AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

FARM IMPLEMENTS.

It is a pleasure to be able to note the gradual improvement which has taken place, and is still going on, in the constitution of farm implements. Steel plows are taking the place of cast iron ones just as the latter displaced the plated wooden mouldboards, and the iron harrow teeth are being rapidly displaced by much lighter ones of steel. The modern harrow is quite as heavy as the one formerly used, but of a different shape, and covering nearly double the soil, and really doing double the work with the same team. Instead of eighteen or twenty teeth in a frame of stuff four inches square, we now have forty steel teeth in a frame of two and one-half inch stuff.

Many are inclined to underrate the importance of the increase of a few pounds in the draft of an implement, forgetting that this increase is carried day after day and round after round, until it becomes indefinitely multiplied.

I think it probable that this decrease in weight and draft has been carried too far in some classes of implements. Some of our mowing machines are now made so light that they are liable to breakage, and wear out too soon. This may no doubt be remedied by the substitution of steel and wrought iron for parts now made of cast iron.

In alluding to the use of deep narrow cans for settling milk to raise cream, a distinguished dairyman living in Vermont writes:

"The use of common pans renders the absolute control of temperature impossible. And even partial success in this direction can only be secured by a great waste of ice or water, while the cost of fixtures is much greater. The mode to which experience and reason both point as that by which we can best accomplish the desired result, is to set the milk in large pails, and these in vats of cold spring or ice water, as now practiced in some sections of the country, and which I have used the past season in my own dairy with very satisfactory results. By this practice we avoid the objections to the use of pans, and secure their opposites, viz., more perfect control of the temperature, with less consumption of ice or water, less dampness and less exposure to the air. It requires less room, the fixture to be used in the regulation of the temperature cost less, and it is attended with a great saving of labor, while it avoids the fearful waste both in quantity and quality, which results from the common practice in the hot season."

Do not our agricultural societies and farmers' clubs make a mistake in offering their premiums for the largest crops, without regard to cost? Any one who has capital enough may raise one hundred bushels of corn per acre, but his neighbor, who raises but sixty, may be doing a much better thing.

Wouldn't it not be better to pay more regard to the cost of the crop. Let the premium be for the crop which shall cost the least money per bushel, and we think many of our large crops will fall far short of it. We believe that one hundred and thirty bushels of shelled corn can be and has been raised per acre, but this fact, of itself, does not prove it to have been a profitable crop.

We are repeatedly asked whether potatoes are a profitable crop. The wholesale price is so variable that it is hard to arrive at a definite conclusion. As soon as the prices reach a fair price, so many go into raising the crop that the prices fall at once from an over supply. Taking a succession of the years, we have no doubt that the crop is quite as profitable as any other that is usually raised; but the heavy handling and freight cut down the profits on crops at a distance from market. There is scarcely a crop raised by the farmer which will pay so well for a concentration of labor and manure as this crop. It is often the case that a double supply of labor and manure will produce more than double the crop from one acre which would otherwise have been obtained from twice the area.

Our exchanges are still discussing the important question of the profits of farming, and seem just as far from a solution of the mystery as when the question was first started. That it has been, and now is profitable to some, cannot be denied, and that the success of these is due to the fact that their expenditures are less than their receipts, is equally true. Farm expenditures are now nearly as large as when grain brought double the present price. Reduce the expense to its lowest possible limit, raise the largest possible crops, and then the farmer will have done his best.

It would seem that the Berkshire pigs are to be again in fashion. A few years ago the grade Berkshires were the most common pig in Chester county, and only gave place to the renowned Chester Whites. The best and most easily kept pigs that we ever fed were half-blood Berkshires. For pork, we would give the half-bloods the preference, as making more pork from a given amount of food than either the full Berkshires or Chester Whites. We doubt whether the speculative prices of the Berkshires will ever reach that of the Chester Whites during the most severe period of the fever.

Never plow or harrow soil when it is too wet. This advice is particularly applicable to stiff clay soils, or to light soils over a heavy clay subsoils. Any stirring of the soil when too wet has a tendency to the same effect as is produced in brick making, and makes the soil dry off in hard clods, on which the harrow will produce but little effect. It will pay better to wait for the ground to dry off.

One of our readers complains that many of our agricultural papers are running too much into theory with too little practice. There is some truth in this, but he should remember that the farmer of today can much better appreciate a correct theory when supported by practice than he could forty years ago.

Theory unsupported by practice is of very little value, but the two mixed may be of use even in an agricultural paper.

We think our citizen friends made a great mistake when they offer a premium for the production of large potatoes by paying a higher price for them. The medium sized potatoes will weigh more from a given measure, and cost less for their production. Other things being equal, it will generally be found that medium-sized potatoes are of a better quality than the large ones selected from them.

The "Practical Farmer" states that there is at that office a sample from a Virginia corn crop, which yielded one hundred and seventy bushels of shelled corn per acre. It is stated that "while no stalk had less than three sound ears, they found some with four and five years."

It is the opinion of some who have tried it, that although steamed provender increases the amount of milk, yet at the same time it injures its quality. At a late meeting of the Experimental Farm Club, Charles Cook combatted this theory, and disproved it by his experience. We would like to see this question fairly tested and settled, for it is a very important one.

The largest farm in England consists of three thousand acers, and belongs to a man by the name of Samuel Jones.—In its cultivation he follows the "four-course" system, the whole extent of the farm being divided into four great crops, 750 acres to wheat, 750 to barley and oats, 750 to seeds, beans, peas, and ect., and 750 to roots. His live stock is valued as follows: Sheep, $35,000; horses, $15,000; bullocks, $12,000; pigs, $25,000. The oilcake and corn produced annually amounted to $20,000, and artificial fertilizers about $8000. The entire cost of manure in various forms, used annually, is about $15,000. Sheep are claimed as the most profitable stock he keeps, and from them are realized about $20,000.

Medical Statistics.—An article appeared in the May number of the Indiana Journal of Medicine, prepared by Dr. Toner, of Washington, which furnishes a number of interesting medical statistical facts. The article says:

There were in the United States in the winter of 1870-71, of all schools, 101 medical teaching bodies, classified as follows: Regular medicine 77, of which 16 taught pharmacy, 8 homeopathic, 8 dental, 6 eclectic and 2 botanic. These annually add to the ranks of the medical profession 1,698 doctors of medicine. The whole profession in the United States numbers 62,383. The average age at which medical men begin the active duties of their profession is about 24½ years. The average time spent by medical students in acquiring a knowledge of their profession is nearly six and a-half years. A table of unpublished biographical matter of the two thousand deceased American physicians shows their average of life to be 58 39-100 years. It is also ascertained that there are in the United States 20,647 more physicians than lawyers, and 18,509 less clergyman than physicians, so that, in point of numbers at least, they lead the other learned professions.

Lord Chief Justice Cockburn has just made a joke. A Mrs. Jury being examined as a witness in the Tichborne case, stated that she had had eleven children, whereupon his honor observed he had always understood it took twelve to make a jury. England is still echoing the laugh which convulsed the court.

August Flower.— This great Dyspepsia Panacea has the largest sale of any other preparation in the world. THE EUREKA

FANNING MILL.

THE GREATEST INVENTION OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY!

Farmers Look to Your Interest.

THE attention of Farmers and Mechanics is particularly directed to the combined economy, utility and practicability of the Eureka Mill, and to the many other advantages it possesses over every other Fanning Mill which has been introduced to the public.

It is the fruit of long and patient investigation by the inventor, who has made it his constant study for over twenty years. He has secured several patents for Mills, and has always been rewarded with the best of success. But not feeling satisfied with his former attainments, he determined to reach the climax, and he now believes that his new invention will warrant him in exclaiming in the joy of his heart, like the philosopher, Phythagoras—EUREKA!—signifying in the Grecian language, "I have found it." This has given the name to this new Mill.

In this Mill are all the former improvements to which have been added several more, adding still greater advantages than were at first anticipated, or even thought possible by the inventor himself. It embraces the three great essentials necessary in every invention:

It combines ECONOMY, UTILITY and PRACTICABILITY!

THE "EUREKA" MILL

Is small and lighter, and is capable of doing more and better work in a given time than any other Mill ever invented.

IT IS THE ONLY MILL

that will successfully remove from wheat all such pests as Cockle, Garlic, Oats, Rye, &c.

Should an extra quality of grain for seed or gristing purposes be required, it can be so arranged as to catch in one box perfect grain, and in the other, grain fit for market or mill. Here is made a great saving usually lost sight of: for nearly one quarter of the grain cleaned in the common Mill is lost when sown, on account of shrunken kernels and inferior grain. The Eureka Mill saves all this, and gives seed every kernel of which will grow when put into the ground, and this saving will, in a short time, pay for the Mill.

HINES & BURCHINAL,

Chestertown, Maryland,

Owners of the Mill, are having them manufactured at the Sash Factory and Planing Mill of Noland & Co., Port Deposit, Md., which is a guarantee that they will be put up in the best manner. je17-tf.
