SENATOR SUMNER AND THE BATTLE-FLAGS.—To show that Senator Sumner's course in respect to the proposition to erase the names of American battle-fields from regimental flags is consistent with his own early record, it is only necessary to mention that after the battle of Williamsburg, May, 6, 1862, Gen. McClellan inquired of the War Department if he was to follow the examples of other generals and direct the names of battles to be placed on the colors of their regiments. Mr. Sumner, May 8, 1862, introduced in the Senate the following resolution:

"Resolved, That in the efforts now making for the restoration of the Union and the establishment of peace throughout the country, it is inexpedient that the names of victories obtained over our fellow-citizens should be placed on the regimental colors of the United States."

The resolution attracted much attention, and Gen. Scott, in his autobiograpy, makes mention of Rufus King's famous resolution, introduced into the United States Senate in 1865, to the effect that as soon as the remnant of the national debt should be discharged the net proceeds of the public lands should constitute a fund for emancipation, and after warmly praising its spirit, he goes on to say:

"I place in juxtaposition with the foregoing a kindred sentiment that gleamed in the same body on a more recent occasion. It had been proposed, without due reflection, by one of our gallant commanders engaged in the suppression of the existing rebellion, to place on the banners of the victorious troops the names of their battles. This proposition was rebuked by the subjoined resolution, submitted by the Hon. Mr. Sumner."

General Scott here quotes the resolution, and adds: "This was noble, and from the right quarter." Yes, it was right then, and it is right now, and only meanness and demagoguery will attempt to controvert it.

GEORGIA RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—A collision which occurred on the Macon and Western Georgia railroad, on Thursday of last week, thirty-one miles from Atlanta, furnishes another commentary upon the reckless disregard so often manifested by persons in responsible positions for the safety or welfare of others, and, singularly enough, of their own as well. It seems that two passenger trains were to meet at Bear Creek station, thirty-four miles from Atlanta. The down train was behind time, and was running at the rate of eighteen miles an hour, which is considered excellent time on most Southern roads. The up train was on time, but when it was approaching Bear Creek station, it is alleged, none of the officials on the train were aware of it; the engineer, fireman and woodpasser all being asleep, and the conductor sitting in a front car chatting with another train employee. The switch just outside of the station being of a kind that makes no noise when cars pass over it, the train sped on past the station. There was no one on the lookout. When about three miles beyond the station, the sleeping engineer and the thoughtless conductor were aroused by the whistle of the other train as it turned a curve two hundred yards distant, and then came the crash. Both engines were wrecked, and the second class and baggage cars were smashed. Eight colored men, women and children on the up train were killed, and several badly wounded; four persons on the down train, including the engineer, a brakeman and an express messenger, and a passenger, were badly but not seriously hurt.

THE NEW ARMY UNIFORM.—The new army uniform, worn for the first time by the officers on New Year's day, at the President's reception, attracted much attention. The Washington Star says:

It is very showy, and the plumes of the various branches of the service are designated by different colors. The coat is of dark blue cloth, double-breasted, with a shirt extending from one half to three-fourths of the distance between the hip and the knee. Staff officers wear pants of dark blue cloth, without stripe; other officers wear light blue pants, with stripe of similar color to that of the facings of their respective arms, except for infantry officers, where the stripe is of dark blue.

Gen. Sherman wore two rows of buttons on the breast of his coat, placed in fours. He wore epaulettes, and his plume consisted of three white ostrich feathers. Other generals and staff officers wore three black ostrich feathers, and regimental officers wore plumes of horse hair or cock's feathers of a color similar to the trimmings of their coats. Gen. Sherman and the general and staff officers wore chapeaus; light artillery and cavalry officers wore black felt helmets with gold cords and tassels and gilt trimmings; other officers dark blue cloth hats.

A FUNNY MISTAKE.—That nervous excitement which all men experience incident to a marriage ceremony, when they are parties to it, was amusingly illustrated the other day in Louisville, Kentucky. Gold is a scarce article in the West, and when it is voluntarily paid out it means more than mere dollars and cents. It means that their has been a special favor, worth more than greenbacks, which is delicately expressed by handing over the precious metal. A young man from Henderson, Ky., visited Louisville to transplant one of its daughters to the Green river soil of the State. The ceremony being performed, the young man handed the minister what he supposed was a five dollar gold piece, and did not understand the quizzical look of the divine until several days afterwards he discovered in his pocket the gold piece, and missed a luck piece he had carried in the shape of a nickel.

"THE AUGUSTAN AGE OF MURDER," is what the New York Herald calls it, and proceeds to foot up the murders in that city during the last three years. Forty murders in 1870, forty-five murders in 1871, fifty-six murders in 1872. Five more murders in 1871 than in 1870, eleven more murders in 1872 than in 1871—an increase of sixteen murders in two years. The Herald seems to seriously incline to the opinion that it may be necessary "to tear a leaf out of California's history, imitating in the civilized East the vigilance committee of the babaric West."

A NARROW ESCAPE.—On last Tuesday week, Johnnie, son of Levin M. Dashiell, at Toney Tank Mills, near Salisbury, Md., whilst out sporting, suddenly struck the hammer of his gun, which caused it to go off, and discharging the whole load in his watch which he carried in the lower left pocket of his vest. He sustained no bodily injury whatever, but his watch was riddled.

DEATH OF A YOUNG LADY IN CHURCH—A Painful Scene.—On Christmas morning one of the saddest and most appalling incidents occurred at Christ Church, in Savannah, Ga. The Savannah News says:

The morning services had been concluded, and the candidates for confirmation, ten in number, were invited to the altar. Of these was Miss Lizzie Spencer, a most estimable young lady, about sixteen years of age, daughter of Capt. W. H. Spencer, who was occupying a seat in the middle of the gallery to the right on entering the Church. She approached the altar with the others, and was confirmed according to the rites of the Church by Right Rev. Bishop Beckwith. After the confirmation ceremonies Miss Spencer returned to her seat in the gallery, and had scarcely taken it when her head fell forward on the railing. Those in the vicinity attached no significance to this, imagining that it was merely an act of devotion, when suddenly the young lady sank from her seat, and would have fallen upon the floor but for the promptness of Dr W. H. Elliott, who caught her. Gentlemen immediately approached, and assisted in carrying her from the church.

The general inference was that the lady, overcome by her feelings, had fainted—Alas! such was not the case. The gentlemen who were tenderly carrying the almost lifeless form noticed on going down the stairs that the gasps which now and then shook the frame grew fainter and fainter on reaching the vestibule. A conveyance was at once procured, and the lifeless form of the young lady was taken to her father's residence, on Liberty st. The announcement of this sad and melancholy ending of a life just dedicated to the service of the Lord sent a thrill of grief through the congregation. Bishop Beckwith alluded to the visitation of Providence in the most feeling manner, and expressed the wish that all present might be as fully prepared to appear before their Maker when summoned, as he believed the young lady was who but a few minutes before had stood before the altar in the freshness and glory of youth. His remarks touching the uncertainty of life, as illustrated by this sad incident, were very impressive and were deeply felt by the congregation present.

Disasters and Deaths of the Year 1872.

The year just closed, particularly the latter part of it, has been memorable for its disasters. The Boston fire came not very far from the anniversary of the Chicago fire. The horrible sacrifice at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, followed, then the scarcely less terrific burning of a house on Centre street, New York, in which eight persons were burned alive, then the most mournful Christmas tragedy at Williamsport, Pennsylvania, by which children and womon were crushed to death while celebrating with innocent festivities the happy festival; then the crushing of the cars and burning of the passengers on the Buffalo and Pitsburg railroad. There have been fearful inundations in Italy and England, and tremendous storms have swept all along the coasts of northeastern Europe, as well as upon our coast, in which many a good ship has gone to the sea. In our own lake navigation there have been not less than nine hundred disasters, of which the insurance companies had practical knowledge, attended by one hundred and eighty-nine lost lives, actually reported.

The year has also been remarkable for the death of distinguished men in literature, art, science and religion. Among our own profession are the names of James Gorden Bennett of the New York Herald, and Horace Greeley, of the New York Tribune. The army has lost Maj Gen. Meade, Maj. Gen. Halleck and General Anderson. France laments Field Marshal Torey, who defeated the Austrians on the historiefield of Montebello, and England Field Marshal Sir George Pollock, Constable of the Tower, a veteran of the Indian wars, and Gen. Pennefather another soldier of renown. The ranks of statesmanship have been thinned by the deaths of Wm. H. Seward, ex-Postmaster General Randall, Senators Grimes of Iowa, Davis of Kentucky, and Walker of Wisconsin; President Juarez, of Mexico, Earl Mayo, Governor General of India; Joseph Mazzini, the Italian revolutionist; the Duke of Persigny; Sir Henry Bulwer, Lord Lonsdale, and the Duke of Bedford. Among the eminent divines who have died during the year are Archbishop Spalding, of Baltimore; Bishop McGill, of Richmond, and Rev. Dr Seabury, of New York, at one time the leading mind of the Episcopal Church. Thus the most distinguished as well as the unknown of the earth pass away, while others fill their places only in their turn to be written on the necrology roll of some future year.

DISTRESSING SUICIDE IN HAGERSTOWN, MD.—The Hagerstown (Md.) Herald and Torch announces the suicide of an aged and respectable citizen of that place, Judge Charles G. Lane, who terminated his own existence by hanging himself in the garret of his dwelling. The Herald and Torch says:

"Although it was known to Judge Lane's family and immediate friends that he had been suffering for some weeks previously from a slight indisposition, accompanied with severe mental depression, it was not supposed for a moment that the disturbance of his mind was so great as to induce him to seek relief from his troubles in death. Judge Lane had nearly attained the age of three score and ten, and during this long life sustained an excellent private and estimable public reputation. He held the responsible position of judge of the Orphans' Court for a number of years, and was a director of the First National bank for a still longer period, starting with that institution when it was established as a savings bank, and remaining in its board of direction through all its changes, until he became its president, which office he held at his death."

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT FROM A SNOW SLIDE. Washington Andrews, a handsome youth, 16 years of age, was struck in New York on Friday by an ice and snow slide from the top of a house on Broad street, and it is probable will never recover. A block of ice, which must have weighed fifty pounds, struck him on one side of the head and knocked him ten feet into the roadway. The blow made broad, fearful gashes on the forehead, and the blood rained down from them and filled his eyes. His face was black and his lips had the hue of death. His eyes, which were blinded with blood, seemed to have been wrenched out of their sockets; they seemed to start out of his head. There was but a spark of life left. His eyes were completely paralyzed, the sense of sight was completely destroyed. He remained unconscious under his mother's affectionate kisses, and will probably not regain consciousness.

MISPLACED CONFIDENCE.—The case of Miss Shortwell, who was introduced to a "gentleman" by the "gentlemanly clerk" of a New York hotel, and entrusted her new acquaintance with the care of her trunk, which contained bonds to the value of $25,000, and which she found on arrival at Chicago were missing, added to the fact that the bonds did not belong to her, but were placed in her care to be delivered to another, adds to the catalogue of cases of "misplaced confidence" which are so often brought to the notice of the public through the press of the country. On this subject the Philadelphia Ledger truthfully remarks:

"To all country people visiting large cities—to all travelers thrown into promiscuous company in hotels or on railway trains—there is no safer rule than to be wary of the "plausible strangers" who make approaches in money matters. Listen to them, but trust them not—they're fooling you. If a stranger asks you to let him have ten dollars for five minutes, and offers you a thousand dollar draft to hold as security, don't do it; you can buy a barrel full of such drafts at five cents a pound. If the "good fellow" you have just got acquainted with at the hotel or in the cars has a pressing bill to pay, but unfortunately, has nothing less than a hundred dollar note, and the man with the bill has no change—don't take any part in that operation either, even if the "good fellow" hands you over a pocket-book full of hundred dollar notes as security. In all such cases remember that honest people never ask strangers or new acquaintances to lend money, to exchange watches, to help them to pay bills, or to do anything of that sort. Ninety-nine times in a hundred the man who does it is a knave, and as such beware of him. For the fate of the lady who carried $25,000 in bonds in her trunk, and then handed the trunk over to the care of a gentleman she had just been introduced to, most people will feel sorry, but they will, nevertheless, be of the opinion that she was so dreadfully verdant that she does not even read the newspapers."

SALMON IN THE DELAWARE.—A correspondent of the Germantown Telegraph gives the following account of stocking the Belaware with salmon: "Of the ova of salmon of the Rhine, Dr. J. H. Slack will probably hatch from fifty to a hundred thousand. His establishment, as most of our readers are aware, is at Troutdale, Warren county, New Jersey, and on the banks of the Musconetcong, about eight or ten miles above its confluence with the Delaware. Of the eggs of the Penobscott, (Maine) salmon I am promised thirty or forty thousand which I propose hatching somewhere in the neighborhood of Easton. Including the first instalment, which I placed in the Bushkill last spring, we will, therefore, without unforseen accidents, have over a hundred thousand young salmon in the Delaware or its tributaries next June. The fact of there being two varieties will of course increase the likelihood of success; and if gillnets, which in the fishing season are so numerous between Trenton and Bombay Hook, allow them to pass, we may look for the return of mature salmon within three or four years."

PROPOSED NEW STYLE OF SCHOOL BOOKS.—A paper out west wants modern improvements worked into school reading books, and offers the following as samples that would be up to the spirit of the age:

"Here is a man He is a fireman; he belongs to No 10. If you are a good boy you will some day be an angel, like that fireman. They sometimes get their heads broken.

"Do you see that small boy? He is a good boy, and supports his mother by selling newspapers His father don't have to work any more, now

"Here is the picture of a young widow. See how sad she looks Her husband could not pay her dry-goods bill, and so—he died. Do you think she will get another husband? She will try hard.

"Here is the face of a reporter. See how joyful he looks. He has just heard that a man has cut his own throat, and he is going for the item. Should you like to be a reporter, and get licked on dark nights, and see dead persons, and climb up four pairs of stairs.
