

Beautiful photography by Harry Stradling's camera did much to present the sinister impression of the jungle, and the musical score by Bronisula Kaper likewise puts the audience "en rappore" with the jungle atmosphere.

WOMEN AT WAR

Janey

Janey closed the bedroom door and locked it. Alone at last! She threw back her head and heaved a deep sigh. Then she peeked out of the corner of her eye at the mirror to see whether she really did look like Hedy LaMarr. Quite a lot, she decided.

And now to business. She drew forth from the bottom of her top bureau drawer the sheet of pink writing-paper and the envelope that she had been saving for this day. She sat down at the table by the window and dipped the pen into the bottle of green ink that her sister Rose was such a pig about. She wrote, with beautiful arabesques, "Dear Mr. Morgenthau," and held her head back to admire this effort of the best pupil in penmanship class.

"Here are my stamps for a bond. $18.75. I started last Christmas when I got $3.00. Not counting 50 cents, I have earned all the rest, working one or more days a week at a local grocery store, and I'm quite proud to say I worked hard to get it."

Janey stared out of the window at Peterson's house and beyond at the big yard where the kids were playing football. She held her pen elegantly in air.

"Sitting here looking out the window, I see a peaceful little town, and I wonder how the world can be in such a turmoil and the people of this world can have such hate for their fellow men. So I'm proud to send these stamps because I know I'm helping to make the whole world peaceful again like our little town."

She signed her name with an important flourish, not forgetting a conspicuous "Miss" in front of the "Janey." After she had sealed the letter she went on staring out of the window. It really was awfully peaceful. Overhead she heard a plane go humming by through the sunny afternoon air.

Then the voice of her best friend, Betty, called from outside—"Janey!" In an instant Janey was on her feet and tearing downstairs and out. She was not Hedy LaMarr nor a deep philosopher any more, but exactly twelve years old.

(Letter from an actual communication in the files of the Treasury Department.)

Grown-ups and children alike should all help the "breadwinner" of the family to budget for War Bonds. Let's all join a payroll savings plan and "top that 10% by New Year's."
