THOSE WHO REMAIN

When death visits a home, the first concern is to perform the last service to the loved one in a becoming manner. What ever is done must express all the reverance and affection that is felt at such a time. But in addition to this a further responsibility rests upon the funeral director. It is his privilege and duty to lessen as far as lies within his power, the burdens laid upon those who remain. By countless little acts of thoughtfulness he can make the way easier for them.

We consider this part of our work as important as any other. Our highest aim is to have our patrons look upon us as trusted friends, ready and anxious to render sympathetic assistance to those who remain behind.

Circassians

The name Circassians is applied to people inhabiting the northwestern part of the Caucasus. Their name for themselves is Adighe; the Turks and Russians call them Tcherkasses or brigands. Both Circassian men and women are noted for physical beauty and many Circassian girls enter Turkish harems. After the Russian conquest of their territory in 1864, several hundred thousand of them emigrated. Among the upper classes Mohammedanism is the chief religion.
