shutter in the parlor. He turned the house furnishings topsy-turvy in his search for valuables. The pantry and the cellar were well searched but no liquor was to be found. Mr. Sloan, who went out to his country place upon the report of his caretaker, declared that nothing was missing but an old rifle and a hunting coat.

At the mansion of Miss Dollie Fulton, who is a sister of the late Mrs. Felix Agnus, the doors were torn from the hinges, the house thoroughly searched and the furniture upset.

Nacirema, the estate of General Agnus, has been closed since the death of Mrs. Agnus several years ago. The robbery was discovered at 4 P. M. New Year's Eve by George Jones, keeper of the place, who believes entrance was made Sunday night. The lock on the front door had been broken with a chisel as well as several locks on the inside of the house.

Everything, particularly in the vicinity of the wine-cellar, which had been famous in its day, was scattered about the rooms. Jones could not determine the loss, but expressed his belief that nothing of value has been taken. Mrs. Oscar Leser and Mrs. P. B. Key Daingerfield, daughters of General Agnus, who occupied the home for a short time during the summer, inspected the place and made and inventory. The Towson and Pikesville police were notified and are investigating.

Courtenay Jenifer, Charles Lee Merriken and William Lee Merriken appear for the plaintiff.

STORIES OF THE BIBLE.
David and Jonathan.
By A Layman.

There is no greater example in all history, of true, disinterested, unselfish, and enduring friendship, than the friendship of David and Jonathan. Jonathan was the son of a great king; reared to manhood amid the splendor and pomp of a royal palace. David was a shepherd, who tended his father's flock, an unsophisticated country boy. They were thrown together quite accidentally, and from the first of their meeting until the death of Absolem, a friendship existed that has been referred to in the intervening centuries as ideal. The story is that Saul, king of Israel, and father of Jonathan, had disobeyed and offended the Lord, the penalty for which was to be the loss of his kingdom.

And the Lord sent Samuel, the last of the Judges of Israel, to Jassee, the sheep herder, to annoint his son David, for it was David the Lord had selected to succeed Saul as king. Saul became possessed of an evil spirit and had seasons of depression and melancholia and his servants advised that he secure a harpist to play for him, with the hope that it might cheer him during these periods and possibly restore him to health. He immediately became interested and inquired whether they knew such a one ,and they told him of a son of Jessie whom they had seen and heard; he immediately sent for him and when he came clad in the homely garb of the shepherd lads of that period he was immediately ushered into the king's presence, who commanded him to play, and when he did so the king was refreshed and the evil spirit departed from him. Just at this time the king was at war with the Philistines, and he was sorely pressed by them—the two armies were on opposite mountain sides with a valley between them, and a giant of the Philistines, a man over 10 feet high came out and shouted defiance to the army of Saul, and threw out the challenge that if any man of Israel would come out and fight him and kill him, then the Philistines would surrenderand be their servants—but but if he, Goliath, conquered them, Israel should surrender to the Philistines and be their servants. And Saul was dismayed and troubled, for there was no man of Israel who compared with the challenger in strength. At this stage, David, the shepherd boy, came to Saul and said: Let no man's heart fail because of this braggart, I will go and fight with this Philistine.. But Saul endeavored to dissuade him saying he was not able to go up against the giant, but after David told of some of his adventures in killing lions and bears Saul gave his consent, with the result that David killed the giant with stones hurled by his shepherd's sling, cut off his head and brought it to Saul, and the scripture says that the soul of Jonathan was knit with the soul of David and Jonathan loved him as his own soul, and Jonathan stripped him of the robe that was upon him and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword and to his bow and to his girdle. Then it became known to Saul that David had been annointed by Samuel and he and Jonathan knew that not only would Saul leave the throne, but Jonathan could not succeed him, and Saul determined to kill David—but Jonathan warned him and assisted him in making his escape. Jonathan made one last effort with his father in David's behalf and the king was so displeased with him that he threw a javelin at him. Jonathan then knew that David's life was in danger and notified him to flee. Their parting was most affectionate the scripture says, "they kissed one another and wept one with the other," and then Jonathan said "the Lord is between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed forever."

And afterwards, when Jonathan was slain in battle and the news came to David he was overcome with grief and exclaimed: "How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle! Oh, Jonathan, thou wast slain in thy high places. I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan; very pleasant hast thou been with me; thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of woman."
