ON THE SCREEN AT THE NEW LYCEUM

"Slightly Dangerous" At New Lyceum

"Slightlyy Dangerous" is coming to the New Lyceum Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday which brings Lana Turner and Robert Young together "for laughing purposes only," although they also figure in a romatic love story. It provides the maddest, merriest farce either has ever been seen in.

Miss Turner plays a soda clerk in a store of which Young is manager. He reprimands her for mixing sodas blindfolded so she leaves town and goes to New York—poses as an amnesia victim, and convinces a millionaire there that she is his long lost daughter. Walter Brennan plays the millionaire. Young is blamed for her "suicide" and must produce her to save his job. Therefore he sets out to expose her amnesia ruse, and amid turbulent and laughable episodes they discover that they're in love.

As for Lana's situation with long-lost daddy Brennan a compromise works out a happy solution for all.

Miss Turner, as a comedienne, shows a rare gift, and is very beautiful in a gorgeous Irene-designed wardrobe. Young is perfect as the harassed store manager. Brennan plays a "doting sugar daddy" effectively and comically. Eugene Pallette, Howard Freeman, Dame May Whitty, Millard Mitchell, Ward Bond, Pamela Blake Ray Collins, Florence Bates and Alan Mowbray efficiently aid and abet the laugh-making.

Wesley Ruggles directed with his usual deft skill at comedy, and Harold Rossin photographed Miss Turner beautifully. Bronislau Kaper contributed a lilting musical score.

Produced for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Pandro S. Berman from a screen play is an original by Charles Lederer and George Oppenheimer.

"The Hard Way" Here Next Week

Dennis Morgan, a rather peaceable guy at heart, totalled up and discovered that he has had fights with five different women in his last four pictures. Brendall Marshall, Ann Sheridan, Bette Davis, and Olivia de Havilland were among his verbal antagonists, and pretty good ones too, until he ran up against Ida Lupino in his current Warner Bros. assignment "The Hard Way," which comes to the New Lyceum Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

In this one, Morgan and Miss Lupino argue violently from the time they meet until the final scene. They're alwaays at verbs' points over Joan Leslie. Morgan wants to marry the youngster and Miss Lupino wants her to keep on with her career. It's all in the script that way.

"Some Players," said Morgan, sadly, "are the kind girls dream about. But I'm turning out to be just an old maid's nightmare!"
