SATURDAY.....OCT. 18, 1879.

Child-Stealing as a Trade.

So many novels, plays and operas hinge upon the theft of children from their homes that it is rather strange the crime is not more frequent. There cannot be a doubt that dramas of the Jack Sheppard and Dick Turpin order increase the felonies they ostensibly depreciate. Some years ago, when it was proposed to forbid the representation of the former play in London, careful inquiries were made respecting its effects upon the average audience, and the pernicious tendency of such pieces was thus made clear to the public mind. Boys became thieves because their imaginations were fired by the daring deeds and romantic adventures of the great experts of the profession. Mr. Sheppard, despite the tremendous effort of Blueskin, might dangle at last on Tyburn Tree, and Mr. Turpin, with his "bonny black Bess," might die ignobly in the highway, but the splendor of their previous life eclipsed the shame of their departure from it, and foolish youths were many who, if they could only live as they did, would be content like them to die.

There is not, to be sure, as much glory to the juvenile eye in abduction as in highway robbery, but the former is usually safer and often much more lucrative. The passion of revenge, too, as well as that of cupidity may be gratified by it; so that on the whole, perhaps, it is somewhat remarkable that the fate of the young hero of "Guy Mannering" or the young heroine of the "Bohemian Girl" does not find more frequent illustration in real life. The highwaymen, it is to be observed, always come to grief; whereas the child-stealers seldom or never do. The abductor of the Ross child, for example, is still undiscovered, and such a case as that of the man Scuyler, who was arrested on Wednesday night in Buffalo, we are rarely called on to record. Schuyler appears to have gone into kidnapping children as a regular business, and, but for the lucky accident of his capture, many homes might have been made desolate by his depredations. The act of this man which led to his arrest was curiously audacious, but very simple. A young girl, the daughter of a prominent citizen of Buffalo, Mr. Townsend Davis, was at school, taking a music lesson. Schuyler called at the school, saw the lady and told her that her father had been hurt by an accident and that he had been sent to take her at once to him. The girl, without suspicion, went with the scoundrel directly. They got into a street car, rode some distance and alighted on a corner next to a row of buildings called the Phelps Block. Schuyler here said that Mr. Townsend had been taken up stairs, and that he would first ascend and see if her father's condition was such that the daughter could see him. He went up, and came down, and she then accompanied him up again. They passed into a room on an upper story, when Schuyler locked the door. The child saw that she was trapped and tried to scream. But her captor was too quick and succeeded in gagging her. Thereupon he calmly told his prisoner his plans. These proved to be as simple as his method of abduction. He wanted five hundred dollars, he said. Her father was rich and could easily pay it. She must, therefore, forthwith write a letter demanding for her jailor as the price of her safety and freedom that the sum should be immediately paid in a certain manner. The girl was too frightened to write the letter; but Schuyler whipped out a draft already prepared and made her copy it. In the sequel the child escaped, her abducter by promptness and good fortune was taken, and the fact was made plain that the man had actually adopted child-stealing as his trade, and had provided himself with various facilities, the discovery of which throws a broad light upon his history and purposes.

Among papers found on Schuyler's person, or among his effects, were lists of names and residences of wealthy individuals who have children, notes of the schools and other places frequented by them, and a variety of details that betrayed the fellow's designs and his intended mode of operation. The most striking feature of these consisted in adroitly written letters requiring sums of money to be instantly paid, under penalty of the lasting concealment of a child already stolen, and likewise threaten to torture the child in the event of delay. If fault were found with the conditions, or a detective employed, a "watery grave" would be the consequence to the little prisoner, who would never afterwards be heard of. The "penalty of treachery," or non-compliance with the demands, was to be in some instances, "death," in other a life of private abuse and pain. Fortunately for the community the infamous wretch who contemplated this wickedness, and who is said to be a telegraph operator lately in the service of the Western Union Company, has been secured, and his career of guilt has thus, as we may hope, been brought to an end. It is still more fortunate that no "glory" attaches to his misdeeds. He has made no money. He has secreted no victims. He is not a "bold, bad man," like the famous footpads and burglers who made the world ring with their exploits, and who have therefore inflamed the foolish and the ignorant to fatal emulation. He is merely a vulgar and commonplace ruffian who has not been clever enough to avoid speedy detection, and who will probably have in Auburn State Prison ample time to mourn over his feeble attempts at crime and to resolve to steal neither children nor anything else after he gets out.—N. Y. Post.

J. M. LARGUE'S ANTI-BILIOUS BITTERS cure Dyspepsia, Nervousness, Billious Attacks, Sick Headache. Constipation, Kidney and Bladder Affections, Chills and Fever, regulate Torpid Liver, and cure all diseases arising from a disordered Stomach. Always beneficial, and never harmful. Can stop using at any time without any bad effects. Get them from your druggist. 25c. a package; $1 per bottle. W. E. Thornton, Proprietor, Baltimore, Md.

"WILL the angels come down for me with a chariot and horses when I die?" asked a little boy of his Sunday school teacher. "I guess so, if you are a really good boy," said the teacher. The little fellow's eyes sparkled with anticipation as he exclaimed, "And, oh! do you think they'll let me sit on the front seat and drive?"

A Remarkable Result.

It makes no difference how many Physicians, or how much medicine you have tried, it is now an established fact that German Syrup is the only remedy which has given complete satisfaction in severe cases of Lung Diseases. It is true there are yet thousands of persons who are predisposed to Throat and Lung Affections, Consumption, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Severe Colds settled on the Breast, Pneumonia, Whooping Cough, &c., who have no personal knowledge of Boschee's German Syrup. To such we would say that 50,000 dozen were sold last year without one complaint. Consumptives try just one bottle. Regular size 75c. Sold by C. F. STAM, Chestertown, and F. M. Goodwin, Millington.

TO FARMERS.

HAVING made arrangements with The Farmers' Bone and Fertilizing Company for the sale of their

"HIGH GRADE"

PHOSPHATES,

we offer the following brands to the Farmers of Kent and adjoining counties, at HARD TIME PRICES:

High Grade NitroPhosphate
High Grade Super Phosphate
Imp. Acidulated Phosphate,
Albor Guano.

Believing that we have FIRST CLASS PHOSPHATES we do not hesitate to ask a fair and impartial trial beside any Phosphate in the market.

Attention is called to the following testimonial of a first class and reliable farmer, after several years' using:

MILLINGTON, MD., July 2, '79.
Farmers' Bone and Fertilizing Co., Philadelphia:—Sirs: I have used your High Grade Phosphates for four years past on wheat and corn, and have always found it to give satisfaction, and it is the best Phosphate I know of in the market, and can recommend it as such to farmers wishing to use a reliable fertilizer.

Resp'y, &c., N. VANSANT.

We most respectfully ask that you give us a call before purchasing elsewhere.

JOHN S. KNAPP—Sir: Having used the London Horse and Cattle Food on both my horses and cows, I cheerfully recommend it to the public as a good condition food for the horse and a profitable condiment for cattle, as it will cause cows to give more milk and make at least 25 per cent. more butter than any condition powders I ever used. Hoping this will induce my friends to try it, after which I am convinced they will bear the same testimony as to its merits as I do.
