Flower Seasons

In China the four seasons of the year are represented by flowers. The tree peony represents spring; the lotus, summer; the chrysanthemum, autumn, and the plum, winter.

The Morning After Taking Carter's Little Liver Pills

ON THE SCREEN AT THE NEW LYCEUM

Hailed as the most distinguished motion picture in which Greta Garbo has yet appeared, the New Lyceum Theatre announces with pride its forthcoming showing of "Conquest," stirring romance of the fabulous Napoleon Bonaparte and the woman he loved, in which the glamorous Swedish star makes her first co-starring appearance with Charles Boyer, hero of "The Garden of Allah" and "History Is Made at Night."

In the new story, filled with the memories of an epochal period in world history, Garbo plays the role of the beautiful Countess Walewska who forsakes her home and her husband in an heroic attempt to win over Napoleon and thus save the life of her country. Boyer in an astoundingly realistic makeup is seen as Napoleon whose power mad determination to rule the world leads him to doom.

The picture is the latest directorial achievement of Clarence Brown who was behind the cameras in the filming of such earlier Garbo successes as "Anna Karenina," "Flesh and the Devil," "Romance" and "Anna Christie." Adrian designed a series of breathtaking costumes for the star and Herbert Stothart composed the lovely musical score which accompanies the picture.

As is customary in all Garbo pictures, no effort was spared in assembling a supporting cast of distinction. Reginald Owen is cast as the unscrupulous Talleyrand; Alan Marshal is Captain D'Ornano; Henry Stephenson is seen as Garbo's husband; Leif Erickson as her brother; Dame May Whitty as Prince Poniatowski. There are twenty-four other speaking roles in the imposing cast.

"Conquest" will show at the New Lyceum Theatre Monday and Tuesday December 6 and 7.

With the triumphant Gladys George of "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" fame in the title role and with John Beal, Warren William, Reginald Owen and William Henry heading an outstanding supporting cast, M-G-M's newest stellar offering, "Madame X," comes to the New Lyceum on Wednesday and Thursday, December 8 and 9.

The famous stage vehicle, played by almost every front-rank actress of the American theatre, now comes to the screen in a fresh and modernized treatment by John Meehan with adapted such hits as "A Free Soul" and "The Divorce." It was directed by Sam Wood, responsible for such successes as Joan Crawford' s"Within the Law" and the recent Marx Brothers' "A Day at the Races."

Shifting from the famous French Riviera to Paris, New York, New Orleans and Buenos Aires, the story of "Madame X" revolves about the turbulent career of Jacqueline Fleuriot, the young and beautiful French girl who, forced to flee her husband and son because of being falsely accused of murder, gradually descends the scale of life until she becomes a poverty-stricken, drunken old harridan of the waterfront cafes. Her ultimate regeneration in one of the most celebrated trial scenes ever written for a play or picture is the highlight of a story which has become one of the most heart-stabbing dramas of the ages.

Gladys George and Phillip Reed in "Madame X"

One of the most fascinating aspects of the picture is the process by which Miss George shows the physical changes of her gradual degradation. The plot, shifting from 1920 to the present day, presents the star first as a lovely young girl, then as a woman torn by her flagrant life, and finally as the gray-haired old harridan of the sensational courtroom episodes.

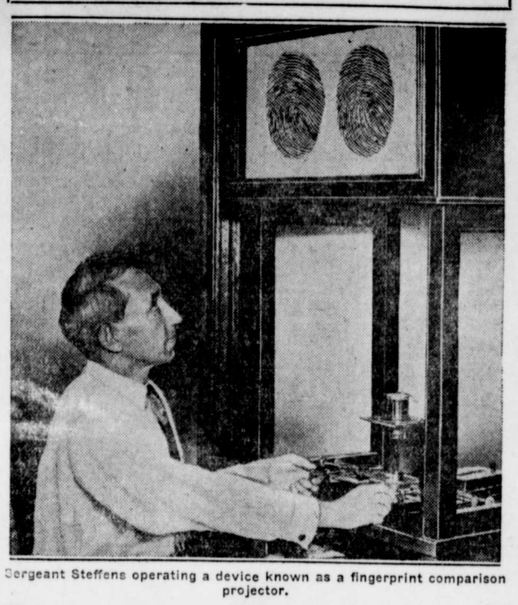
New Jersey Police Sergeant Is Real-Life Scientific Detective



Sergeant Steffens operating a device known as a fingerprint comparison projector.

DETECTIVE story writers have made familiar to millions of readers the detective of fiction who relies on chemistry, the X-ray, the microscope and the other tools which modern science has made available for use in the war against crime. Sergeant Gustave R. Steffens, of the Elizabeth, New Jersey, police force, president of the Crime Detection Laboratory of New Jersey, is a real-life detective who uses these tools with a degree of success that would arouse the grudging admiration of even the most infallible fictional Hawkshaw.

Notable as Sergeant Steffens' achievements in the field of scientific crime detection have been, his early career gave no hint of what the future held in store for him. Born in Germany, he came to this country as a boy of 16 and got a job in a grocery store in Brooklyn. A few years later he returned to Germany, served two years in the army, and then came back to the United States to land another grocery store job. During his off hours he studied music and harmony, becoming unusually proficient on the cornet.

In 1918, tiring of life as a grocery clerk, he joined the Elizabeth police force. He soon realized, however, that if he was to make a real success in this entirely new field he needed specialized knowledge of a number of subjects that relate to the detection of crime, and to securing the conviction of the criminal. This he proceeded to acquire by studying law, including a course in commercial law for which he enrolled with the International Correspondence Schools. When he had completed the commercial law course he promptly enrolled with the same Schools for a course in chemistry. His practical experience as a policeman on a beat, and the knowledge acquired through these studies, provided the foundation for his unusually successful career as a guardian of society against crime and the criminal.

The Crime Detection Laboratory of New Jersey, of which Sergeant Steffens is president, was established in 1933 as a non-profit-making organization. It has cooperated with local, state and Federal police on more than 270 cases since it was organized. Its officers and staff members include a judge, doctors, and professional men in other fields. The work is arranged with competent men in charge of branches covering chemistry, toxicology, microscopy, ballistics, ultra-violet and X-rays, photography, automobile identification, locks and safes, finger prints, minerology and geology, criminal law and procedure.
