WITHIN "THE FOLD."

O! yes, I am a Pilgrim,
And long to be at rest,
Where all the Saints do safely
Repose on Christ's dear breast.
The tender lambs He gathers,
The sheep too, growing old,
Pass through the golden gateway
Into the emerald fold.

'Tis such a glorious country,
Wall'd round with gems and flowers;
The immortal Rose of Sharon
Is thornless in those bowers;
Flowing amid the pastures
Are crystal streams so pure,
Saints from them lillies gather
Fill, drink, and thirst no more.

Ah! yes, I am a Pilgrim
Journeying to lands afar,
Where crowns are gems that glitter
Brighter than brightest star.
In Paradise my Saviour,
The Christ, the God Triune,
Doth for redemption's children
Keep all His harps in tune.

Earth's pilgrimage when ended
Finds bliss that is untold,
Redeemed from sin forever,
Enters at once Christ's fold.
The very thought is rapture,
We have not long to wait
To join the song triumphant
I hear within the gate.

Hark! voices are familiar,
The loving, kindred band
Seem of all voices sweetest,
As near the Throne they stand.
And saints and angels utter
A bliss earth never told,
When Christ unites together
All in one family fold.

MATILDA CANBY.
Wilmington, Del., Nov. 29, 1880.

A PROBLEM YET TO BE SOLVED.—The gigantic power which may be concentrated in the hands of a single individual, by his obtaining a controlling influence in several large corporations, was clearly presented in the sketch which we printed yesterday of our fellow-citizen Mr. Jay Gould, and his vast and varied business operations.

And now it is boldly announced that Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt, another of our fellow-citizens, carries in his capacious pocket a majority of the New York Legislature, and that he will elect Mr. Chauncey M. Depew to the U. S. Senate.

New York would then have one Senator and Mr. Vanderbilt one.

Suppose the powers of Mr. Gould and Mr. Vanderbilt united, and bent in earnest on the same enterprise, they would become tremendous, if not irresistible.

The power of great corporations is something not contemplated by the framers of our existing forms of government. These corporations have mostly grown out of discoveries and inventions made since the establishment of our forms of State and national government, and consequently could not be taken into account by the framers of these governments. They are an influence in politics which was unforeseen. And they have grown great with rapid and long strides until their power is colossal and often controlling. Already they can make a Governor in several States, or a President over all; for through all the broad avenues and ramifications of their influence, if combined and determined, they can wield the balance of power in an election.

How is the all-important problem of the control and regulation of these hundred-handed, hundred-headed novel-monsters to be solved? —N. Y. Sun.

THE AGRICULTURAL EDITOR of the Salisbury Advertiser says if farmers, this Fall, sell their corn at 50 cents per bushel as usual, we shall think they have not made much progress in knowledge, and their success may be more the result of a faithful soil and the favor of a bountiful Providence than a manifestation of their extraordinary skill and judgment. If those who have plenty of corn now will begin to feed it to good stock it will pay them in three ways: First, in the production of butter, beef, pork and manure. Ten good cows can be fed one year on 200 bushels of corn, meal or hominy, with some turnips, beets, &c.; with a supply of wheat or oat straw, hay and fodder, say $100 worth. This outlay of $200 will keep ten cows well. These ten cows will produce 30 pounds of butter per week, at 25 cents per pound, would be $7.50 per week or $390 per year. The butter-milk will feed ten hogs, which will average 400 pounds each, or 4,000 pounds of pork, which is worth $6 per hundred, or $240, making with the money for the butter, $630. The manure raised by these ten cows and ten hogs if properly attended to with litter and earth would be worth 20 tons of the best phosphate at $20 per ton, $400, making an income of $1,030 at an expense of labor of about $200, all of which can be done by the family, in addition to cultivating the farm, at which time the heavy crop of corn wheat, oats, rye, potatoes, clover, hay and small fruits can all be grown with the manure thus accumulated."

ARMY RETIREMENTS.—The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writes: It is understood that the chief obstacle in the way of the army retirements favored by President Hayes is the hostility to the plan manifested in very high army circles, where it is contended that it is not proper to retire men who, although old, are doing very well, and that they are not so old as the staff officers of Europe. It appears that there are twenty-seven officers of and above the grade of lieutenant-colonel who might be retired under the law as fast as vacancies occur on the retired list. This would promote 135 younger officers, who, with their friends, are urging that the law should be enforced. All of the twenty-seven except eight are staff officers, showing the advantages of that branch of the service upon a question of physical hardship. Of the eight three are general officers. It is a source of great concern to the officers whether the President persists in his desire to keep the retired list full or the policy not to retire a man as long as it can be avoided prevails. Opinion seems to be about headquarters that a compromise will be effected by the retirement of about half a dozen, including Ord, Barnes, Meigs and Dunn.

THE Secretary of the Treasury has had his estimate book made out, to be submitted to Congress. He asks for an increase of salary for nearly all the officers in all the departments, to an amount about equal to the assessments made on them by the Republican party for election expenses in the late campaign. In this way he hopes to make Congress foot the corruption bill. Will Congress allow the estimates? "Not if the Court knows herself, and she sometimes thinks she does." Congress will be much more likely to reduce salaries to an amount equal to the Republican assessments. If the officers and clerks can afford to make a voluntary contribution to the Republican corruption fund of 25 per cent. of their salaries, it is apparent that they can stand a reduction of their salaries of 25 per cent., and a Democratic Congress should take care to make no larger allowance for salaries than these officers have shown they can afford to accept; and by no means should any increase of salary be allowed.

SAYS the Easton Star: "Since the cars have been running to Oxford the oyster business of that town has been steadily growing, and it now promises to be one of the leading oyster depots on the Chesapeake. There is a better class of oysters shucked than are found at either Cambridge or Crisfield, and they command a ready sale wherever they are introduced. The following firms are at present engaged in the oyster packing business at Oxford: William J. Crosbey & Co., 100 hands and 1,000 bushels per day; H. L. Clark & Co., 90 hands; Elliott & Co., 50 hands; John W. Todd, 30 hands; E. D. Sinclair, 40 hands; J. Crockett, 25 hands. There are other smaller concerns. There is ample room for many more oyster-houses at Oxford, and the supply is inexhaustible. Doubtless by another season the present number will be doubled. In a few years Oxford will rival Easton in business and population."

PRESIDENT HAYES was asked by a reporter of the Washington Post what impressions of Washington life he would carry away. He replied: "In the main very pleasant. The first two years were hard, as hard, perhaps, as any year of Lincoln's administration. I have said this frequently before and I still think so. The last two years have been as easy and pleasant as perhaps any President has enjoyed. In my case the sunshine has followed the storm and clouds."
