As I pause, around me gazing,
With a half expectant eye,
For a smile that used to greet me
When I entered my father's door,
Comes the thought of my father,—
Naught is left but his arm-chair.

With his countenance worn and old,
Where his head reclined at evening,
As he supped of cares told,
There we first, in childhood's morning
Knelt and lisped our simple prayer,

And in later years I've seen him,
With his head as white as snow,
Looking at me, oh, so fondly,
How we loved him, now so aged,
With his face so free from care.

Once he told us, in his dreaming,
That a dear one's face was near,
Bending over him as he slumbered;
With a [illegible] he did
Ask to know our angel mother,
In her garments pure and fair,
Came to bear him home to heaven.
Empty leave the old arm-chair,

Pastor, slumber grew into death,
And we heard him gently whisper:
"I'm going home through death."
Then a sigh—the soul has risen—
Called to meet his Father there;
All that now remains of mother,
Is his treasured old arm-chair.

Taking the Oath.

A very shrewd, sensible man in Maury county, Tenn., who had been a strong Union man until the Yankees got there, but who, after that, became equally as strong a Southerner, went to Columbia one day and was brought before General Negley.

"Well," said General Negley, "Mr. B., you must take the oath before you go home."

"Very well," said B.; "just have it boxed up, General, and I'll take it out."

"O," said General Negley, "you don't understand me; you must take the oath to support the Government of the United States."

"Why, General," said friend B., "I have a wife and several children, and it's as much as I can do to support them. I am a poor man, and I don't think of supporting too much."

By this time Negley became rather impatient. "Here," said he, handing B. the printed oath, "read it for yourself."

"I can't read," said B.

"Well, then," said Negley, turning to the Provost Marshal, "give him a pass anywhere he has no mind."

And thus he went home without taking the oath and the Yankee General was outwitted.

"Some three years since I was attacked with a severe cough, soreness and irritation of the lungs, to which was added asthma in its severest form. During the first year I tried several of the most popular medicines of the day, but received no real relief, and I had almost despaired of ever regaining my health when I was inclined to try DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, which very soon relieved me. My cough became loose, the soreness and irritation disappeared, and my general health began to improve. "I was most severely afflicted with a hard, dry cough with its usual accompaniment of night sweats, rapidly progressing to a state of hectic, producing such a debilitated state of health that, after trying medical aid to no purpose, I had given up all hopes of ever recovering, as had also my friends. At this stage of matters, I was prevailed upon, through the influence of a neighbor, to try WISTAR'S BALSAM, though with no be lief whatever in its virtues. Wonderful curative properties, and before using two bottles the effect was almost magical. My cough entirely left me, the night sweats deserted me, hope once more elevated my depressed spirits and soon I had attained my wonted strength and vigor. Thus has this Balsam, as has often been remarked by persons conversant with the above facts in this vicinity, literally snatched from the grave. APPLETON'S
American Cyclopædia.
NEW REVISED EDITION.

Entirely Rewritten by the Ablest Writers on Every Subject.

Printed from New Type, and illustrated with several thousand Engravings and Maps.

The work originally published under the title of the New American Cyclopædia was completed in 1863, since which time the world's development has been astounding in the United States, and the signal developments which have taken place in every branch of science, literature, and art, have been duly recorded and explained by a corps of editors in the exact and thorough revision, and issue of a new edition entitled

The American Cyclopædia.

Within the last ten years the progress of discovery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pace with the discoveries of science, and their fruitful application to the industrial and useful arts and convenience and refinement of social life. Great wars and consequent revolutions have occurred, involving national changes of importance, and the rise and fall of in own country, which was at its height when the last volumes of the old work appeared has happily been quiet, and a new course of commercial and industrial activity has been commenced. Large accessions to our

have been made to the indefatigable explorers of Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decade, with the natural result of the lapse of time, who have brought into public view a multitude of new men, whose names are in every one's mouth, and of whose lives every one is curious to know the particulars. Great battles have been fought and important sieges maintained, of which the details are as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in the transient publications of the day, but which ought now to take their places in Permanent and Authentic History.

In preparing the present edition for the press it has accordingly been the aim of the editors to bring down the information to the latest possible date, and to furnish an accurate account of the most recent discoveries in science, of every fresh production in literature, and of the newest inventions in the practical arts, as well as to give a succinct and original record of the progress of

Political and Historical Events.

The work was begun after long and careful preliminary labor, and with the most ample resources for carrying it on to a successful termination.

None of the original stereotype plates have been used, but every page has been

Printed on New Type,

forming in fact, a new Cyclopædia, with the same plan and compass as its predecessor, but with a far greater pecuniary expenditure, and with such improvements in its composition as have been suggested by longer experience and enlarged knowledge.

The Illustrations,

which are introduced for the first time in the present edition, have been added not for the sake of pictorial effect, but as the best means and force to the explanations in the text. They embrace all branches of science, and of natural history, and depict the most famous and remarkable features of the scenery, architecture, and art, as well as the various processes of mechanics and manufactures. Although intended for instruction rather than embellishment, no pains have been spared to insure their Artistic Excellence.

The cost of their execution is enormous, and it is believed they will find a welcome reception as an admirable feature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of its high character.

The American Cyclopædia is Now Complete, in sixteen large octavo volumes, each volume containing over 800 pages, fully illustrated with several thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerous Colored Lithographic Maps, the whole costing, the publisher a sum exceeding

Five Hundred Thousand Dollars,

exclusive of paper, printing, and binding.

one that will supersede all others, is now offered to the public at a very moderate price less than one cent a page!

A Universal Library in Itself.
