LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE

KENT CO. AGRICULTURAL CLUB, No. 1.

Messrs. Editors:—To-day, May 27th, was the last meeting to be held in the club room at Worton Heights. Next Monday, June 5th, the Club meets in its own building at Worton Station, and is decided to dedicate the building to agriculture on Monday, June 12th, at 2½ o'clock. The invitation is generally all are invited, and also the citizens of the adjoining counties. In addition to the regular exercises, addresses are expected from distinguished speakers. Farmers are invited to bring specimens of their fruits, grains, grasses, early vegetables, &c., for exhibition, and the ladies are requested to bring flowers, in wreaths, garlands and bouquets, to adorn and beautify the hall. Messrs. S. Vannort, W. T. Stephens and Wm. T. Nicholson were appointed a committee on dedicating the hall. Messrs. Isaac Parsons, Jas. Brice and J. W. Corey were appointed a committee on seating the hall. Messrs. P. Janvier, J. S. Cosden and S. Lecas were appointed a committee on fruits and flowers. As the regular exercises commence at 2½ o'clock, this committee requests contributors to have their fruits and flowers at the building as early as convenient. Mr. Jas. Brice was appointed a committee of one to invite the Chestertown band to favor the Club with music for the occasion. The question for discussion is, "What advantage to farmers are agricultural societies?" Probably all present who feel disposed will be invited to participate. The Club has decided to have no strawberry festival this spring, but to have their dedicatory exercises in its place.

The attention of the Club was called to an iron frame cultivator, made by Messrs. Chapman & Lambert, of Chestertown. Although none of the members present had used the implement, or seen it tried, yet those who had examined it considered it a great improvement over the wooden frame, especially on account of its durability and its not being liable to foul with grass and weeds. A number of its advantages were named; but doubtless the manufacturers will take pleasure in showing the implement to those wishing to examine it. I understand one will be on exhibition at the fair grounds. We have a good room there for the exhibition of all kinds of agricultural implements, and have no doubt the Club will invite manufacturers to send their productions for inspection.

It is hoped the members generally will come to the meeting next Monday, as it will be the first regular meeting in the new building, and there is reason to believe that the change will greatly conduce to the prosperity and usefulness of the organization. The subject for consideration is, "The cutting, curing and saving of hay." PARTICEPS.

LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, May 22, 1876.

Messrs. Editors:—As this is the "Centennial Year," and all things novel and otherwise are in fashion, I will give you a gossippy letter from "Gotham." There is a general complaint here, as in other places, of hard times; but one who comes here on a visit will not see any evidence of it. For all day long, without a moment's break, the trucks, omnibusses, cars, carriages and vans roll lengthwise off Manhattan Island, and across it from river to river. You see no thinning out in the ranks of the pedestrians, nor for a moment miss the roar made by the wheels, the feet, shouts and yells. Yankee, Britton, German, French, Hatian, Russian, Turk, and every nationality pass in review, dodging and elbowing one another; and one cannot help wondering where all the people come from and where they go.

From dawn to dark New York is a maelstrom, never ceasing to whirl; the human beings are carried about in circles like pieces of wrecks. The roar is a voice which speaks in its own way of ships sailing and sailing out, of cereals pouring into warehouses, and ships to be sent across the sea; of a mint of money changing hands, of minds planning humble homes and great edifices, and thousands of things speaking by no other voice. When the lamplighter starts out the crowd begins to thin, but never completely disappears; it lulls for awhile but never ceases, for New York never sleeps. The tinkle of the street car bells mingle with the heavy whistle of the ferry boats and the shriller screech of the locomotive all the night.

The great sensations of New York at present are the Coaching Club, Bennett's Rolo Club, and Col. Delancy Kane's new line of coaches to Pelham, in Westchester county. They have completely eclipsed the sensation created by the Broadway swell and the Fifth Avenue belle. All attention is drawn to the former, and the proud days of the latter are passed, it is to be hoped, forever. The principal thing that engrosses the attention of New York on Sundays is excursions to the Seashore or Beer Gardens. Fully half of the city leaves home on Sunday, and the boats and railroad routes are thronged from early dawn till dark.

All the cities adjacent have many gardens that draw crowds from New York every Sunday during the warm season. Jersey City and Hoboken draw the largest. Some of Maryland and Delaware's sons are to be found here, and they all seem to be doing well. Some of the names are familiar ones in your section. C. A. Roe, the former genial agent of the Chester River Steamboat Company, is in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company at Jersey City, as is also Gordey, son of one of the members of the last House, from one of the lower counties. The Eastern Shoremen have most all settled in one place, for there are no less than six of them in the railroad offices, and rumor says they do well, and will soon further decrease the population of Maryland. One, Gordey, proposes to bring one of Maryland's fair daughters to the province of Jersey some time in June, and, as all such things are contagious, it is presumed some others will follow his example.

It is hot as cotton here to-day, and as your correspondent writes these lines he sees going by a representative of an old Maryland family—Col. Skinner, of Baltimore. He is at present connected with the Turf, Field and Farm newspaper, whilst his son, "a genial young man," sells tickets at the Jersey City ferries, where he can always be found to welcome any Marylanders who may honor New York with a visit.

The Centennial does not create any sensation here. I will now close; it is too confounded hot to write any more. Some time you may hear form me again. TATTLER.

HON. A. H. STEPHENS.—Mr. William Hand Browne and Col. Johnson, of Pen Lucy Academy, Baltimore county, have been engaged for a considerable time past in the preparation of a life of Alexander H. Stephens. The work is nearly finished. The letter press is carefully revised by Mr. Stephens himself.

FRATERNAL RELATIONS.—The disposition expressed by two great religious bodies of the North to heal their differences with their denominational brethren of the South is a pleasant sign of the times. The Methodist General Conference, now in session in this city, and the Presbyterian Assembly, now convened at Brooklyn, have repeated the overtures heretofore made for a return of the fraternal relations which were disturbed by the troubles growing out of slavery and the war. The Northern Methodists have appointed a committee to meet delegates from their Southern brethren and adjust the details of a plan on which a junction may be effected. The Southern Methodists, on their part, have entered heartily into the work. The Presbyterian Assembly in session at Brooklyn have renewed their proposition for reunion to the Southern branch, which met at Savannah, and the latter, while seeming to intimate that some further explanations from the Northern body may be desired, has responded in a fraternal spirit. Whilst as yet no formal reunion of these ecclesiastical bodies is accomplished, it is evident that the unity of spirit, which is more important in this case than that of form, has been attained. We have in the government an organized reconstruction of the dissevered States, but all lovers of peace and harmony would feel better satisfied if this external union was accompanied by such evidences of fraternity and reconciliation as seem to animate the once divided religious bodies of the land.—Balt. Sun.

OYSTERS IN THE MOON.—The Washington Republican states that on Sunday last Dom Pedro visited the government observatory, and being desirous of testing the power of the telescope, the instrument was adjusted so as to give his highness a view of the moon, but his exclamation of astonishment on placing his eye to the instrument caused an investigation, and it was found that a mistake had been made in its adjustment, there appearing upon the face of moon, instead of deep valleys and high mountain ranges, the startling information, "Steamed oysters in every style are sold here." It was found that instead of pointing toward the moon, the instrument was on a dead level with the sign of an oyster saloon in Alexandria.

BLOOD FOR BLOOD—How Six Murderers were Lynched.—The telegraph announced the lynching a few days since, near Edgefield, South Carolina, of six colored men, charged with the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Harmon, a venerable and influential white couple. The Charleston News and Courier says when the inquest closed the prisoners were delivered into the custody of the sheriff for commitment to jail. But immediately the sheriff was seized by the crowd, which numbered about six hundred persons, his head was hastily covered with a bag, and he was carried off by force and confined. All of the prisoners were taken by the crowd, which was composed of both black and white citizens, and marched to a point half a mile from the scene of the murder. There the six men who had committed the crime were tied firmly together in a row, and five minutes were given to them to pray, at the expiration of which time a volley of one hundred shots were fired, and the six wretches fell dead to the ground. About three hundred men took part in the last act of the lynching. They were variously armed with rifles, shot-guns and pistols. No masks were worn by anybody, and there was no exhibition of any excitement of any kind, no loud talking and no whiskey. Previous to their execution two of the men confessed that the party had been concocting the murder for several weeks. After the murder the house was gutted of everything valuable, and a part of the goods were recovered in the hands of one of the men who was executed.

THE PEACH PROSPECT.—The Dover Delawarean learns that the entire peach crop on the Peninsula will not exceed 1,500,000 baskets, and may fall below that figure. New Castle county, Delaware, and Kent county, Maryland, will probably furnish one half, or even three-fifths, of the whole amount, Kent county, Delaware, about one half of the remainder, and the residue will come from Sussex, and the lower Eastern Shore of Maryland. This is only an approximation from information derived from growers and may be much modified by future contingencies.—Many of the young peaches have fallen off within the last two weeks, and many more may follow. In Delaware, the information is that nearly all the peaches are north of Camden; and a very large proportion of them east of the railroad, in the necks and near the bay shore. Heavy soils seem to have retarded the development of the buds, and thus saved the fruit. In Talbot county but little injury to the peach crop is reported, the nature of the soil and the salt water favorable to the crop.

THE SUNDAY OPENING QUESTION.—The Philadelphia papers concur in stating that the meeting held in that city, on Saturday evening, of those in favor of opening the centennial exhibition on Sunday was fully as large and in every respect as creditable in number and intelligence as was that held as representative of the opposite view on the previous Wednesday. Music Fund Hall, where the regular meeting was held, was not large enough to accommodate the crowd, so another meeting was organized on the outside. The principal speakers were Hon. Benj. Harris Brewster, Geo. W. Biddle, Edward Shippen and John W. Forney, and a number of ministers participated in the proceedings. Commenting on the meeting the Philadelphia Press says:

"Surely the men who participated in Saturday's demonstration cannot be much longer treated with contempt by the centennial commission. They are no politicians, nor demagogues, nor Sabbath-breakers nor disturbers of the public peace.—They represent every creed and sect, every party, trade and profession, and it will be noted that they have solemnly resolved to persevere."

The Phila. North American says:

"We are most confident that the experiment of opening would demonstrate the fallacy of the assertions of trouble and evil which are threatened as consequences."

The Philadelphia Times advocates free admission to the grounds on Sundays, and adds:

"It would greatly and justly popularize the exhibition. It would bring more than a million people to our city by excursions, to remain Saturday, Sunday and Monday, or longer, who will not otherwise attend at all, and as a financial measure it will best replenish the treasury of the commission."

A ROCK weighing over two hundred tons was thrown out at one blast in McClenahan's quarries at Port Deposit the other day.
