Report of Teachers' Meeting.

The quarterly association of Kent county teachers met at the school house in Chestertown on Friday, the 22d inst. The meeting was called to order by the President, E. F. Perkins, Esq., and opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Jewell.

The question, "How can we best secure the attention of class during recitation," was read. Mr. Melvin thought that attention could not always be secured, but that the teacher should always be thoroughly prepared himself and he could not fail to make himself interesting to his class; with small children he should possess or assume enthusiasm. Miss Downes thought the best way was to mark for each recitation. The President asked her to explain the kind of marking she referred to; he said some people sometimes marked with switches; Miss Downes then explained that she meant marking the degree of excellence of each recitation. Mr. Barroll said he got his classes interested by telling them interesting things concerning their lesson, endeavored to draw their attention aside from the fact of recitation, and frequently illustrated by drawings on blackboard. Mr. Ricaud said that in teaching reading he had his class criticise the errors made by any pupil, and it kept the whole class on the alert. In arithmetic he sends the pupil to the board who is least prepared, and has others of the class criticise. Miss Copenhaver has them look forward to examination day. Mr. Comegys said he endeavored to create a spirit of emulation; he endeavored to implant a desire for promotion; he had more trouble in interesting large than small pupils, and sometimes had to mark pupils not with a lead pencil. Miss Ruth said what will gain the interest of one class will not always gain the interest of another; she used every method she knew of to gain the attention of her pupils. Mr. Copper said he thought Mr. Melvin's plan good, and all the plans good, but they lacked; we want order, discipline, attention; said his plan was to have attention; without attention the teacher was no more a teacher than the chair he sits on. Miss Hazzard said she had not been teaching long enough to know how to secure attention; said that when she was a pupil she always paid attention because she loved to study. Mr. Morris said he tried to make study interesting, but sometimes that would not do; he endeavored to instil a desire to be advanced to a higher grade. Miss Leaverton said if the teacher is alive there will be little difficulty in securing attention; that in calling upon her class to recite she called upon her pupils promiscuously, no pupil knowing when he was to be called upon; said she endeavored to introduce as much variety as possible into recitations; that she made it a point to call upon inattentive pupils, but that she considered the main necessity to be that the teacher be fully alive to her work. Mr. Bowers said he always greeted his pupils with a smile, and tries to make them understand that there is a treat in store for them. Mr. Starkey endorsed Miss Leaverton; the teacher should thoroughly prepare himself and should let the pupils see that he is thoroughly in earnest. Mr. Ebaugh said that his views had been expressed pretty fully by others. He said that the power of making studies interesting lies with the teacher. A teacher should direct the thoughts of his pupils; he said attention was a result of good teaching, and should in time become a habit. Should employ natural methods if possible, but with lower grades artificial methods might be employed, such as prospect of promotion. Rev. Mr. Roberts said he could only judge by results. In all the schools he had ever observed there were none in which the children manifested so much interest in their studies as in this. Rev. Mr. Jewell defined his conception of attention, and said he thought the teacher should endeavor to find out what the pupil loved, and develop the mind in that direction. The President said it had been his observation that the attention of pupils is always secured by the thorough preparation of the teacher. That when the teacher manifested an enthusiasm in his work the pupils were invariably interested; attention was as necessary in the teachers' association as in the school room. Rev. Mr. Hutchin then delivered a very entertaining address, subject, "Early Impressions," and at its conclusion was roundly applauded. The association after the address adjourned for dinner.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

In the afternoon session Miss Melvin read her essay, the subject being "Our reward." Of the teacher's reward Miss Melvin said: "We work for the public and expect the reward which would be given if this same public were up to our ideal. We must have the perception to know and the ability to do what the public can appreciate and is willing to pay for, before we can expect to obtain our reward from the public without fail. While it is true that in whatever proper direction a given amount of talent is bestowed, it should receive the same reward, yet our employers do not think so. * * * "There is one thing in which we can make no mistake, good intentions will produce their result. While we may, through our lack of perception, perform our work in such a manner as to receive no material reward, yet if we are conscientiously doing those things which we think are right, we are enlarging our powers of perceiving good things, we are growing better in heart, and are constantly receiving that comfort given by the voice of conscience, which is but the echo of the Master's 'Well done.'" After the reading of the essay the secretary read the question, "Is it advisable at any time to call upon a pupil to assist in teaching?" Mr. Comegys said he had tried it, but found it failed; said the parents opposed it and he dropped it. Miss Gooding said she had had little experience, but when she was a pupil she assisted her teacher, and was much benefitted thereby. Miss Annie Power said she did not think it advisable. Mrs. Beck thought there were cases where it might work well. Mr. Melvin thought there were many instances in which a pupil can render assistance, as in examining slates. Miss Leaverton thought for the most part it was not advisable, but sometimes may be admissable, as in case of sickness of teacher. Discretion should be used in calling upon pupils, and it should not be done if there were any objection on the part of parents; thought, however, it would be beneficial to the pupil called upon. Mr. Barroll had not had occasion to call upon any pupil. Mr. Tonkin thought that when school was full there might be no objection to calling on advanced pupils, but otherwise it would not be advisable. Mr. Greenwood saw no objections. Mr. Crosby said when he was a boy he spent one day in each week teaching, but it didn't do him any good or the pupils either, but now he always calls on a higher grade to teach a lower one. Mr. Ricaud said he sometimes called on advanced pupils. Mr. Starkey said he was not in the habit of calling on pupils, but sometimes allowed a pupil to select a sentence to be parsed, but he found that this gave dissatisfaction. Mr. Ebaugh had seen considerable of it at the Normal, but the Normal is the place for it, as it is intended to make teachers, but he did not think it profitable in public schools. He thought a link should be kept up between daily recitations, and when a pupil is given charge the link is broken. The President thought it depended somewhat upon the meaning of the term, "assist in teaching." Has seen, when a class was sent to the board in arithmetic, one pupil read the example for another to work, and thought it very good. In spelling thought pupils might be employed to advantage in examining slates, but as a general rule he considered it objectionable.

Miss Taylor was appointed essayist for next association, and Mr. Bowers to deliver the address. The questions for discussion for next meeting are 1st, To what extent should pupils be assisted in preparation of lessons; 2nd, How to teach arithmetic in 1st, 2d and 3d grades. After some other minor discussions the association adjourned. On account of the weather, there was a small attendance, being only 15 present in the morning and 27 in the afternoon.

RESPONSIBILITY OF VESSEL CAPTAINS.—In the Talbot county Court last week the case of James E. Todd vs. Jacob Truax, involved a point of considerable interest. The case came up on an appeal from a decision of Justice Slaughter. Major Stewart for appellant (Todd) and Thomas & Bateman for appellee (Truax). Todd is the captain of a schooner that runs grain from Tuckahoe to Baltimore, and Truax is a farmer who made a shipment of corn by Todd's boat. The grain was not consigned by Truax to any commission merchant, he being a new comer in the county, and not being acquainted with the commission men of Baltimore. Todd named over several commission firms, whom he could recommend, but Truax said he did not know them, and left the selection of the commission merchant to Capt. Todd. Todd took his grain to Gould & Dukes, who sold it and failed before they made returns to either the captain or Truax. Tried before the Court.

Judge Wickes delivered the opinion of the Court. He said that the captain of a vessel is responsible as a common carrier for the safety of a cargo until it is delivered to the consignee, and his responsibility as a common carrier then ceases, whether that consignee is selected by the shipper or captain. But if the shipper leaves the selection of a commission merchant to the captain, the captain is further responsible as the agent or bailee of the shipper, and is bound to exercise due care and good judgment in selecting a consignee. Should the captain take the grain to a man notoriously dishonest, or generally of bad credit, he would be legally responsible for such a consignee's default. But if he selected a commission merchant of good repute,—one in whom the community generally had confidence, and who was supposed to be sound,—the captian would not be responsible for the return of the account of sales to the shipper, unless such a contract had been previously made between captain and shipper. In this case no such contract was shown to have been made, nor was there any evidence to show that Gould & Dukes were, at the time Capt. Todd consigned them the grain, discreditable as commission merchants. Hence judgment below was reversed, and judgment with costs was awarded the appellant.

THE DESOLATED SOUTH.

RETURN OF DR. HOWARD, OF THE YELLOW-FEVER COMMISSION.

Dr. E. Lloyed Howard returned to Baltimore Sunday morning from Richmond, where he had stopped to attend a medical convention there and to make his report upon the investigations of the yellow-fever commissioners. Dr. Howard left Baltimore on the 3d of October ulto. for New Orleans, where he met Dr. S. Bemiss, of that city, and Dr. Jerome Cochran, of Mobile, Ala., the other members of the commission. Soon after reaching New Orleans he was himself stricken down with the terrible scourge, but the attack was fortunately only slight and the doctor soon recovered. In the large cities Dr. Howard says the effects of the fever upon business were not so apparent, the large number of people clad in mourning being the most conspicuous evidence of the presence of the plague. But in the smaller towns, particularly through the central part of Mississippi, along the line of the Jackson railroad, the desolation was unparalleled. The angel of death seemed indeed to have swept over the country, so few were the signs of life which met the visitor. At Grenada and Holly Springs five or six idle negroes were the only living beings seen as the train rolled into the depot. In the town itself the sense of desolation and misery were even more overpowering. Rows of houses stood tenantless and silent; upon the long streets no bustle or traffic was seen, and a white face peering now and then from some window made the loneliness seem greater.

Doctor Howard and his colleagues were convinced beyond a doubt that the fever is contagious mainly through the clothing which has been worn or been near an afflicted person. He is equally positive that the quarantine repulations, if properly enforced, would prevent its spread, and he was surprised at the carelessness manifested by the people in regard to this matter. As an example, even at Cincinnati, Ohio, a densely populated city, Pullman cars which ran from within 50 miles of New Orleans and all through the infected districts of Mississippi over the Jackson railroad were allowed to come into the depot every night. In the same car in which he himself traveled a conductor and an engineer of the road, both sick with the fever, were lying in one of the sleeping berths where persons from the North or from States where there was no fever would probably be put within an hour. The commission did not have time to make as minute inquiries as they would have liked, but speaking of the negroes, who have hitherto escaped the disease, the doctor says a great many of them flocked into the cities to get rations and thus exposed themselves almost wantonly. He believes the investigations by the commission were most important, particularly in reference to quarantine, and thinks if an opportunity was afforded to properly inqure into the method of treatment much might be done to hereafter check the scourge as soon as it appears.

THE GREAT QUESTION!—The "Cipher Dispatches" ain't quite dead yet in the way of a topic for discussion. "Sambo" himself sometimes takes a hand, and the following little bit of philosphy is worth considering:

"Dar ain't but two sides ter de quschin: Tilden wanted ter buy de votes er he didn't? Hit's 'nuff fer me ter kno' dat he did'nt git 'em! Yer kin prove all de sifer 'spatches dat yer pleeze but ef yer don't find der munny and yer do find de votes on de odder side, den de sifer 'spatches don't count, and whoebber got de mutton ar' de man dat de jail is er waitin fer!"

CHOICE EXTRACTS.—We clip from two of our esteemed Baltimore contemporaries the following precious morceaux of attic and refined wit and repartee:

Morning Herald.—The News, in its double capacity of newspaper and office-holders' organ, squeals like a stuck pig at The Morning Herald. When one throws a stone in the dark and hears a dog howl, it is reasonable to conclude that he was struck.

Evening News.—The Morning Herald flaps its wings and cackles, and crows as if it had laid the reform egg in the mare's nest this year, and intended to do all the setting and hatching and rearing itself.

CROAKING is not confined to the Frog Ponds. At this season almost everybody is hoarse. The bleating of distressed lungs is heard everywhere. Why is this, when Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar will cure any cough, cold or hoarseness in 48 hours? Sold by all druggists. Pike's Toothache Drops cure in 1 minute.

NINE convicts, six black and three white, were publicly whipped at the jail at Newcastle, Del., Saturday, five of them being also pilloried.

JUDGE GILDERSLEEVE, of New York, a famous long range rifleman, has been at Havre de Grace, Md., hunting ducks.

Various Causes—

Advancing years, care, sickness, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition—all operate to turn the hair gray, and either of them inclines it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR will restore faded or gray, light and red hair to a rich brown or deep black, as may be desired. It softens and cleanses the scalp, giving it a healthy action, and removes and cures dandruff and humors. By its use falling hair is checked, and a new growth will be produced in all cases where the follicles are not destroyed or glands decayed. Its effects are beautifully shown on brashy, weak, or sickly hair, to which a few applications will produce the gloss and freshness of youth. Harmless and sure in its operation, it is incomparable as a dressing, and is especially valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts. It contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil or color white cambric; yet it lasts long on the hair, and keeps it fresh and vigorous.

Manhood: How Lost, How Restored!

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence, sexual extravagance, &c.

☞Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.
