SATURDAY. AUGUST 23, 1924.

JOHN W. DAVIS SPEAKS.

Perhaps more impressive than any one thing in Mr. Davis' speech of acceptance is the personal quality of the man revealed by it.

He moves among great questions of our public life with easy mastery. He does not improvise convictions. He steps forward as one who has reflected long and earnestly, and who gives to the people the fruits of his honest thought.

In the Democoratic nominee's speech there is a vigor without violence.

Along with firm and sure grasp of his themes there is evidenced a resolution tough as steel.

Mr. Davis accepts the nomination which means leadership of the party, without any sign of nervous trepidation, without false modesty, following in this respect the advice of Bacon to men in great place, to assume their rights quietly rather than to "voice them with claims and challenges."

No one can read the address of Mr. Davis without being assured that he has large capacity for large affairs.

He makes it plain that he intends to direct his own campaign. If he is elected President he will be every inch a President. It is a full-sized man which the speech of acceptance discloses to the fellow countrymen of Mr. Davis.

The ample equipment of Mr. Davis for the Presidency cannot be challenged. It is not, in fact, challenged by many who still say they cannot bring themselves to vote for him. But do they stop to think what such a refusal to support as well as admire exceptional ability in a public man really means?

It means that they would shut the door to the highest talent. It means that they would discourage parties from putting their best men forward, because they would find themselves penalized when they did it.

Hidebound partisans are, of course, beyond the reach of any persuasion or appeal—but every citizen of open mind and free to follow his own better judgment in political action certainly has a peculiar and pressing obligation laid upon him by the nomination for the Presidency of such a full-panoplied man as John W. Davis.

To refuse to vote for him because of personal whim or inconclusive reason is in reality to refuse to join those who in the highest sense and from the highest motives resolve that they must so act to prevent harm to the Republic.

WILDCAT INVESTMENTS

From time to time we have warned our readers against the pleasant mannered strangers who visit them to sell them securities.

We believe we have accomplished some good and saved some of our people from severe losses. But still a large amount of money is being squandered by the purchase of oil and mining stock and other securities that never were worth the poper they were written on.

So we sound another warning. If you had an ill child you would not administer a drug suggested by a perfect stranger. You would first consult someone with special knowledge of drugs and their effects, in whom you had confidence.

And so it should be in the investment of your money. You should not take the advice of a stranger; always remember that he is working for a commission on his sales and that he has no interest whatever in you except to get your money.

So before you buy anything in the nature of a security from a stranger, always go to your banker, for he has special knowledge of securities, just as a druggist has of drugs, and he will advise you safely.

To such an extent have the people been fleeced by the wildcat stock promoters, some of them crooks, that Uncle Sam has sent out a warning through the Treasury Department. The advice is valuable and to the point, and our readers would do well to preserve it and show it to the next stock salesman who calls. Here it is:

By the Treasury Department, United States Government Savings System.

1. Mining stock. The best looking mine in the world may prove a "white elephant." Mining is a very expensive undertaking and the risks are usually great. There is a saying that a mine "is a hole where fools dump their money." There are many good mining investments, of course, but this branch of the investment market is generally not for those who work for and depend upon a salary.

2. Oil Stock. Drilling for oil is costly. The hazards are great. Oil investments are speculative and in a class with mining investments.

3. In the wake of every important discovery or invention there comes a host of schemes—"airplanes," "radio," "wireless." The promoters of these may have only the best of intentions, but frequently their enthusiasm is about all they have to sell. Look before you leap.

4. Investments in "real estate" situated in some distant place are sometimes as dangerous as mining stock. People have been known to buy swamps advertised as "seashore frontage." Know what you are buying before you invest.

5. Land development schemes frequently do not pan out. At best it is a long time before any money comes in from sales. Investment in "new companies" that are going to "sell by mail" should be generally avoided.

6. Patent rights and process distribution. It is rarely the patentee who makes the money.

7. "New Manufacturing Methods" should always be closely checked and investigated.

8. An investment requiring a quick decision is often a fake. If there isn't sufficient time to "sleep over it," something is probably wrong.

9. "Special inducements" in cash discounts or stock bonuses urging you to be one of the first to invest are suspicious symptoms.

10. "Tips" alleged to land you "on the ground floor" are rarely to be taken. Those who are "on the ground floor" will monopolize the opportunity.

11. "Playing the stock market on margin" and all other forms of speculation are decidedly not for the small investor. Beware of the "bucket-shop." If you buy stocks outright for investment do so through a member of a legitimate exchange.

12. Stock in "mail order companies" being organized with promises based on what others have done rarely turn out well.

THE THORN IN THE FLESH.

Do you remember when you were a kid and were coming home with the cows, or from some other errand and darkness overtook you, how you whistled?

The reason you whistled was because you were frightened, and you were trying to keep your courage up.

The Republicans have been doing a lot of whistling since the nomination of La Follette; not as we whistled as boys—but their efforts to minimize and belittle the strength of La Follette, means the same thing—they are frightened and they have cause to be scared.

Senator La Follette is acknowledged to be one of the brainiest men in the Republican Party. He is a Progressive of the Roosevelt, Johnson, Borah type, and has given his best years in an effort to steer the Republican ship clear of the rocks and shoals of Republican conservatisms.

But the stand-patters would not listen.

They had a severe lesson in the campaign when the Bull Moose party put a ticket in the field against Taft, the regular nominee—when Taft received but two votes west of the Missippi River.

La Follette will not get the vote Roosevelt received, for Roosevelt was a popular idol—but he will get a large proportion of it; for the people of the Northwest and the Pacific Coast stand for the same things that Roosevelt and La Follette advocated with the party.

La Follette will not only get a large part of the Progressive wing of his party, but will get a great portion of the freak vote—those who are dissatisfied with both parties.

He will not carry an electoral vote east of the Mississippi, but he will get enough Republican votes from several of them to make them safely Democratic.

But where he will do the most deadly work against the regular Republican ticket is in the wild and wooly sections of the Northwest. Those people are better posted on economic questions than the people in the East, particularly the farmers; they know what it is to go up against a protective tariff; they are familiar with transportation handicaps, they are always decidedly up against it, and for years the farmers in the States on the Canadian border have been victims of the tariff iniquity which compels them to pay more for agricultural implements made in Ohio than their Canadian neighbors have to pay.

Many Republicans have been voting with the Democrats ever since the Cleveland Tariff Reform campaign, and in this campaign they will go to La Follette as they went to Roosevelt when he bolted the Party.

The only effect the candidacy of Senator Wheeler will have will be to make the Montana vote more certain for La Follette. To sum up the situation as it appears at this time; the Republicans will certainly lose Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and in several other Western States La Follette will receive enough votes to permit the Democrats to win. With Davis on the ticket we have at least an equal chance to carry the East. It is no wonder the Republicans are whistling. La Follette is a thorn in their flesh, and they are frightened. The only fault we find with La Follette is that he did not come openly and directly to the Democratic Party. It is, and has always been the party of the people. We have the G. O. P. whistling; now let's keeps them whistling.

CHARLES MARX FILES SUIT AGAINST ORPHANS' COURT N4 N4 N4 JUDGES.

executor of the estate of his father, John Marx. The plaintiff seeks to recover $10,000.00 each from James B. Bentz, John T. Cockey and Chas. M. Snyder, Judges of the Orphans' Court of Baltimore County; $15,000.00 from Lawrence E. Ensor, a member of the Towson bar, and $35,000.00 each from Frederick Lassahn and Elizabeth Reinecke.

Mrs. Reinecke, who is the sister of the plaintiff, filed a suit against him alleging concealment of assets of the estate of her father, amounting to $4,500. The case was removed to the Circuit Court at Annapolis, and a verdict was rendered in favor of Mrs. Reinecke, which was affirmed by the Court of Appeals. Marx took an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. He was removed by the Orphans' Court as Executor, and Lawrence E. Ensor was appointed in his place. Marx was ordered to turn over the assets of the estate to Mr. Ensor.

The records in the Orphans' Court for Baltimore County disclose that Mr. Marx not only refused to turn over the assets of the estate he had been adjudged as concerting and withholding therefrom, but upon being brought before the Orphans' Court and questioned as to the safety and his possession of the estate property, which has been in litigation over 12 years. Mr. Marx refused to answer any questions and after being given additional time to change his mind and refusing then to furnish the Court with any information, he was held in contempt and imprisoned at this hearing.. Mr. Marx's bondsman, a neighbor, of Fullerton, this county, asked relief from his bond or an additional bond, and to this request Mr. Marx continued the same attitude.

Judge Parke of Westminster, refused to release Mr. Marx on a writ of habeas corpus, and finally after appeals were again taken to the Court of Appeals (this being the fourth to the highest Court in this State) a stay of the contempt order was granted by the Court of Appeals.

The writ of supersedeas it is stated, only serves to secure a suspension of the matter until a decision by the Court of Appeals.

Attorneys John S. Strahorn, of Annapolis; Frank Driscull and C. Clem Gratezel, of Baltimore, are attorneys for Marx.

Marx also filed a suit in Baltimore against John B. Gontrum, who served as counsel for Lassahn.
