EDUCATION.

Wants employment as a private tutor, to one or more families, or to teach a select school, a gentleman whose mode of instruction is entirely new, and only practised by himself, by which he will engage to quicken and mature the judgment of his pupils in one third the time required by the common mode. Besides confirming them in a knowledge of the sciences he professes to teach, his method has many other advantages, among which is, that the boys he prepares for a classical education will, with a good teacher, acquire a knowledge of the Latin and Greek languages, in one half the time required by boys taught in the common way, and with more ease to themselves and their tutor.

He will likewise engage to make his pupils write an elegant and free hand.

Reference may be made to Gen. Stricker, Alexander Mitchell, Smith's wharf, No. 9, David Fulton, John M'Kean, Market street, or the Editors.
