DEAD MEN'S OPINIONS.—In the April ...ber of the North American Review ...outwell, whose financial vagaries as ...ry of the Treasury are not yet for- ...undertakes to justify the nomina- ...General Grant to the presidency ...d term. He takes Judge Black ...rely to task for urging that the ...of Washington and Jefferson ...be followed, and that ever since ...opposition to a third presiden- ...has become the unwritten law ...public. Upon this point Mr. ...says: "There has been a se- ...fort to establish the proposition ...at is called 'the tradition of the ...s' is as binding on the country * * ...the restriction were a part of the ...stitution itself. The opinions of ...Washington and Jefferson are entitled to the highest considerations as opinions—nothing more. We refuse to allow the hands of dead men to control the soil of the country, and shall we, without inquiry, without a judgment of our own, permit the opinions of dead men to control the thought and policy of the country?" As an argument, even in this age of political partisan unreason, we have rarely met with one more puerile than this by Mr. Boutwell. What is the constitution of the United States but the embodiment of the opinions of dead men who, through that instrument, for nearly a century have controlled the thought and policy of the country? There was a time when the name of Washington was held in reverence by men of all political parties. Even now, New England school books strive to impress on their youthful readers his patriotism, his integrity, his greatness and his goodness. Congress has decreed that his birthday shall be kept as a public holiday. Washington's opinion in respect to the propriety of limiting the occupation of the presidential chair by the same incumbent to two terms was concurred in by Jefferson, was adopted as their rule of action by all subsequent Presidents, and has received the tacit endorsement of the people from that day to this. It has remained for Mr. Boutwell to discover that his opinion is entitled to no more consideration than the opinion of any other dead man. "Tradition" is often held to be more sacred than the written law, and when men like Mr. Boutwell begin to sneer at "the tradition of the fathers," other men may reasonably believe that the old fashioned virtues of gratitude and patriotism are dying out.—Balto. Sun.

THE DEPUTY MARSHALS' BILL.—The bill which has passed the House of Representatives to regulate the appointment of deputy marshals at congressional elections by dividing them between the two political parties, limiting their number, prescribing their term of service and the rate of pay, and vesting their appointment in the judges of the United States Circuit Court or District Courts, instead of in the federal marshals, as now, seems to be acceptable to moderate men of both parties. The only opposition thus far developed is from the republican "stalwarts," and possibly from a few democrats of the extreme type. Nearly all the Eastern papers speak of it as a fair bill and as calculated to quiet a controversy which has been very bitter, and which would have increased in intensity so long as the republicans clung to the power of appointing all the deputy marshals from the ranks of their own party. The theory on which the republican stalwarts oppose any change, says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, "is that the democratic party, including half the voters of the United States, is not to be trusted in any administrative capacity; that its purposes are treasonable, its leaders at heart disloyal and its masses misguided, or, at worst, knowingly determined to reverse by the ballot what was lost by the bullet. Of course," adds the Republican, "this is not true, but it is made the pretext for arguing the necessity of putting a strong-armed man at the head of the government." The bill is a compromise of the best kind. It is a trust in which both parties will share, if the bill becomes a law; and while it removes the taint of partisanship, so obvious in the existing law, its tendency is to allay strife.

BALTIMORE'S POPULATION.—The Baltimore City Directory for 1880 will contain 108,042 names of persons residing within the limits of the city, and that portion of Baltimore county comprised within the "Belt." Of this number 92,043 are whites, and 15,999 colored. The largest number of names commence with the letter "S," there being 10,358 names of whites beginning with that letter, and 1,541 colored; total, 11,899. There are only two persons' names in the directory commencing with the letter "X."

The ratio of the population to the names in a directory is variously stated in different cities, some publishers placing it as high as 5 to 1. Assuming 4 inhabitants to each name in the Baltimore City Directory (a low and safe estimate), we have a population of 532,168 in the city and its suburbs.—Morning Herald.

SPECIAL AGENTS.—The Baltimore Telegram says: "Every day there comes here from Washington one or more special agents, whose business it seems to be to ascertain how far Collector Thomas is playing fair or humbugging Sherman. The agents have a good dinner, and otherwise an excellent time. Thomas is respectful and kind—very kind; and they go back to report that he really don't mean Blaine when he talks that way, and pulls the political wires that way, but that when the proper time comes he will come out a fully-developed Sherman butterfly. Ten minutes after the special agents leave, the Collector and his men have a hearty laugh, and push ahead the Blaine boom."

THERE are 166 Indian pupils at the school established by the government in the old cavalry barracks at Carlilse, Pa. They have made great progress in their studies, and nearly all can spell correctly English words of one syllable. The boys publish a newspaper called the Big Morning Star, and are organized into three military companies, which do sentinel duty and elect their own officers.

IF your Liver or Stomach is out of order—if you are troubled with Dyspepsia, Headache, Costiveness, or Nervousness, you will save many a doctor's bill by using J. M. Laroque's Anti-Bilious Bitters, manufactured by W. E. Thornton, Baltimor, Md., and for sale by all druggists at 25c. a package, or $1 a bottle.

IT has been said that women live on love, but the Oswego Record says a small salaried young man will be interested to learn the love referred to is baked beans, beef soup, onions, and new spring hats.

"WHY do you use paint?" asked a violinist of his daughter. "For the same reason you use rosin, papa." "How is ...?" "To help me draw my bean."

If the latter course be adopted, the following form will be deemed a sufficient compliance with the act:

Recognizing the fact that the relationship existing between the counties of Maryland and the City of Baltimore is such that residents of the Counties have occasion to visit the city frequently during the year; in consideration of these facts and the liberal patronage extended the "Maltby" in the past, I deem it but a matter of justice that some discrimination should be made in their favor. I have therefore concluded to Reduce Price of Board to $2 per Day
feeling confident that the same will be fully appreciated by them, and at same time merit and secure an increased share of their patronage. Assuring them that nothing will be left undone that can add to their comfort during their stay.
