LETTER TO THE KENT NEWS.

Wheat Seeding—The Indian Lecture—Price of Tickets—Exposed Corn and Road Cattle—Trouble Among the Fair—How do you Spell Male Hog?—Grange Meeting.

Messrs. Editors:—Our farmers are still improving these bright autumnal days in putting in their wheat. Few only have finished, and I judge that a larger breadth than usual will be seeded.

On Tuesday the "Converted Indian" will lecture at Salem Church, and the advertisements say the price of tickets will be 50 cents, yet I am authorized and requested to say that one-half that amount only will be demanded of adults. Children will pay 15 cents. Any one wishing to pay more to the object of civilizing and christianizing the tribes in the Indian Territory can do so by buying a portrait of the lecturer at 75 or 35 cents; and those desiring to aid the church can do that by giving the balance of their dollar to the steward of the church, Jas. Kendall, and receive in return his hearty benediction.

Why will judicious farmers cut off their corn and set it along their road fences as a temptation to vagrant stock? Cattle, otherwise quiet, are thus lured to become breachy. These farmers may be judicious, but this practice is far otherwise, and by no means wise.

The young ladies of this community invoke your interference in their behalf. They are in a quandary. They like to receive and entertain the beaux, but then there is a limit even to this pleasure, and some young gentlemen appear to be ignorant of it. They have an idea, or seem to have, because the girls enjoy their company an hour or so, that it enhances their pleasure to sit up half the night. They cannot indulge in a first-class yawn even without violating the rules of good breeding, and if they venture to ask their visitors if they know what is good for sore eyes, it is considered a broad hint that their going would be as agreeable as their coming had been. Can you help the girls out of their dilemma? Perhaps it might do to turn the conversation to the subject of swine of both genders, and intimate that the masculine of these animals are not your favorite pets. And if the hint is not broad enough, ask if it is spelled with or without an a.

Fairlee Grange will, I learn, hereafter hold their meetings on Saturday, at 2 P. M., until April, 1876, commencing Oct. 30th, inst. SIMON SHARP.

LETTER FROM LYNCH'S.

Messrs. Editors:—We are happy to report Lynch's right side up again as to mail matters, the P. O. being re-established, and Wm. Hepbron, Esq., appointed P. M. By the way, it is said this getleman is to be the Bug candidate for the Legislature.

Lots are being laid off at Lynch's, and buildings are soon to be erected for mechanics which desire to settle in this central place.

Our young friend, George Harper, of Still Pond, has built one of the most commodious and tasty store rooms in said village we have ever seen in the county.

We are glad to record no stealing in connection with the colored camp at Still Pond this season. Indeed there has been but little outright theft the entire year, although considerable cord wood on the new road to Price's Corner has changed hands under the very easy pretext of "mistake."

The frequent blasts of gun powder reminds us that sportsmen are around, and we are told there are unreasonable beings about that give no notice to gunners until they get on their premises, and then insult them to the full of their profane natures. Any gentleman had rather pay to the newspaper a dollar for a caution than to insult his neighbor. We would suggest to farmers to discriminate by all means in favor of those that set a box in every rabbit's path, and who are evidently scarce of bacon.

A political bug from Baltimore was recently around here. His manners were somewhat en-Gage-ing, and it is reported he made some converts. That good nature may prevail during the canvass between contending parties, and good men succeed to office is the sincere prayer of a CITIZEN.

LETTER FROM EDESVILLE.

Messrs. Editors:—Your paper of the 16th has a letter from Fairlee, written by "Simon Sharp," with this remark:

"Why does it take from 36 to 48 hours to get a letter conveyed by mail from Fairlee to Edesville? Answer—because unless the party addressed is at the office when the postman arrives, he will not be likely to find the office open until the next arrival. This is a conundrum for P. M. G. Jewell—not James."

Perhaps the Postmaster is meddling with something that don't concern him, and is awake to the spirit of the times, and leaves his own to attend another's business; and if Fairlee and Edesville are suited with such inestimable helps, who should complain? If S. S. would write something that could give strength to the government, tone to the State or credit to himself, except throwing pebbles for his and your readers' amusement, he might be understood at the Postoffice Department.

If there is a sin of greater magnitude than all others it is envy. It has slain and otherwise ruined millions; it has overthrown and laid waste kingdoms and empires, and driven their sovereigns and people into exile; it has persecuted religion in all ages, and the blood of the martyrs shame its victories; born in sin, instructed in vice, it triumphs in the degredation of its victims; it is limited only by the bounds of the earth; you may know it everywhere, as the seal of the Almighty on the forehead of Cain—"Am I not greater than thou?" VINDICATOR.

MARYLAND POLITICS.—The Cecil Democrat, which from the first has advocated any and all reforms which may be necessary in the politics of Maryland, consistently adheres to its position. It points out how the delinquency of prominent citizens in their political duties has entailed evil by leaving political management to "lesser lights," and in reference to Hon. S. T. Wallis's position says:

"If we have been severe upon the Hon. S. Teackle Wallis and his co-reformers, it is because we class him and them among the recreant citizens who have indulged themselves at the expense of their State. Nor can we deem Mr. Wallis's defence a sufficient one. If he had indeed exerted his great abilities for the preservation of the honor of his State, and had failed in his efforts, then his defence could have been accepted. But this he does not claim to have done. He dwells with sarcastic bitterness upon the evils of the times, but he fails to tell us what he has attempted to do in order to cure them. He has quietly witnessed his mother State ravished (according to his own testimony) by brute force, and he has closed his doors to shut out her cry of agony and her call for her refined and cultured sons. He tells us he has heard her cry for years, and we say he has turned a deaf ear to her call. He tells us that intelligence and moral force are as nothing against organized scoundrelism. If this is true, then our popular institutions are disastrous failures. If scoundrelism has already the upper hand, and is to rule with the rod of satan, the revolution of '76 was a terrible blunder, and the centennial buildings now being erected for the hundredth year of our national independence, had better be draped in mourning rather than festooned with a flag which represents intelligence and virtue at the foot of ignorance and fraud.—But Mr. Wallis is mistaken. He had not tried what even a single arm can do, armed with truth and justice, in a battle with the roughest political elements. And yet no man living knows better than Mr. Wallis the power of just such an arm and armor. * * * He could have gone into any ward in the city of Baltimore and the men of that ward would have respected his presence and acknowledged his power. The moral courage which bid defiance to the frenzied tyranny of 1862 would have been just as efficient, had it been active, in the cause of political purity in the city of Baltimore. But vice works and triumphs whilst negative virtue enjoys 'the quiet of its profession.' The same energy now put forth to overthrow an alleged evil in the State, all along vigilantly extended, would have closed the door most effectually against venal politicians and their retainers. And there would have been no occasion now for new rings, new alliances and candidates, with but one principle—reform—a word that has been at the root of as much political trickery as any other single word in the English language. If men of S. Teackle Wallis's standing in the State did their duty to the State, day by day, there would be no need of a political union camp-meeting now to bring the wicked to repentance."

SPEECH OF HON. W. T. HAMILTON.

Mr. Hamilton made his first speech of this campaign at Frederick on Thursday of last week. He began by referring to the many contests years ago during which he had carried the standard of the democratic party in its conflicts in Western Maryland. He said that to-day, as then, he was a democrat from principle and conviction; that after fifteen years of republican rule, during which the citizens of the Southern States were proscribed by that organization for their political opinions, the power of the Radical party was beginning to give away and go down. The democratic party now had a majority in the House of Representatives, and would prevent further reckless and extravagant legislation.

He reviewed at length the Credit Mobilier, Pacific Mail subsidy, Indian contracts, expenses of keeping up the army and navy, and the corruption of the District of Columbia ring. He showed the economical administration of the government under democratic supremacy, and the extravagance of the republican party exhibiting a powerful and glaring contrast. He said that the republican party had excluded him and his fellow democrats from the elective franchise in this State, but that under the constitution of 1867 the rights and political privileges of every citizen, no matter what his party were protected and insured. This, said he, is no time for democrats to desert their party. Now that the election of President was at hand, it was all important that Maryland democrats, who had always been conservative, should cling to their party and its saving principles. He was a life-long democrat himself. The proudest inheritance a man could leave his children was the blessing of liberty. Money and lands were as naught in comparison.

It was important that Maryland should not depart from democratic faith. He dwelt with great force and earnestness upon the necessity of preserving and organizing the democratic party in Maryland. There was no consideration to induce them to desert it. I have, said he, the fullest confidence in the honor and integrity of Mr. Carroll, and shall support him. I have no personal feeling in this matter, and know that the gentlemen who are upon the tickets in Western Maryland will aid him in suppressing and correcting any abuses that may be brought under his notice. He concluded by urging his friends to stand firmly to the great principles of the democratic party and support its nominees. Mr. Hamilton spoke eloquently and earnestly for an hour and a half, and was frequently applauded.
